That we are unable to form any definite opinion as to the equity of the sentence under which the "Galvanic" has been declared lawful prize, not having before us the proceedings and evidence in the case, nor the protest of the master. We think there were circumstances of great suspicion attaching to her voyage, and probably sufficient evidence to warrant her condemnation, if the reasons recited in the sentence may be relied upon. But assuming that the "Galvanic" was carrying passengers to join the insurgents, and that such an employment of a neutral vessel would warrant her condemnation as lawful prize of war, we are of opinion that it would not justify criminal proceedings against the master and crew as "guilty of revolt," unless they are Spanish subjects, which we presume them not to be. Although, therefore, we should wish to reserve our final opinions as to the lawfulness of the sentence of condemnation until we may have an opportunity of perusing the proceedings, we consider that your Lordship may properly instruct Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Havana to transmit to General Dulce or to the proper authority a formal remonstrance against the proposal to try the master and

My Lord,
Temple, March 18, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 18th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an accompanying correspondence* which had since passed between the Department of the Foreign Office and the Colonial Office, relative to the question that has arisen as to the limits of Spanish jurisdiction off the coast of Cuba, and that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion upon this question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have considered the question referred to in the said letter, and have the honour to report—crew of the "Galvanic" criminally for taking part in the revolt. We have to observe that Consul Dunlop reports the vessel to have been captured in British waters; if this statement be correct it will be proper to remonstrate against the sentence, and to demand the restitution of the vessel. We suggest that further inquiry should be made upon this subject. With respect to the refusal to receive representations from the British Consulate, the Court of Admiralty acting judicially upon the evidence might be justified in declining to receive such representations, but the right to remonstrate with the Government, if the sentence be manifestly wrong, or if the vessel were captured by an invasion of British territory, or if British subjects be improperly put upon their trial, is undoubted, and Her Majesty's Government cannot permit it to be questioned.

That the cays on the north coast of Cuba, as laid down in the Chart of 1858, appear to us to come within the principle laid down by Lord Stowell in the case of the "Anna" (5 Ch: Robinson, p. 385), and that the Spanish right of jurisdiction extends to a distance of a marine league seawards from those cays, and over all the banks which may be inclosed within those cays and the mainland of Cuba. We should wish to reserve our opinion in regard to any other cays, as each group of cases may require to be separately considered.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 17.)

My Lord, Temple, April 17, 1869.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General at Havana, inclosing a copy of a Decree issued by General Dulce, with regard to vessels captured off the coast of that island, having on board men, arms, ammunition, or any article which could in any way contribute to the aid of the insurrection; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would favour your Lordship with my immediate opinion on that Decree.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That whatever warrant the Spanish authorities in Cuba may have in right of the territorial sovereignty to exclude from Spanish waters, under pain of death against the crews, all foreign vessels, which are laden with supplies calculated to promote or encourage the insurrection, there can be no doubt that it will be a glaring violation of the law of nations, if they capture any such vessel on the high seas and treat the crews as pirates.

I think your Lordship may properly lose no time in protesting against the enforcement of the edict against British vessels captured on the high seas, and may properly represent to the Spanish Government that Her Majesty's Government will regard with the deepest concern the enforcement of the edict against the crew of any British vessel captured within Spanish waters, where the crew had had no warning of its promulgation.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 19.)

My Lord, Temple, April 19, 1869.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence upon the subject of the capture by a Spanish man-of-war off Ragged Island, and, as is alleged, in British waters, and the subsequent condemnation by the Spanish Tribunal of an American vessel named the "Mary Lowell," laden with arms and munitions of war; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon, with the least possible delay.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That there can be no reasonable doubt, I think, upon the affidavits of the two pilots, that the "Mary Lowell" was within that distance of the south east point of Little Ragged Island when she was captured, which would place her within British waters, if Little Ragged Island is to be regarded as British territory. I see no grounds, as at present informed, for not considering Little Ragged Island as British territory, and measuring the extent of the maritime jurisdiction of the British Crown from the shores of that island. It is possible that the Spanish Captain in representing to Commander Phillimore that "the brig was eight miles from Ragged Island" when captured by the "Andaluza," has intended to speak of Great Ragged Island, as he seems at the same time to have stated that the hatches of the brig "were sealed by the authorities at Ragged Island," who must, I presume, be taken to be the Custom-house authorities at Great Ragged Island.

The telegram from Consul-General Dunlop, announces that the "Mary Lowell" has been condemned, against strong evidence, as "Prize taken on the high seas." It may, therefore, be advisable before Her Majesty's Consul-General is instructed by your Lordship to take any further steps, that he should obtain a copy of the proceedings before the Court. Meanwhile, it will be open to the Government of the United States to claim the restitution of the ship on the finding of the Court, "that she was captured on the High seas," inasmuch as the Proclamation of the Spanish Governor is an implicit negation of the existence of a state of war, which would entitle Spanish cruizers to exercise belligerent rights on the high seas against neutral vessels.

Temple, April 24, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a note which your Lordship has received from the United States' Minister at this Court in regard to the circumstances connected with the capture, on the 15th ultimo, by a Spanish steamer of war of an American brig called the "Mary Lowell," while lying within British jurisdiction off Ragged Island, one of the Bahamas; and to request that we would furnish your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion on that passage in Mr. Reverdy Johnson's note, in which he states that the United States' Government will look to that of Her Majesty for indemnification for any losses and injuries which citizens of the United States interested in the "Mary Lowell" may sustain, in consequence of the illegal seizure and condemnation of that vessel by the Spanish authorities.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there appears to have been a violation of British territory by Spain, for which reparation is due, primarily to this country, and this country is, on considerations of its own dignity and its relations of amity with the United States, bound to resent the violation in question, and to exact reparation for it. The extent of the reparation to be demanded is a question of common sense, and not of Law. The United States have reason to expect that the reparation we exact from Spain should be ample, and should include restitution of the ship, cargo, and crew, and a full indemnification to all who have been injured. This reparation, however (assuming that it might possibly become due in the event of our failing to take any steps to obtain redress from Spain), is not now due from ourselves to the United States, and until we fail in doing our best to obtain indemnification from Spain, no question of indemnification between us and the United States need arise or be discussed. It follows from this that the claim made by Mr. Reverdy Johnson in the passage of his despatch referred to us by your Lordship is, as we understand it, not warranted by any principle of International Law.

inclosing a letter from the United States' Minister at this Court relative to the capture, in British waters, by a Spanish cruizer, and to the subsequent condemnation by the Spanish authorities of the United States' vessel "Mary Lowell," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying copies of two despatches and their inclosures from the Governor of the Bahamas relative to that matter, and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration and inform your Lordship whether, under the circumstances stated therein, it seems necessary to await the sentence of the Prize Court, or whether the Spanish Government should not be at once called upon to grant redress for the violation of British territory.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

Ma Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th instant, stating that, with reference to reports of the 24th instant, respecting the proceedings of Spanish cruizers in the West Indies, he was directed to transmit to us the draft of a letter to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, stating the instructions which Her Majesty's Government consider might properly be issued for the guidance of Her Majesty's Naval Forces in that quarter, and to request that we would take the same into our immediate consideration and report to your Lordship our opinion as to whether the proposed instructions are right and proper. Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose, to be considered with the proposed instructions, a Proclamation issued by the Governor of Cuba, as transmitted to the Admiralty by Captain McCrea, of Her Majesty's ship "Favourite," in his accompanying despatch, and also to request our particular attention to the marginal observations of Mr. Childers in pages 9, 12, and 14.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the proposed instructions are, in substance, right and proper. We would suggest that for the expression "neutral vessels" occurring in page 10 and in subsequent parts of the draft of Mr. Hammond, "vessels under the flag of other nations," or words of similar import, should be substituted, because, strictly speaking, there are no neutrals where there are no belligerents. We think that the words "by force," suggested by Mr. Childers in pages 9 and 12 should be inserted. The question raised by Mr. Childers in his note to page 14 is one of more difficulty. We should have been disposed to advise that the forcible interference of our cruizers should not be extended to the rescuing of vessels captured out of their sight, but for the astounding character of the Proclamation of General Dulce, which authorizes Spanish cruizers to capture all vessels which may be passing near Cuba on the high seas with any goods on board which, in the opinion of the Spanish cruizer, "may in any way contribute to encourage the insurrection," a description which might (for example) apply to a cargo of corn; and further authorizes the immediate shooting of all persons found on board. We think that, so long as this Proclamation (to which the attention of the Spanish Government should be immediately called) remains in force, the further instruction suggested by the question of Mr. Childers would be justified, and we would suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, whether it might not be well to inform the Spanish Government that such instructions have been given and will be acted upon as long as General Dulce's Proclamation remains unrecalled.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 24th ultimo, in the case of the "Mary Lowell," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letters from the Admiralty, inclosing despatches from Captain McCrea of Her Majesty's ship "Favorite," the last of which contained a précis of the proceedings of the Prize Court at Havana, together with the sentence of the Court condemning the "Mary Lowell" as a lawful prize; and also inclosing copies of letters which Captain McCrea addressed to the Spanish Admiral; and of the despatches of the four seamen taken on board that vessel, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with a Report upon the justice of that condemnation.

The previous papers in this case were annexed for reference if required.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That we see no grounds for varying our opinion that the capture of the "Mary Lowell" took place within British waters. Temple, May 20, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that with reference to our Reports of the 6th instant and 24th and 29th ultimo, he was directed to transmit to us, for any observations we may have to make thereupon, the accompanying further correspondence relative to the seizure of the "Mary Lowell," and other proceedings of the Spanish authorities in the West Indies.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That as far as concerns the case of the "Mary Lowell" we have only to observe, that the additional papers sent to us tend to confirm our opinion of the illegality of her capture.

With respect to the complaint against Lieutenant Dacres, the nature of which does not very clearly appear, it does not seem to us necessary that any notice of it should be taken by Her Majesty's Government. The papers disclose that the Spaniards have captured the "Commanditorio" in British waters; have landed and pursued the crew in British territories, threatened British subjects, and plundered gardens and fields. It would appear from the letter of Captain McCrae, addressed to Admiral Malcampo, of the 20th April, 1869, that the Spanish Admiral admitted the landing and chasing the crew of the "Commanditorio."

It would further appear that General Dulce has made some demand for the extradition of accused persons, a demand for which there is no foundation.

A further allusion is made to "the forcible stoppage and search" of the British schooner "Elva," but we have not sufficient information to advise upon this matter. We have only to add the general observation, that the additional papers appear to us to strengthen the case for remonstrance with the Spanish Government to which we before advised your Lordship that the proceedings of General Dulce in our opinion gave rise.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter from Mr. Stokes of Doctors' Commons, dated the 8th instant, calling attention to the claim of the owners of the British vessel "Phillis and Mary," for damages for injuries sustained by a collision with the Spanish steam-frigate "Villa de Madrid."

That I should perceive from the papers noted in the margin* that this case was originally brought under the consideration of Her Majesty's Mission at Madrid, but that your Lordship considered it desirable that it should be brought directly under the notice of the Foreign Department.

That your Lordship apprehends that the course to be pursued in this matter should be the same as that recommended in the case of the collision between the "Meg Merrilees" and the "Estaphniah," the latter being a Portuguese vessel of war, which was referred for my opinion in a letter from the Foreign Office of the 24th of December last. But, that, before taking any steps in the matter, your Lordship would be glad to learn my opinion as to the course which should be pursued regarding it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That before your Lordship takes any steps to bring the claim of the owners of the "Phillis and Mary" to the attention of the Spanish Government, your Lordship may properly require Mr. Stokes to furnish your Lordship with the evidence upon which he proposes to rely, to establish the identity of the Spanish steam-frigate with the vessel which was in collision with the "Phillis and Mary." Mr. Stokes states in his letter of 8th May, 1869, that the identification of the colliding vessel was effected by Her Majesty's Consul at Cathagena, but he has not laid before your Lordship any certificate from Her Majesty's Consul to that effect, nor does he state how the identification was made, and it appears from the protest of the master and crew, that they are unable to say more than that the colliding vessel was "a large war steamer with painted ports."

No. 142.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 22.)

Temple, May 22, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 10th of December last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, from which we should perceive that the Spanish Government decline the proposal of Her Majesty's Government, that the case of the "Tornado" should be referred to a special Tribunal.

The previous correspondence on this subject was likewise inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would favour your Lordship, at our early convenience, with our opinion as to the course which should now be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the failure of the owners of the "Tornado," for reasons of their own (which appear to us as they seem to have appeared to our predecessors—wholly insufficient), to defend themselves on the merits before the Prize Tribunal of Cadiz, is not only a circumstance suspicious in itself, considering the strong primâ facie case which must be taken to exist against the "Tornado," but is also one which makes it very difficult for the English Government to take exception to the course adopted by the Council of State in confirming the decision of the Cadiz Court.

Even if, as may be the case, the owners expected to have an opportunity of defending themselves before the Council of State, yet having allowed judgment to go by default below, they cannot remonstrate with much force against a Court of Appeal (if it was such), allowing this fact to be decisive against them.

From the recent Report of the Council of State it should seem, however, that they might have appeared before the Council of State, and have defended themselves upon the merits; and there seems much ground to believe that they could not, in fact, have been ignorant of the form in which they were to present their reclamation and proofs before that Council.

The petition to the Minister of Marine and the letter to Sir John Crampton of Don Eusebio Casaes, appear to us, we must confess, to suggest the idea that he knew his proceeding was illusory, and that he was preparing to complain of not being heard instead of taking the proper steps to be heard; steps which the Council say were laid down clearly and explicitly in a Royal Order of July 27, 1867. This Order is not before us.

It is, therefore, to us in the highest degree doubtful, whether the owners bonâ fide intended to prosecute their appeal if they could have done so. It is certain that they made no defence at Cadiz, and we think the Government cannot interfere further without being first satisfied that the "Tornado" was unjustly condemned. On this we offer no opinion, but we share in the opinion of our predecessors, that for all that appears in these papers it may have been condemned most righteously.

We concur in what our predecessors have written on this subject, with the single exception, that we should not have advised an application to the Spanish Government to appoint a special Tribunal for the hearing of this case. The English Government would certainly not have listened to such an application from a foreign Power in similar circumstances.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.

---

I concur in the above Report with the exception of the last paragraph. Assuming the statement in the Report of the Council of State to be correct, that the owners of the "Tornado" might have appeared before that Council, and that they could not have been ignorant of the form in which they were to present their reclamations and proofs before it, I am of opinion that the Spanish Government has good grounds for declining the proposal of Her Majesty's Government that the case of the "Tornado" should be referred to a special Tribunal.

I concurred with the former Attorney-General and Solicitor-General in suggesting to your Lordship's predecessor that an application to that effect should be made to the Spanish Government on the faith of the representation of the owners of the "Tornado," that they had been precluded from appearing before the Council of State to defend themselves on the merits, by their inability, after careful inquiry, to ascertain the proper form of presenting their reclamations and proofs before that Council, for which representation on their part there now appears to be no foundation of truth, if full reliance is to be placed on the Report of the Council of State.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that with reference to our report respecting the case of the British steamer "Salvador" at Nassau, which is embodied in the inclosed copy of a letter to the Admiralty, by which Department the case was first brought to your Lordship's notice, he was directed to transmit to us a copy of a despatch from the Governor of Nassau, inclosing the report of the Attorney-General of the Colony on the case, the substance of which alone was contained in Captain McCrea's despatch, which was also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to state that, as the mail for the Bermudas is despatched this evening, your Lordship would be glad, if possible, to apprize Earl Granville in time to act upon the information by that opportunity, whether the reasons given by the Attorney-General in any way modify the opinion which we gave on the general tenour of his report given by Captain McCrea.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there appears to us evidence that some persons are (in the words of section 2 of the Foreign Enlistment Act) in one of Her Majesty's Colonies, procuring persons to be employed &c., in the service of the Cuban insurgents; and that the "Salvador" has on board some such persons (whether British subjects or not is immaterial) so procured, and who are departing from Her Majesty's dominions with the intent of enlisting &c. (within section 5). Of course an information to this effect would be required, but an information could be obtained if the authorities at Nassau are in earnest. In such cases some responsibility and some risk of failure to establish a legal case must be incurred. We continue to be of opinion that the vessel should be detained.

The Solicitor-General entirely concurs in the inclosed report; but he desires to add for himself (being unable for want of time and because of the Attorney-General's engagement in the House of Commons, to consult him and the Queen's Advocate) that in his opinion the warlike force of the vessel having been, as he understands, augmented, there is quite sufficient reasons for detaining her by an act of State Sovereignty, even independently of the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act. The ship, if an armed ship, augmenting her force in British waters belongs to persons who break our law. In such a case, I am of opinion that acts of Sovereign force are justifiable to detain the vessel.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 29th of April and other Reports upon the subject of the proceedings of the Spanish Authorities in the West Indies, he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid (No. 157), inclosing the answer of the Spanish Government to the Note which, by your Lordship's instructions, he addressed to Señor Lorenzana upon the subject of General Dulce's decree of the 24th March; and he was pleased to request that we should take the same into consideration and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are not aware of the precise nature of the information said to have been conveyed to your Lordship by the Spanish Government as to the instructions transmitted to General Dulce on the 28th April, but it appears that his Proclamation is still in force, and that the Spanish Government have, in a great measure, left it to his discretion how far it is to be acted upon. Under these circumstances, we do not think that the Spanish Government can properly call upon Her Majesty's Government to withdraw the instructions they have sent to the British officers in the Bahamas and the seas adjoining.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 9.)

Temple, June 8, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 22nd ultimo upon the claim of the owners of the "Phillis and Mary" for compensation for injuries sustained by a collision with another vessel, presumed to be the Spanish steam frigate "Villa de Madrid," he was directed to transmit to me a letter from Mr. Stokes, dated the 28th ultimo, containing the evidence upon which he relies to establish the identity of the colliding vessel; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether this evidence is sufficient to justify your Lordship in bringing the claim to the notice of the Spanish Government, and if so, that your Lordship would be glad to be advised as to the course which should be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I have felt some difficulty in this case from the doubt which may be reasonably entertained upon reading the protest of the master and crew of the "Phillis and Mary," made shortly after the collision, whether their statement makes out such a primâ facie case of wrong against the Spanish war vessel as would justify your Lordship in proposing to the Spanish Government to allow the claim of the owners of the British vessel to be referred to the Judge of the High Court of Admiralty for his friendly arbitration. In the case of the "Prinz Frederick" (2 Dodson, p. 451), which is the leading case on the subject of such arbitration, the Swedish war vessel had been brought by the salvors into a British port, so that the High Court of Admiralty of England was the proper forum for the salvors to proceed in, and a warrant of arrest was, in fact, taken out against the vessel; but, from considerations of comity towards a public ship of a friendly nation, the Judge held that he ought not to allow the civil action to proceed, and thereupon the matter was, by consent, referred to his friendly arbitration. In the present case, as the Spanish vessel has never been within British jurisdiction since the collision, there does not appear to me to be any sufficient reason why the owners of the British vessel should not be required to observe the well-known principle of jurisprudence expressed in the maxim "Actor sequitur forum rei." The letter of Lloyd's agent, which has been supplied by Mr. Stokes, raises, I consider, a presumption that the "Villa de Madrid" was the vessel which was in collision with the "Phillis and Mary" on the 29th November last, sufficient at least to warrant your Lordship in authorizing Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid to bring the complaint of the owners of the "Phillis and Mary" to the attention of the Spanish Government; and, inasmuch as that Government has acceded to the Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea (XI Hertslet, p. 1,089), Her Majesty's Minister may, I think, be properly instructed by your Lordship to ask that Government to designate a tribunal, whether it be that of a Judge or Arbitrator, before which the owners of the British vessel may have an opportunity of submitting the question whether on the occasion of the collision those regulations were duly observed by the Spanish vessel.

Temple, June 16, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from the Admiralty, dated the 14th instant, inclosing a copy of a despatch from Commodore Phillimore, in which that officer reported that he had been informed by the Spanish authorities in the West Indies that a British subject is not entitled, of right, to ask for the presence of a sworn interpreter or Consular Officer during his trial before a Spanish Court of Justice; and that he was to request that we would take the same into our immediate consideration, and at our earliest convenience report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we do not think that Her Majesty's Government can claim, as an essential to justice, that a licensed Interpreter or Consular Officer from the British Consulate shall be allowed to attend on occasions of a British subject being tried before a Court of Justice in Cuba. We consider that a British subject, if he cannot understand Spanish, ought to be allowed the advantage of an interpreter, if he is to be tried for his life, and that in questions of prize, British witnesses ought to be allowed the assistance of an interpreter, but we consider that justice will be satisfied on such occasions if they have the services of a sworn interpreter approved by the Court.

That no interpreter should be allowed to be present on any such occasion would, in our opinion, make the sentence of any foreign tribunal so arrived at a nullity in an English Court, as being contrary to the substance of justice.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 19.)

Temple, June 19, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are favoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th May last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, upon the subject of the claim of the crew of the "Tornado" for compensation for their detention and alleged ill-treatment by the Spanish authorities, and further stating that the papers relating to the question were included in the collection forwarded to us with his letter of the 12th May upon the subject of the condemnation of the "Tornado;" and that he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our early convenience, with our opinion as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should pursue in regard to the claims of the crew and the widow of John McPherson.

We are also favoured with a note from Mr. Hammond, dated the 27th of May last, stating that, with reference to our observation in our report of the 22nd May on the case of the "Tornado," that the Royal Order of the 27th July, 1867, was not before us, he was directed by your Lordship to suggest that Inclosure No. 2 in Sir J. Crampton's despatch of the 25th August, 1857, contained the substance of the Order referred to.

We are also favoured with a further note from Mr. Hammond, dated the 31st day of May, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith Sir John Crampton's despatch, No. 136, of the 9th May, inclosing the final report of the Council of State with regard to the "Tornado," which was not among the papers then under our consideration with regard to the claim of the crew of that vessel, and further stating that the papers, a copy of which was inclosed, had not been laid before Parliament, and was the first paper referred to at the conclusion of the report, and that the second paper, viz., the report of the Council of the 11th July, 1868, would be found at page 32, Part I, Parliamentary Papers of 1869.

We are also favoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that, with reference to our report of the 22nd May last on the refusal of the Spanish Government to accede to the proposal of Her Majesty's Government that the case of the "Tornado" should be referred to a Spanish tribunal, he was directed by your Lordship to inform us that before Her Majesty's Government came to any final decision on the matter your Lordship considered it advisable to furnish Messrs. Isaac Campbell and Co. and Messrs. Forbes Campbell with a copy of the report of the Council of State for any further observations they might desire to submit, and more specifically as to the allegations of the Spanish Government that the owners had not availed themselves of the opportunities afforded them for obtaining a hearing; and further stating that he was to transmit to us therewith the replies returned by those gentlemen, and to request that the case, being now apparently closed, we would consider all the circumstances of it as set forth in the papers, and in those already before us, and report to your Lordship as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should now pursue with respect, not only to the condemnation of the vessel, but also to the claims of the commander and crew which formed the specific subject of the reference then under consideration.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have considered all the circumstances of this case as set forth in the papers before us, and we have the honour to report—

That the Attorney-General is of opinion, that although the proceedings of the Spanish Tribunals have been extremely dilatory, and in many respects objectionable and unsatisfactory, he does not, on the whole, think that there has been such a denial of justice as would authorize Her Majesty's Government to disregard the sentence of condemnation, and to demand the restitution of the "Tornado." The Attorney-General thinks it impossible to say that there was not some evidence in which a Court would be justified in coming to the conclusion that the vessel was, to say the least, contraband of war, one of the grounds on which her condemnation is based. The Attorney-General, therefore, adheres to the opinion on the subject which the Law Officers had the honour before to express to your Lordship.

The question relating to the treatment of the crew is a different one; and the Attorney-General cannot accede to the proposition of General Calorege, that "it is an admitted principle that once a vessel is declared to be good prize, neither the owners nor the crew can lay claim to any kind of indemnity."

This doctrine, if adopted in its breadth, would justify, or at least place beyond redress, any ill-usage of a crew carrying contraband, and would reverse the well-known rule of international law, that persons carrying contraband are not to be treated as criminals, or punished. See 1 Kent, page 158 (10th edition), Opinions of Attorney-General, vol. i., page 62.

The impression left on the Attorney-General's mind by a perusal of the whole of the papers is, that making allowance for some exaggeration, the crew were subject to much unnecessary violence and ill-usage at the time of their capture, and during their detention on board the "Gerona;" but that, after being brought on shore, they had not much to complain of, except the length of their detention. The Spanish Government at first sought to justify the detention on the ground of their being wanted as witnesses. (See Letter of General Calorege, November 21, 1866, of M. de Rubalcana, December 11, 1866, &c). They now put forward a different ground of justification, viz., that the crew were detained as prisoners of war; and this change would seem to indicate that the Spanish Government do not feel much confidence in being able to justify the length of their detention, on the ground originally adopted. The claim to treat them as prisoners of war is now justified for these reasons, viz., "that they were actually engaged in the military service of Chili, while all were acting in open hostility to Spain." (Memorandum Inclosure 2, in paper No. 2 of 1869).

The Attorney-General is desirable to discover in the papers any evidence of the truth of these allegations. With the exception of McPherson (on whose behalf no claim for the consideration of Her Majesty's Government appears to be maintainable), the Attorney-General is not aware of any evidence of the crew having enlisted in the Chilian service; it is certain that they, as well as the vessel were, at the time of the capture, unarmed, and neither committing, nor capable of committing, actual or open hostility: the number of the crew, the state of the vessel, and other considerations, point to the extreme improbability, if not impossibility, of her having been intended to commit hostilities, until the then voyage should have ended, and she had been commissioned and equipped in Chili.

It may be that the information which Mr. Thompson forwarded to Lord Stanley from Santiago was correct, "that Messrs. Isaac and Co. had agreed deliver the 'Tornado' to the Chilian Government at a Chilian port, for a sum agreed on." It was part, indeed, of Mr. Thompson's information, that "the real port of her destination was carefully concealed" from all on board except McPherson; but even if this were not so, and the crew knew that they were engaged in a contraband adventure, which the Attorney-General thinks probable, still the Attorney is of opinion that the Spanish Government would not be entitled to treat them as prisoners of war.

On these grounds, and having regard also to the consideration that the Spanish Government, when they may be presumed to have known their own case, did not claim to treat the crew as prisoners of war, and that probably, if they had made such a claim, Lord Stanley would peremptorily have insisted on their immediate release, the Attorney-General is of opinion that Her Majesty's Government are entitled to dispute the claim now set up by the Spanish Government to justify either the unnecessary violence used to them, or the length of time for which they were detained on the plea of their being prisoners of war. The Attorney-General is of opinion, that their treatment at the time of capture affords strong ground of complaint. It should be borne in mind, that the duty of peaceful submission to belligerent capture, which is inculcated by civilized Governments upon their subjects, is based upon the understanding that no unnecessary hardship or severity will be inflicted by the captors; and it is for Her Majesty's Government to consider whether Spain should be allowed to violate this understanding without remonstrance. The length of time for which the crew were detained, which appears on the whole to have exceeded all reasonable limits, on the supposition of their being detained merely as witnesses, appears to the Attorney-General to furnish an additional, though not perhaps an equally, strong ground of complaint.

Whether or not having regard to all the circumstances, and to the state of our relations with Spain, a specific claim for indemnity should be made, and insisted on, is a question of policy to be determined by Her Majesty's Governmeut.

The Solicitor-General desires, for himself, to add to the above Report, that he does not entirely concur in the concluding portions of it. He is not prepared to advise Her Majesty's Government that there is any claim for compensation even to the crew of the "Tornado," which could be fairly and properly enforced against Spain. It appears to him, that there is reasonable ground for treating them as prisoners of war; and although in the earlier stages of the business, another and different ground for the detention was put forward, it does not seem to the Solicitor-General that Spain is precluded from taking this ground, if there is good reason for her doing so, now that all the circumstances are known. If so, although there may be matter for remonstrance as to the excessive rigour with which (if their story be true), the crew were treated before they came on shore, there is matter for nothing more. Even on this subject it is to be remembered, that it is perhaps hardly reasonable to treat the ex parte statements of the crew as absolutely correct. There is every probability that they knew the character of the ship. and the extent of the risk they ran; and they were taken under circumstances to account for much exasperation in the mind of the Spaniards. But even if they did not know what they were about, which may be the case, still their remedy, if any, is against those who deceived them when they entered on board the vessel; and not against the foreign Government which captured it; which now gives at any rate very grave reasons to show that it was a ship of war, and if so, that its crew were prisoners of war, and might be treated as such.

The Queen's Advocate desires to say, that he concurs with the Solicitor-General in his reservation, and that he is of opinion that Her Majesty's Government cannot, under the circumstances, proparly claim any indemnity for the crew of the "Tornado" from the Spanish Government.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that, with reference to our various recent Reports on the proceedings of the Spanish authorities in British waters in the West Indies, and, especially, to our Report of the 24th of April, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for any observations we might have to make thereon, an accompanying copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid, inclosing a translation of the answer of the Spanish Government to the representation which Sir John Crampton made to them on the subject, by your Lordship's direction, on the 1st ultimo.

The previous papers were therewith inclosed, together with some subsequent correspondence, showing the steps which have been taken to prevent an improper use being made of British territory by the Cuban insurgents.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it is not easy in the present state of the evidence to say for certain what are the exact facts as to the conduct of the Spanish ships. Laxity, as we have already intimated, does appear to have prevailed at the Bahamas, and it is possible that the Spanish Government may have cause of complaint. The Spanish Minister should be asked, however, to be more specific in his statements in this matter; but we think the Governor of the Bahamas should be warned to be on his guard against any connivance on the part of the inferior officials of the Bahamas, with breaches of the Foreign Enlistment Act.

The reply of the Spanish Minister, however, is very unsatisfactory. Specific charges of acts of violence committed by Spain within British jurisdiction are not met by general and vague charges against British officials. These definite and specific charges the Spanish Minister passes by or disregards, nor does he make any allusion to the Proclamation of General Dulce, and we think your Lordship may properly, if you think fit, call his serious attention to these charges, requiring, in our opinion, a definite and specific answer on the part of Spain, telling him at the same time, if your Lordship pleases, that no time will be lost in prosecuting inquiries as to the matters complained of by way of recrimination in his despatch, as soon as he will point out specifically and in detail the precise act or omission of duty of which he thinks he has a right to complain.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 1st and 3rd instant respecting the case of the British steamer "Salvador" at Nassau, which, with the papers relating to the matter, were also transmitted to us for convenience of reference, he was directed to transmit to us a copy of a despatch from Captain McCrea, of Her Majesty's ship "Favorite," to the Secretary of the Admiralty, reporting that the "Salvador" had been seized on her return to Nassau under the Foreign Enlistment Act, and that an action had been commenced against the Receiver-General and Captain McCrea on account of that seizure; and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take this matter into immediate consideration and report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon. Some further letters from the Admiralty and Colonial Office were also transmitted.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think the proceedings against the "Salvador" may be sustained under the 6th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act. In the present state of the evidence we do not feel sure that the "Salvador" falls also under the operation of section 7, but we think it very likely that, in the result, the opinion of the Attorney-General of the Colony may prove to be sound.

As to the action against the Receiver-General and Captain McCrea, mentioned in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th, we think that your Lordship may properly advise that they should be defended or, at least, indemnified by the Government.

We think it our duty to inform your Lordship that, after perusing these papers, it appears that the embarkation of Cubans on board the "Salvador," and the escape of that vessel, shows, beyond a doubt, that the English law has been publicly defied in the Bahamas, under circumstances of great aggravation, and without any effective measures being taken betimes by the authorities of the place to prevent or punish the offenders. This has happened also in a manner justly calculated to arouse the suspicions of the Spaniards as to the good faith, as well as the vigour, of the local officials.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 16th instant, with regard to the right of a British subject to ask for a sworn interpreter or Consular Officer when on trial before a Court of Justice in Cuba, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an accompanying draft of an instruction, founded on our opinion, which your Lordship proposed to address to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid; and, that he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration and inform your Lordship whether it is right and proper.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the accompanying draft instruction into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That we are not disposed to think that your Lordship could properly object to a sworn interpreter appointed by the Court on the ground of his being an officer of the Court, and, therefore, having an interest in its proceedings; but we think that a Government interpreter, if Consul March means by that expression an official of the Executive Government, could hardly give the same security for impartial interpretation to a prisoner as an interpreter of the Court, and may fairly be objected to on that ground.

My Lord, Temple, June 28, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 20th ultimo, and to previous Reports on the case of the seizure of the "Mary Lowell," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General in the Havanna, inclosing copies of further evidence in the case which he had received from His Excellency Governor Sir James Walker, and also to forward to us an accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, with a copy of a despatch from the Governor of the Bahamas, covering a letter from Commodore Phillimore, stating his opinion as to the position of the "Mary Lowell" at the time of capture, and as to the justice of the decision of the Cuban Prize Court, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

The previous papers were sent herewith for convenience of reference.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Mr. Hammond of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith two letters from the Board of Admiralty respecting this case, and to request that we would take them into our immediate consideration, together with the papers already before us, and report our opinion at our earliest convenience to your Lordship, as to the course now to be pursued.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we have hitherto not troubled your Lordship with any observations on these papers, as we understood that delay was desired by your Lordship. As we now understand that our opinion is desired, we report as follows:—

It is highly probable that Commodore Phillimore has arrived at sound conclusions upon the facts of the case; but we apprehend that the duty of Her Majesty's Government is not to go into any other question or consideration, but the simple matter of fact whether or not the "Mary Lowell" was or was not captured within British waters, and to act accordingly. We do not think that the capture was complete when the ship was hailed. A chase may not be pursued into neutral territory, and the real question is whether armed violence has been used within Her Majesty's jurisdiction by a Spanish man-of-war. The case, however, has materially altered its aspect since the first papers connected with it arrived in this country, and it would not be proper to proceed to further action against Spain, until certain points are made more clear than they can be said to be on the evidence at present.

We venture to suggest that the Admiralty should request Commodore Phillimore to report in full, and with reasons for his conclusions, upon the following matters, marking the charts to illustrate his answers:—

a. The respective distances of the "Mary Lowell," and the Spanish ship from the shore at the time when the Spaniard hailed the "Mary Lowell," and lowered a boat.

b. The Spaniard ranged alongside.

c. The sails were lowered, and the colours hauled down.

d. The vessel was boarded and the crew secured.

It may be proper, when Commodore Phillimore's Report is received, to place it, together with the evidence, in the hands of the United States' Government, explaining to them the aspect now assumed by the case of the "Mary Lowell," and requesting them to furnish the English Government with any comments thereupon, which they may think desirable. But this question, perhaps, will more properly arise for consideration, after the Report of Commodore Phillimore has been received here.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into our consideration, and we have the honour to report—

That we think it very likely that the "Mary Lowell" may prove in the result to have been properly captured.

We have, however, expressed in a report upon some papers sent to us earlier our views as to certain specific information on matters of fact to be obtained, if possible, from Commodore Phillimore. To those views we adhere. The case should be thoroughly sifted in point of fact because we have at least moral responsibilities to the Government of the United States, and though this country might well leave the matter where it is as far as our own interests are concerned, we are bound to the United States to leave nothing undone to ascertain the facts. This, if your Lordship thinks fit, might be explained to the Spanish Government, and the reason pointed out to them why in a matter which does not directly or immediately concern this country we are bound to be particularly vigilant.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence relative to the arrest and ill-treatment by the authorities in Cuba of two British subjects, Mr. Kelly and Mr. Fergusson, and to request that I would take the same into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion upon these cases.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it seems open to some doubt, whether the ostensible authorities are in fact the real authorities at the present moment in the Island of Cuba, even in places where the authority of the Crown is maintained, but this circumstance would not in my opinion relieve the Spanish Government from the obligation to make compensation to Mr Fergusson and Mr. Kelly for the unmerited personal sufferings to which they have been exposed, whether it be from the malice or from the feebleness of the ostensible authorities at Manzanillo, and at Santiago. I observe that Mr. Ffrench in his despatch to the Spanish Minister of State has confined his observations to the personal ill-treatment to which the two British subjects have been exposed. If I may venture to express an opinion, I consider that the course which he has adopted is judicious, as the claim of Mr. Fergusson for compensation from the Spanish Government for the destruction of his property on the estate of Don F. Vicente Aguilera is not free from difficulty, for it appears that Don Vicente himself was one of the principal leaders of the insurgents, and the property was plundered or destroyed in a sally made by the garrison of the town against the insurgents.

Mr. Hammond was pleased further to say, that the previous papers relating to the case were likewise annexed,* and that he was to request that we would take them into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Mr. Thompson's memorial.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it would appear, from the papers submitted to us, that the "Jeff Davis" was seized within Spanish waters for a breach of Spanish law by receiving on board Spanish subjects, as passengers, without the documents required by Spanish law.

If the statement of Admiral Malecampo on this point be correct, and it probably is so, we are of opinion that the owner of the "Jeff Davis" is not entitled to ask the Spanish Government for compensation for any losses incurred by him from the detention of his vessel by the Spanish authorities at Caibarien.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 13.)

Temple, July 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports respecting the case of the "Salvador," he was directed to state to us, that the board of Admiralty having suggested in a letter dated June 12, that it might be advisable to send a Circular to Governors and Naval Officers on the subject, your Lordship, on the 15th ultimo, recommended to that Department, and to the Colonial Office, that the attention of the officers named should be called to that case, and to the opinions given by the Law Officers in regard to it. That the Admiralty accordingly prepared a draft instruction to Naval Commanders, and communicated it to the Foreign Office and to the Colonial Office on the 19th ultimo. That they were informed in reply, on the 21st ultimo, that your Lordship concurred in the proposed Circular, and a communication to the same effect was made to the Colonial Office. That, on the 29th ultimo, two letters were received from the Colonial Office, the first stating, in reply to Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th ultimo, doubts as to the expediency of sending instructions to the Colonial Governors founded on our Reports, but expressing Earl Granville's readiness to send such definite instructions to them respecting the state of the law, and the extent of their powers, as your Lordship might consider advisable; the second taking exception to the terms of the Admiralty draft Circular, and suggesting that they should be made more explicit. That similar communications seem, from the two letters of the Admiralty of the 30th ultimo, to have been sent to that Department by the Colonial Office, and that the Board of Admiralty now suggest that the draft Circular should be referred for our consideration, and call attention to the opinion of the Colonial Office, that the exact state of the law as to the detention and seizure of vessels laden with arms and munitions of war should be defined.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to transmit the whole of the correspondence in regard to the case of the "Salvador," and, with it, a further letter from the Admiralty requesting your Lordship's judgment on the whole case; and he was to request that we would take the various matters connected with this case into our consideration, and report our opinion as to the manner in which your Lordship's replies should be framed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think the proposed Circular is open to objection, and that the criticisms upon it, in the letter addressed to the Foreign Office from the Colonial Office of June 29, 1869, are, speaking generally, well founded. Before any Circular is issued, a short statement ought, we think, to be drawn up, as to the powers of the Executive in various cases under the Foreign Enlistment Act; this statement to be the basis on which the Circular is to be composed. The preparation of such a statement would require some time and a good deal of care, but we think it would not be advisable to issue a Circular letter of instructions without making it, as far as possible, exhaustive.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid, respecting an application which has been made to him by Mr. William White, a British subject, for assistance to obtain the restitution of his daughter from the custody of his wife, from whom he is separated, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and inform your Lordship what instruction should be given to Mr. Ffrench on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. William White should be informed that his proper course of proceeding will be to apply to the Magisterial or Judicial authorities at Seville, whichever may be the competent authorities under the Law of Spain, to enforce the restitution of his daughter, and that Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires cannot intervene on his behalf in the present stage of the case. At the same time Her Majesty's Consul at Seville should be instructed to give him any necessary assistance to bring his complaint properly before the local authorities of that place.

Temple, July 15, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd July instant, stating that, with reference to his other letter of that date respecting the case of the "Galvanic," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Mr. Thornton (No. 231) inclosing correspondence with the American Government respecting the case of G. G. Curbelo, a citizen of the United States, who appeared to have been on board that vessel at the time of capture; and to request that we would take the case into consideration, more especially as regards Mr. Fish's statement as to whether Flag gives protection to persons as well as property on board a neutral vessel, and that we would report our opinion to your Lordship as to the manner in which the matter should be dealt with.

Galvanic

Blockade

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we do not find the protest of the master among the papers, and have little further information as to the circumstances of the capture of the "Galvanic" than was before us when we made our former report. We assume that the vessel was captured on the high seas after many hours' chase, at a considerable distance from the Spanish coast, beyond any extended jurisdiction over and above three miles from the coast, which is exercised by some nations (ourselves among the number) for the purpose of enforcing laws of revenue and customs, and generally conceded to them by comity, though not acknowledged as a right. Assuming these facts, the question arises, By what right was the vessel captured?

The Cuban insurgents have not been declared or recognized as belligerents; they are not in actual possession (as far as we are aware) of any ports; no blockade has been proclaimed by Spain. Under these circumstances the Spanish Government are entitled to prohibit foreign ships entering their ports, possibly to capture such as disregard the prohibition, and to deal with those on board them by the Spanish Municipal Law; but we are of opinion that they are not entitled to pursue vessels beyond the limits of their local jurisdiction, and to exercise the belligerent right of capture on the high seas. It follows that the capture of the "Galvanic" was not warranted by International Law, and that we have a strict right to require her restitution, and the restoration of all persons on board her. Having regard, however, to the character of the vessel, to the fact of her having previously landed a cargo of arms and ammunition, and to the strong suspicion (to say the least) of her being engaged, when captured, in an adventure prohibited by Spanish Law and by the Foreign Enlistment Act, it is for Her Majesty's Government to determine whether, under the circumstances, it is expedient to insist against Spain on our extreme rights.

Closing Ports

We understand the English crew to have been surrendered up and taken to Jamaica, but the letter of Mr. Fish of June 22, represents an American citizen, described as a passenger, to have been sent to Spain, and to be still imprisoned.

We suggest that, on considerations of comity towards the United States, Her Majesty's Government should, if satisfied of the correctness of Mr. Fish's statement of facts, require the immediate release of this American citizen.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 28th July, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a note, with translation, from the Spanish Chargé d'Affaires at that Court, dated the 25th ultimo, drawing the attention of Her Majesty's Government, by direction of his Government, to the case of the American steamer "Peril," which vessel, it appeared, though strongly suspected of being in the service of the insurgents in Cuba, was permitted to enter Port Royal, in Jamaica, for the purpose of coaling, the Governor of that island stating that he was unable to prevent her so doing; and further stating that he was to request that we would take the Marquis de Moral's note, together with the accompanying correspondence between the Colonial Office and the Foreign Department on the same subject,* into our consideration, and advise your Lordship upon the answer which you should return to the Spanish Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may, in our opinion, properly return an answer to the despatch of the Marquis del Moral to the following effect:—

"That it is the opinion of Her Majesty's Goverdment that the circumstances of the American steamer 'Peril' having been guilty of a violation of Spanish law, however flagrant, previous to her arrival at Port Royal, if it had been made known to the Governor of that island in time, would not have justified him in preventing the vessel from touching at Port Royal on her way to New York, and taking coals on board. That however desirous Her Majesty's Government may be to maintain the relations of friendship which exist between Spain and Great Britain, they cannot overlook their duties towards the flag of other nations, and they must with regret decline to comply with the request of the Spanish Chargé d'Affaires."

No. 163.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received August 6.)

Temple, August 5, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Otway's letter of the 27th July last, stating that he was directed to transmit to us an accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General at the Havana (No. 75, July 10, 1869), inclosing an official copy and a translation of a new Proclamation which had been issued by the Captain-General of Cuba, and which took the place of the edict of General Dulce of the 24th of March last, which is now abrogated; and he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship at our early convenience with our opinion on the present Decree.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, with respect to so much of Article I as declares that "vessels attempting to enter the ports which are closed, or to communicate with the coast, will be chased, and if captured will be tried," &c., we have to observe that the right of chase and capture of the Spanish Government is confined to their own territorial limits, viz., three miles from the shore, and that it may be well (to prevent misapprehension) that they should be informed that Her Majesty's Government cannot permit that any British vessel, even if she should have violated the Spanish regulations, should be chased and captured on the high seas.

With respect to Article III we have to observe that the claim to treat vessels carrying contraband of war (whether military persons or otherwise) as enemy's ships, and consequently to treat their crews as enemies, i.e., as prisoners of war, is not supported by any recognized rule of international law. The carrying of this species of contraband may, indeed, under conceivable circumstances, be strong, possibly conclusive, evidence of the ship carrying them being an enemy's ship, but the terms of this Article would authorize the Spanish Government to treat as prisoners of war the crew of a British ship on board which a single Cuban insurgent might be found, without any other evidence of her hostile character; in such a case the utmost to which Her Majesty's Government could be called upon to submit would be the confiscation of the ship; they could not submit to the crew being treated as prisoners of war.

Subject to these observations we do not consider that the five first Articles of the Proclamation call for any remonstrance on the part of Her Majesty's Government as regards their primâ facie purport. Much, however, will depend upon the application of them, and Her Majesty's Consul-General may be properly instructed to report to your Lordship from time to time upon any case in which proceedings may be instituted against any British subject or any British vessel under any of those Articles.

* Colonial Office, June 25; to Colonial Office, June 28, 1869.

With regard to the allusion in the VIth Article to the rights of search under the Treaty of 1835 with Great Britain, we are at a loss to understand how the rights of search conceded under that Treaty can be applicable to the cases contemplated in the Proclamation. As far as we understand that Treaty, rights of search are only conceded in regard to vessels which "may, upon reasonable grounds, be suspected of being engaged in the traffic of slaves, or of having been fitted out for that purpose, or of having, during the voyage on which they are met by the said cruizers, been engaged in the traffic of slaves, contrary to the provisions of the Treaty." (4 Hertslet, p. 441, Article X of Treaty of June 28, 1835.)

We think your Lordship may properly instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid to ask for some explanation as to the intention of this Article, as, if it is intended thereby to authorize cruizers to search British vessels on the high seas under any of the conditions of suspicion specified in the Treaty, mutatis mutandis, as regards aid or supplies furnished to the insurgents, the Article may be open to grave objection.

No. 164.

The Queen's Advocate to Mr. Spring Rice.—(Received August 21.)

Temple, August 20, 1869.

My dear Sir,

PERHAPS the substitution of the word "might" for "may" would show more clearly that the observation of the Law Officers was intended to be general, and not to point to the existing state of things, whatever that may be, in Cuba; and the insertion of the words "where war exists" after the words "under conceivable circumstances" would render this more clear. It was the intention of the Law Officers to call Lord Clarendon's attention to the circumstance that, even in time of war, not every carrying of enemies on board a neutral vessel would expose its crew to be treated as enemies, although, under conceivable circumstances, it might work that effect, whereas, under the Proclamation, every conveyance of individuals in the service of the insurrection is to expose the crew as well as the vessel to be adjudged as enemies.

The terms "hostile," "contraband," "enemies," all point to a state of war, although the word "war" itself is not in Article III. The word, however, does occur in Article V: "armed for war." At the same time, unless the Spanish cruizers attempt to give effect to the Proclamation on the high seas, no question of belligerent right need arise.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence as marked in the margin,* upon the subject of a case lately forwarded from Belgium to Liverpool by the steamer "Gannet," containing an implement of war, which was alleged to be intended for the use of parties in insurrection against the Spanish Government.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to state that we should learn from the papers that the case in question was at present detained by the Customs authorities at Liverpool, and he was to request that we would favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the steps which should now be taken in regard thereto.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are not aware of any law under which, in the absence of a Proclamation or Order in Council prohibiting the export of arms, the Customs authorities at Liverpool would be authorized to prevent the exportation of the instrument in question on the ground of a suspected ultimate destination to the insurgents in Cuba.

We think, however, as the package has been reported incorrectly, the Custom-house authorities may detain it until it is claimed, and they are satisfied that it is to be shipped for exportation, and what vessel. But this is probably in excess of the legal powers of the Government, and is to be justified, if at all, only as an act of courtesy to a friendly nation.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd September ultimo, stating that, with reference to that part of our Report to the Colonial Office of the 6th ultimo, a copy of which has been communicated to the Foreign Office, in which we drew the attention of Her Majesty's Government to the fact of the capture of "La Have" by the Spanish ships of war on the high seas, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for any observations we might have to offer thereupon, a further despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid, inclosing a copy and translation of a note addressed to him by the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs justifying the capture of the vessel.

Mr. Hammond likewise inclosed, together with the former papers, a letter from the Admiralty, with a report from Commodore Phillimore containing further information in this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have perused the papers submitted to us, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that your Lordship is not called upon to take any further step in this matter. We consider that this is not a case in which any damages can now be properly claimed, and that as Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires has formally notified to the Spanish Government the view with which Her Majesty's Government entertains as to the illegality of the capture, your Lordship has sufficiently guarded yourself against the case being invoked on any future occasion by the Spanish Government as a precedent to justify captures made in time of peace on the high seas.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears that the cases containing arms have been duly reshipped on board the "Alar," we are of opinion that the Collector at Falmouth will not be justified in withholding clearance to that vessel by reason of the character of her cargo. My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd September last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, dated the 20th ultimo, inclosing copies of a letter and its inclosures from the Governor of the Bahamas, with reference to a request made to him by the Spanish Consul at Nassau to issue a proclamation, similar to that of the Governor of Jamaica, prohibiting the exportation of arms and munitions of war from that island; and he was to request that we would take this matter into our consideration, and inform your Lordship whether, in our opinion, it would be advisable to direct the Governor of the Bahamas to procure, if possible, the passing of a Law to prevent the exportation of contraband of war from that Colony.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the question referred to us by your Lordship involves, in our opinion, considerations of policy as well as of law; but, assuming Her Majesty's Government to consider that on grounds of policy no objection can arise, we are of opinion that it would be advisable, in point of law, that there should be conformity in the legislation of Colonies in such close vicinity to each other as Jamaica and the Bahamas, and that the Governor of the Bahamas may be properly instructed to procure the passing of a Law to give him like powers of preventing the exportation of arms, ammunition, &c., from that Colony to those which it appears that the Governor of Jamaica has been authorized by the legislation of that island to exercise in regard to Jamaica.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st September, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 28th and 29th of June last, upon the case of the "Mary Lowell," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed letters from the Board of Admiralty, as marked in the margin*, containing Reports from Commodore Phillimore, with answers to the specific questions put in our Reports above referred to; and he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the case as it now stands.

The former papers were annexed for reference, if required.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that there are sufficient materials before your Lordship for determining the course which Her Majesty's Government should take in this case. We think that nothing turns upon the "Mary Lowell" being in charge of a British Custom-house officer, as it appears that Mr. Wilson, who was in charge of her, had ceased for the time to have any connection with Her Majesty's Customs, and was, in fact, acting-master of her. We consider that the question is purely one of territorial right on the part of Her Majesty's Government to protect the "Mary Lowell" from capture, and that the question of right depends entirely upon the place where the capture of the "Mary Lowell" was effected. We would observe, however, that the claim of territory is to be taken as a matter stricti juris, and to be made out by clear and unimpeached evidence (the "Vrow Anna Catherina," 5 ch., Robinson, p. 17), and that therefore, if any doubt should still exist upon the subject, it would not be proper for Her Majesty's Government, on the strength of that doubt, to insist upon the "Mary Lowell" being released.

* Admiralty, July, 15, 19, 1869.

We have examined very minutely the charts and documents which Commodore Phillimore has prepared in illustration of the courses and of the positions of the two vessels at four different periods, and we think your Lordship may, for the purpose of determining the place of capture, rely upon the accuracy of those charts and documents. It results from them that the "Mary Lowell" was at the distance of between five and six miles from Little Ragged Island, when she tacked to the northward, and the Spanish frigate lowered a boat with the intention to board her (Chart No. 1); that as the "Mary Lowell" continued her course, the Spanish frigate ranged along side of her, and brought a gun to bear upon her, and at this moment the "Mary Lowell" was about three miles and three-quarters from Little Ragged Island (Chart No. 2); that the "Mary Lowell" had probably neared the shore about another half mile when she lowered her sails and flag (Chart No. 3); and that the "Mary Lowell" was about two miles from Little Ragged Island when she was boarded and taken possession of by the captors. Assuming this to be the fair result of the evidence, we are of opinion that the capture was effected when the flag and sails were lowered (the "Rebekah," 1 ch. Rob., p. 233; the "Edward and Mary," 3 ch. Rob., p. 306); and that, as the act of formal submission took place on the high seas, the subsequent taking possession of the prize was not an act of violence forbidden by the law of nations to take place within the territory of a third Power (the "Eliza Ann," 1 Dodson, p. 245), and which would entitle that Power to claim the restoration of the vessel.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That no general rule can be laid down for the guidance of Her Majesty's Consul-General, as desired by him. My Lord, Temple, October 7, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's command signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st September, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence, as noted in the margin,* which had passed between your Lordship and the Lord Bishop of London relative to the proposed extension of the limits within which the Episcopal jurisdiction of the Bishop of Gibraltar had been hitherto restricted, and that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, as to whether there was any legal objection to carrying out the views of the Bishops of London and Gibraltar in regard to that matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the Bishop of Gibraltar is a Colonial Bishop, not a Bishop in a foreign country. To extend his patent so as to give him jurisdiction over congregations in foreign countries would be impossible, except so far as an Act of Parliament confers such power on the Crown. The Act of 5 Vict., cap. 6, gives power to consecrate Bishops in foreign countries, but not to extend a Bishop's patent from a colony to a foreign country. A Bishop for a foreign country must therefore, we think, be specially consecrated as such. We are therefore disposed to regard as improper and annomalous any attempt to alter the patent of the Bishop of Gibraltar, so as to give that prelate jurisdiction in other foreign countries; and the extension of the patent in this sense would, we think, be legally inoperative. But we see no reason why an order should not issue to the effect suggested by the Bishops of London and Gibraltar, on the precedent of the order mentioned in Lord Aberdeen's letter of the 20th October, 1812. The jurisdiction so conferred would not, however, have any legal validity. If the change proposed be of such importance, the only way legally to deal with it would be to pass an Act enlarging the powers of 5 Vict., cap. 6, so as to deal expressly with the case of a Colonial Bishop where jurisdiction is sought to be extended over English clergymen and congregations resident in neighbouring foreign countries.

The Law Officers of the Crown and the Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received October 7.)

My Lord, Temple, October 7, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's command signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st September, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence, as noted in the margin,* which had passed between your Lordship and the Lord Bishop of London relative to the proposed extension of the limits within which the Episcopal jurisdiction of the Bishop of Gibraltar had been hitherto restricted, and that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, as to whether there was any legal objection to carrying out the views of the Bishops of London and Gibraltar in regard to that matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the Bishop of Gibraltar is a Colonial Bishop, not a Bishop in a foreign country. To extend his patent so as to give him jurisdiction over congregations in foreign countries would be impossible, except so far as an Act of Parliament confers such power on the Crown. The Act of 5 Vict., cap. 6, gives power to consecrate Bishops in foreign countries, but not to extend a Bishop's patent from a colony to a foreign country. A Bishop for a foreign country must therefore, we think, be specially consecrated as such. We are therefore disposed to regard as improper and annomalous any attempt to alter the patent of the Bishop of Gibraltar, so as to give that prelate jurisdiction in other foreign countries; and the extension of the patent in this sense would, we think, be legally inoperative. But we see no reason why an order should not issue to the effect suggested by the Bishops of London and Gibraltar, on the precedent of the order mentioned in Lord Aberdeen's letter of the 20th October, 1842. The jurisdiction so conferred would not, however, have any legal validity. If the change proposed be of such importance, the only way legally to deal with it would be to pass an Act enlarging the powers of 5 Vict., cap. 6, so as to deal expressly with the case of a Colonial Bishop where jurisdiction is sought to be extended over English clergymen and congregations resident in neighbouring foreign countries.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it is impossible to deny that the papers now forwarded to us by your Lordship from the Colonial Office throw considerable doubt upon the accuracy of Commodore Phillimore's Report and Maps, and upon the character of the evidence by which he was brought to his conclusions. There has been, it would seem, some amount of feeling imported into that officer's investigations, which, as it may have injured their impartiality, may also tend to lessen their value as materials for forming a sound judgment upon the facts of this case. In our last Report we assumed that what Commodore Phillimore reported might be implicitly relied on as correct in point of fact. We are not sure that, on a careful consideration of the papers forwarded from the Colonial Office, we could now say so much; and if the substance of our Report depended on Commodore Phillimore's absolute accuracy, we should be compelled materially to qualify it. But it does not so depend. As we pointed out before, the claim of territory is one stricti juris, and to be made out by clear and unimpeached evidence It cannot be said to be so made out in this case. For the Reports and opinion of Commodore Phillimore must be allowed in any point of view to throw doubt upon Sir James Walker's conclusion. We do not, therefore, desire to alter the practical result at which we before arrived, although, in communicating our determination to the American Government, it may be necessary to use language somewhat different from that which might have been used, if Commodore Phillimore's despatches had remained entirely unanswered and unimpeached by the Bahama authorities.

My Lord, Temple, October 29, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 21st instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 20th instant, stating that we do not desire to alter the practical result at which we had before arrived with regard to the case of the "Mary Lowell," but that in communicating on the subject with the United States it would be necessary to use language different from that which might have been used, if Commodore Phillimore's despatches had remained entirely unanswered and unimpeached by the Bahama Authorities, he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying draft despatch, which has already been prepared on our Report of the 4th instant, and to request that we would adapt it to our present views, so that Her Majesty's Minister at Washington may be instructed to communicate a copy of it to the Government of the United States.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have perused and considered the draft despatch transmitted to us by Mr. Otway, and we beg to suggest that after the words "capture of the vessel" in page 2 of the draft, the words which we have inserted should be substituted for those which are placed within brackets, and that after the words "being released" in page 4 of the draft, the passage which we have inserted should be substituted in lieu of the following and concluding part of the draft.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 2.)

My Lord, Temple, October 30, 1869.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th ultimo, stating that with reference to Sir R. Phillimore's Report of March 22, 1864, upon the subject of the claim of Mr. Marcella, to compensation for loss occasioned by the capture and detention of his vessel the "Criticado" by a Spanish Revenue cruizer in 1860 on a charge of smuggling, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letters from Mr. Marcella, in which he incloses copy and translation of the opinion given on his case by Don Manual Cortina, an eminent Spanish lawyer; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these letters into my consideration, together with the former papers which were also inclosed, and that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Mr. Marcella.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the difficulty in this case, upon which the report of my predecessor in office was founded, is not removed by the opinion of the eminent Spanish jurists which Mr. Marcella has submitted to your Lordship, so as to warrant your Lordship in directing this question to be re-opened at Madrid.

The case of the "Criticado" was appealed in the first instance to the Court of the public Treasury of the Province of Cadiz, which revoked the decision of the Administrative Board, and decreed the release of the vessel and cargo, with official costs to the owner, but made no order as to damages, although damages were prayed for by the Appellant. From this sentence the captors appealed to the Superior Court of Audience of Seville, which afirmed the sentence of the Inferior Court of Cadiz, as regards the release of the vessel and cargo with costs. The owners, on the other hand, did not appeal from the decision of the Inferior Court not awarding them damages in accordance with their prayer. It is upon this omission of the owners to make any such appeal, that Señor Pacheco, in his letter of March 7, 1864, addressed to Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, rests the refusal of the Spanish Government to entertain any claim for damages on the part of the owners. Señor Pacheco has asserted that the owners were authorized by law to apply to the Court of Audience against the decision of the Inferior Court of Cadiz not awarding them damages, and that as they have omitted to do so, they have acquiesced in the decision of the Seville Court. On the other hand, the eminent Spanish jurists admit that, if the question of damages were a question of law, it would have been competent for the Court of Audience to entertain an appeal on the part of the owners upon the question of damages, but they express a doubt in the first instance to the question being one of law; and they further express an opinion that, because the Court of Seville passed over the prayer of the owners for damages in silence, it did not adjudicate upon that question so as to give them the right of appeal, which they might have had from an express decision of the Court.

I am unable to acquiesce in the doubt which the eminent jurists have suggested, as to the question of damages not being a question of law, and therefore a proper matter of appeal. This question, as well as the question of practice, has been carefully considered in the Courts of the United States, and the Judgment of Mr. Justice Story, in a case of municipal seizure (Canton v. The American and Ocean Marine Insurance Company, 3 Peters' Reports, page 307), is both valuable in itself, and most apposite to the present case: "When damages are claimed," says that learned Judge, "by the libellant or claimant in the original proceedings, if a decree for restitution and costs only passes, it is a virtual denial of damages, and the party will be deemed to have waived the claim for damages unless he then interposes a cross appeal to sustain that claim."

I think that your Lordship may properly direct Mr. Marcella to be informed that very careful consideration has been given to the opinion of the eminent Spanish jurists, but that it has failed to satisfy your Lordship that the Spanish Government is not intitled to hold that the owners of the "Criticado" have submitted to the Judgment of the Provincial Court of Cadiz, decreeing restitution and costs only, when they did not interpose a cross appeal against that Judgment.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 30th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Acting Consul-General in Cuba, reporting the circumstances under which a claim to British protection has been put forward by a Mr. John Terry, a resident at Cienfuegos in that island, but at present in New York, whose property has been confiscated by the Spanish authorities on the ground of his having abetted the Cuban insurrection; and to request that I would take this case into consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the claim to British nationality put forward by Mr. Terry.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it is an understood rule among nations that the cession of territory puts an end to the obligations of allegiance on the part of its inhabitants towards the ceding power, if they continue to reside in that territory, the continuance of domicil being held to conclude their absolute allegiance to the new State. Under the circumstances of the cession of Curaçoa to Holland, Mr. Terry, having been born in the Island during British occupation, would have had the option of continuing to enjoy the rights of a natural-born British subject by leaving the Island and adhering to the political system under which he was born. He elected to remain in the Island, and, as I understand from Mr. Crawford's despatch, is at present domiciled in Havana.

Under these circumstances, I consider that your Lordship may properly instruct Mr. Crawford that Mr. Terry is not entitled to claim British protection against the Spanish authorities.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Charles Spring Rice's letter of the 9th instant, stating that, with reference to our report of the 7th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous correspondence, a letter from the Colonial Office, dated the 4th instant, setting forth Earl Granville's views as to the proposed extension of the spiritual superintendence of the Bishop of Gibraltar.

Mr. Rice was pleased also to inclose the draft of a letter which your Lordship proposed to address to the Bishop of Gibraltar on that subject, and of a Circular to Her Majesty's Diplomatic and Consular Agents in the countries and places concerned; and he was pleased to request that we would report to your Lordship whether we concur in the terms of those drafts.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think that the draft letters and Circular are proper for the occasion, but we would suggest that a verbal alteration should be made in your Lordship's letter to the Bishop of Gibraltar, and in the Circular—that instead of "the same congregations" the words "the like congregations" be substituted.

My Lord, Temple, November 17, 1869.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Mr. Ellis, relative to the cases of the British vessels "President" and "Eliza," both of which were captured, in 1864, off San Domingo, for an alleged violation of the blockade of that port; and that, with reference to the latter vessel, and to the report of the Queen's Advocate of December 15, 1866, in regard to it, he was to request that I would take Mr. Ellis' letter into consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to that gentleman, and as to whether any further steps can now be taken with regard to the "Eliza."

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to state that I should observe that the answer of the Spanish Government in regard to this vessel was sent to the Colonial Office on the 14th August, 1867, and that it has been found on inquiry that it was at once transmitted by that Office to the Governor of Turk's Island, who, it appears, had neglected to communicate the contents to the claimants, and that the matter has thus remained in abeyance until the present year.

The previous correspondence was also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am unable to arrive at any certain conclusion as to the grounds upon which the "Eliza" was seized and ultimately restored to her owners. The reports of my predecessor, Sir R. Phillimore, are grounded at one time upon the assumption that she was seized for a breach of Custom-house Regulations; at another time upon the view that she was seized for breach of blockade. It is clear, however, from the correspondence, that the "Eliza" had entered a blockade port on her voyage to Puerto Plata, and her master has endeavoured to excuse himself in his protest, on the grounds of inevitable necessity. Such an excuse, however, is not to be received on light grounds, and even when it has been admitted in English Prize Courts, it has not been held to entitle the owners of the vessel to any demurrage on her restoration. (The "Fortuna," 5 Ch. Robinson, p. 28.) Assuming, therefore, that the "Eliza" had been compelled to enter the port of Soflé on her voyage to Puerto Plata by stress of weather, which is the most favourable view for the owners, they would not, in my opinion, have been entitled, of right, to claim demurrage in the Prize Court upon her restoration. At most, they might have had an equitable claim under the special circumstances of her protracted detention at Puerto Plata. But it appears from the despatch of Sigñor Anazola of the 31st July, 1867, in reply to Sir J. Crampton's request, that an allowance by way of demurrage should be paid by the Spanish Government to the owners of the "Eliza;" that the Spanish authorities have ascertained that a passenger on board the "Eliza," after she entered Soflé, communicated with the rebels, and that letters addressed to the rebels were found in his luggage. Such a fact, if it had been proved before a Prize Court, would have fully justified the Court in rejecting the excuse of the master of the "Eliza" and in condemning the ship.

Upon any view of this case, therefore, I am of opinion that the owners of the "Eliza" have no just ground of complaint on account of demurrage not being granted to them. Your Lordship may, I think, properly direct that Mr. Ellis should be informed that Her Majesty's Government have made frequent and earnest representations to the Spanish Government in favour of the owners of the "Eliza" being allowed some demurrage on the ground of the prolonged detention of this vessel at Puerta Plata, but as the claim of the owners of the "Eliza" is, in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, only an equitable claim, they do not feel justified in urging it any further upon the attention of the Spanish Government after the communication which Sir J. Crampton has received from the Spanish Minister at Madrid, that his Government is in possession of facts which throw discredit on the story of the master of the "Eliza."

My Lord, Temple, December 13, 1869.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating, that with reference to my report of the 30th October last on the case of the "Criticado," he was directed to transmit to me, for any observations I may have to offer thereupon, the accompanying letter from Mr. Marcella, inclosing a further legal opinion in support of his claim.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may properly require Mr. Marcella to explain more fully the passage which occurs in the second opinion of the Spanish jurists, to wit, "3rd. That the sentence which neither concedes nor denies the indemnity for damages claimed could not legally do so, such being foreign to the nature of the principle invoked." Whether it is thereby intended that it was not competent for the Court of Audience of Seville, before which the owners of the "Criticado" made a prayer for damages, to entertain that prayer.

The Spanish Government says that an appeal lay from the Court of Audience to the Court of Cassation on the question of damages. The Spanish jurists, whose opinion has been submitted to your Lordship, say that no such appeal would lie to the Court of Cassation consistently with the Royal Decree regulating such appeals. They seem further to say that the Court of Audience could not have legally given or refused damages. If this latter point can be made clear, it would materially alter the aspect of the question, as regards the acquiescence of the owner of the "Criticado" in the silence of the Court on the subject of damages.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that Lord Granville has communicated to your Lordship a copy of our report of the 30th ultimo, on the two despatches from Governor Walker reporting the circumstances which led to the detention of the steamship "Lilian," sailing under the flag of the Insurgents in Cuba, and claiming to be a Cuban Government vessel, and that with reference to that report he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing additional despatches which have been received from the Governor of the Bahamas, reporting his further proceedings with regard to this vessel, which appears to have been released and subsequently recaptured, while attempting to coal, and is about to be proceeded against under the 7th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act, and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration at our earliest convenience, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon, and more specifically as to whether all that has been done has been legal, and whether the law admitted of anything more or better being done. The previous papers relating to this case were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that all which has been done as regards the "Lilian" and the vessel which attempted to supply her with coal within British waters, has been perfectly legal, and we are not aware of anything more or better that could have been done under the circumstances.

Temple, December 21, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that on the 23rd of June last, Mr. Hammond transmitted to us, by your Lordship's directions, draft of a despatch and letters founded on our opinion of the 9th of that month, which your Lordship proposed to address to Her Majesty's Representative at Madrid, to Mr. Forbes Campbell, and to Messrs. Isaac, Campbell and Co., informing them of the acquiescence of Her Majesty's Government in the condemnation of the "Tornado," and, as regarded the crew of that vessel, that their case would be submitted to the favourable consideration of the Spanish Government. That these letters, meeting with our concurrence, were forwarded to their respective destinations.

That he was now directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence, which has since ensued with regard to the claims of the crew, from which we should perceive that, in deference to the representations of Her Majesty's Government, the Government of Spain have offered the sum of 1,500*l.* for distribution among the sufferers.

This offer has been communicated to Mr. Forbes Campbell, as representing the interests of the crew, and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that we would take the accompanying letter, which had been received from that gentleman in reply, into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to it.

That as it must be borne in mind that the "Tornado" is held to be lawful prize, it is unnecessary to offer any remarks with regard to the preposterous demand made by Mr. Forbes Campbell; but Mr. Otway was to observe that the Spanish Government cannot be said to admit their wrong, as that gentleman affirms, by offering any money at all; that since they have made this offer of 1,500*l.* in consequence of the repeated requests of Her Majesty's Government that they would compensate the crew for their long detention; and looking to the exhausted state of the Spanish Treasury should this offer be declined, it doubtless will be withdrawn, and the crew will obtain nothing.

The previous papers relating to this case were sent therewith for convenience of reference; and Mr. Otway was to point out that the opinion of Her Majesty's Attorney-General, alluded to by Mr. Forbes Campbell, and upon which that gentleman appears to rely, will be found at page 11 of Part XI of the printed correspondence.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the letter, &c., into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Forbes Campbell may be informed, in reply to his letter of the 22nd of November last, that he has misapprehended the purport of Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th of that month, in supposing that the Spanish Government proposes to award any sum of money to the officers and crew of the "Tornado," as a compensation for their ill-usage and unjust imprisonment.

That the sum of money which the Spanish Government has proposed to pay over to Her Majesty's Government is intended by that Government as pecuniary assistance to the crew of the "Tornado," in view of their unfortunate position in consequence of their having engaged themselves in the service of that vessel, and that it is not intended thereby in any way to relieve the parties who may have engaged the crew of that vessel, from the payment of any wages which may be due from them.

That Her Majesty's Government must decline to renew the demand which Sir J. Crampton was instructed to make on February 11, 1867, whilst the cause was still pending, and when Her Majesty's Government relied on the representations of Mr. Forbes Campbell that there had been no infringement of the belligerent rights of Spain, which question must now be taken to have been decided by a competent tribunal adversely to those representations.

That Mr. Forbes Campbell, as he claims to act for the crew of the "Tornado," should be required to state whether he is authorized by them to decline to accept the sum of money which the Spanish Government, in deference to the representations of Her Majesty's Government, is prepared to place at its disposal for their assistance, as Her Majesty's Government cannot, under any circumstances, make a further demand on the Spanish Government.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence respecting a complaint preferred by the Swedish Minister of an assault having been made upon the Swedish Vice-Consul at Hayle, in Cornwall, while engaged in looking after a derelict Swedish vessel, which had been towed into St. Ives; and Mr. Otway was pleased to say that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured, at our early convenience, with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the Minister upon the facts of the case, and upon the claim for indemnity, which, it appears from his note of the 31st ultimo, is likely to be preferred at some future date by the Swedish Government on behalf of the owner of the vessel.

We are also honoured with Mr. Murray's letter of the 15th istant, inclosing a letter which had been received from the Board of Trade, and a report upon the circumstances attending the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Government might, in our judgment, properly express their regret to the Government of Sweden and Norway that Mr. Rawlings has, whether by design or not, been thrown down. But there is some conflict of evidence upon the facts; it is pretty clear that the crowd were not aware that Mr. Rawlings was Swedish Vice-Consul, and intended no insult to him in that character. As to the fact, if Mr. Rawlings can point out any person who has injured him, Her Majesty's Government should prosecute that person. If he cannot, the Government can only express their regret, and give directions for the future that care shall be taken to protect the Swedish Vice-Consul from insult, and especially the police should be instructed to this effect.

We think that that there is no evidence that at present the owners of the ship have suffered any loss for which Her Majesty's Government would be responsible.

That the French Government have, for the reasons stated in the inclosed note from the French Ambassador, proposed an additional paragraph to the 9th of the additional Articles relating to hospital ships. A copy of the paragraph was also inclosed. That Her Majesty's Government are disposed to approve of the draft additional Articles, as well as of the addition thereto suggested by the French Government, but that, before they make any communication to that effect to the Swiss or French Government, your Lordship would be glad if I would take into my consideration the terms of the Convention of 1864, and of the draft additional Articles, especially with reference to the 10th of the additional Articles, which relates to the neutrality of the cargo of a merchant vessel used as an hospital ship by a belligerent, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it would be desirable to ascertain from the French Government what is the precise interpretation which it proposes to give to the provision in the 10th of the additional Articles:—"Si le bâtiment de commerce contenait en outre un chargement, la neutralité le couvrivrait encore, pourvu que ce chargement ne fût pas de nature à être confisqué par le belligérant."

Under the existing practice of nations, if a ship under a cartel has entered the port of an enemy for the purpose of exchanging prisoners, or it may be for the purpose of bringing away sick and wounded, the master would be bound to abstain from all traffic whatever, and any infringement of this rule would work a confiscation of the ship, if captured. Under one interpretation of the passage above recited, the provisions would have a limited operation, and its intention might be held to be to exempt vessels employed in "evacuations" from capture and confiscation, although the master might have availed himself of the opportunity to bring out cargo, provided the cargo was not contraband of war.

The words "la neutralité le couvrierait encore," on this hypothesis, would mean that neutrality would still cover it, that is, the vessel.

Under another interpretation, the passage might be held to give protection to the cargo, as well as to the vessel, and, if it should be so intended by the French Government, then enemy's goods on board an enemy's ship might be privileged from capture as prize, provided only some sick and wounded persons were on board the vessel. With regard to proviso, I consider that the words "pourvu que ce chargement ne fût pas de nature à être confisqué par le belligérant," must be taken to refer to the quality of the goods, as contraband of war or not, and not to their ownership.

There is another point as regards this Article which may deserve your Lordship's consideration, namely, under what limitations are "evacuations" of the wounded and sick to be made. For instance, as regards evacuations made by sea, it is intended, in the case of a blockaded town, that a vessel may come out of the port with sick and wounded and be privileged from capture. It may be desirable, in the interests of humanity, that they should be removed, but under such circumstances their removal would tend to prolong the resistance of the besieged party.

I submit the above observations to your Lordship with some diffidence, as I may not have fully appreciated the use of the term "evacuations." I have presumed it to mean the removal of the sick and wounded from temporary or permanent hospitals at the discretion of either belligerent. With regard to the proposed addition to Article 9 of the additional Articles it appears to me to be unobjectionable.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acquaint me, that in consequence of my report of the 13th of January last, your Lordship consulted the French Government as to the interpretation given by them to the 10th of the draft additional Articles respecting the treatment of sick and wounded in time of war, prepared by the Conference which met at Geneva in October last.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to transmit to me the reply which your Lordship has received from the French Government, dated the 26th ultimo, and to request that I would take it into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion whether, under the explanations therein given, Her Majesty's Government can now properly approve the Draft Additional Articles.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 26.)

Temple, June 25, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th ultimo, stating that on the 25th of April and the 6th of May last year I reported to your Lordship upon the claim put forward by the Swiss authorities at Lausanne to be paid duty on the estate of the late Mr. Chauncey H. Townshend in this country, before permitting the executors to have access to the papers and property left by the deceased in the villa rented by him at Lausanne.

Mr. Hammond now, by direction of your Lordship, has transmitted to me a correspondence, of which a list was inclosed, which has subsequently taken place between the Foreign Department, Her Majesty's Minister at Berne, Mr. Farrer (the solicitor to the executors), and the Council Office, setting forth the steps which have been taken by the parties interested, and the assistance afforded by Her Majesty's Mission at Berne, in resisting the claim of the Swiss Cantonal authorities, not only with reference to the special interests to be protected by the executors, but also for the assertion of general principles under Treaty involved in this question, and which, for the benefit of any other parties who might be interested in the succession of British subjects dying in Switzerland, it was important to uphold.

That I should perceive, however, that in a manner entirely unexpected by the Foreign Department, the question at issue with the Swiss authorities was suddenly compromised by an arrangement effected by an agent of the South Kensington Museum, which Department was interested in the acquisition of a portion of the works of art bequeathed to them by Mr. Townshend.

That the question, however, now remains whether it would be desirable that Her Majesty's Government should take some further steps, or make some representation to the Swiss Government through Her Majesty's Minister at Berne, in order to place the general question upon a more satisfactory footing, and to prevent Mr. Owen's proceedings, and the mode in which the case has been dealt with, from being made a precedent in any future case of a parallel nature.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would have the goodness to inform your Lordship what instructions it will be expedient to address to Mr. Bonar upon this subject.

My previous reports, and the papers on which they are founded, were annexed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That without seeking to disturb the arrangement which has been made between the representatives of the South Kensington Museum, as legatees under the will of Mr. Chauncy Hare Townshend, and the authorities of the Canton of Vaud, which, under the circumstances, your Lordship would probably deem not to be advisable, your Lordship may, I think, properly instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Berne to represent to the Federal authorities that Her Majesty's Government has given no countenance to that arrangement, and that the executors, on whose behalf Her Majesty's Minister has been instructed to invoke the aid of the Federal authorities, were in no respect parties to it.

That whilst your Lordship refrains from calling upon the Federal Council to take any further measures to secure for the parties interested the privileges granted to British subjects by Treaty, as the legatees, for whose benefit the executors were acting, have chosen voluntary to effect a compromise with the Cantonal authorities, and have therefore obtained possession of the property bequeathed to them; your Lordship nevertheless deems it right to request the Federal Council to take note that Her Majesty's Government disapproves the conduct of the agent of the legatees in making any such compromise, and would decline to allow the mode, in which the present case has been dealt with by the Cantonal authorities, to be invoked as a precedent in any future case of a like character.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 16th of November last, respecting the claims of the Société Agricole d'Egypte against the Viceroy, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying despatches from Colonel Stanton, from which I should perceive that the question of the Viceroy's liability is now about to be referred to a tribunal at Constantinople. Mr. Hammond was pleased also to transmit to me a letter from the Committee of British Shareholders, to whom the substance of these despatches has been communicated, asking to be furnished with the instructions necessary to guide them in the prosecution of their claims before that tribunal; and to request that I would report to your Lordship, at my early convenience, my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to that application.

The previous papers in this case were likewise inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to add that your Lordship would be glad to receive any suggestions which I may have to offer in regard to any further instructions which it might be advisable to address to Mr. Elliot.

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship I have the honour to report—

That it will be sufficient at present for your Lordship to inform the Committee of British Shareholders that copies of the whole of the correspondence connected with the claims of the shareholders have been transmitted to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, but that your Lordship has not at present received any information as to the names of the parties who are to institute the proposed tribunal, and that, until such information has been furnished by Her Majesty's Ambassador, your Lordship cannot furnish the Committee with any instructions to guide them in the prosecution of their claim, but that as soon as such information arrives it shall be communicated to the Committee.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter from Messrs. Dawes and Son, stating that the Swiss authorities have put forward a claim to be paid succession duty in respect of property left in this country by Miss England, an English lady, who recently died at Montreux, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this paper into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the steps that should be taken in this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the propriety of the claim made by the authorities of the Canton of Vaud depends upon the domicile of Miss Frances England at the time of her death, whether it was Swiss or English. It appears from the letter of Messrs. Dawes and Son, that Miss F. England died at Montreux in that Canton, having resided there for many years previous to her death. Primâ facie, therefore, her testamentary domicile would be Swiss, and it is so assumed to be in the letter of M. Borcade, the Juge de Paix at Montreux, of the 25th August last. Messrs. Dawes and Son, however, state that Miss F. England never lost her original domicile as an Englishwoman, but as this is a conclusion of law, which must depend upon a variety of facts, Messrs. Dawes and Son may be properly required to satisfy your Lordship that their view of the law applicable to Miss F. England's case in regard to her domicile is well founded, before your Lordship can entertain the question raised by them, as to the application of the Treaty of the 6th September, 1855, to the duty claimed by the Swiss Government on the personal estate of Miss F. Liquidators of that Company, and facilities for procuring information requisite for the prosecution of their case before the proposed tribunal at Constantinople; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this application into consideration, and report to your Lordship, at my early convenience, my opinion as to the course which it would be proper for your Lordship to take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this application into consideration, and have the honour to Report—

That the application of the Committee for your Lordship's intervention is premature, as the Tribunal of Arbitration is not yet constituted.

The Société Agricole et Industrielle d'Egypte having been constituted and passed into liquidation under the provisions of the Law of Egypt, if the British shareholders wish at present to inspect the books of the Liquidators pending the liquidation, they should apply to the proper Egyptian Court for an order to inspect, just as a foreign shareholder, in a company formed under British law, would have to make application to the Court of Chancery.

The case, however, may assume a different aspect as soon as it comes before the proposed international tribunal, and if the shareholders should then make an application to the Liquidators for an account of the estate of the Company, stating that it is required by them for the purpose of being laid before that tribunal, and it should be refused, they may then properly make an application to your Lordship, and the altered circumstances of the case will probably justify your Lordship in giving them support to prevent a failure of justice before the tribunal at Constantinople.

My Lord, Temple, March 2, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 20th February ultimo, stating that with reference to the Law Officers' report of the 23rd of October, 1867, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Mr. Lane, the Legal Vice-Consul at Alexandria, dated the 30th of January last, with a petition which had been filed in that Court by Pantalion Schilizzi, praying that he might be registered a British subject, and inclosing the certificate of birth.

Mr. Murray was pleased to say that your Lordship would point out that in your opinion the course to be pursued in this matter should be considered both with reference to expediency, and in its strictly legal aspect. That in the petition forwarded by Mr. Lane, Mr. Pantalion Schilizzi, who is a minor, represents himself as being a merchant, and states that his father is by birth a Greek. That Mr. Lane, however, states in his despatch that the lad is only a clerk in his father's house of business; and Sir P. Francis, in his despatch No. 10 of June 1867, stated that the father was born at Scio, which belongs to the Ottoman Dominions.

Mr. Murray was pleased further to say, that it was clear from those different statements that the object sought is to obtain British protection for a Turko-Greek firm, and a compliance with that request might prove a source of much inconvenience hereafter; and that he was to request, therefore, that we would take the subject into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the nature of the instruction which should be addressed to Mr. Lane.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the subject into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That as it appears from Mr. Lane's despatch, that no instance of an application for protection under circumstances similar to those of the minor child of J. P. Schilizzi, can be adduced in the British Consulate or any other, we see no reason why your Lordship should not affirm the view taken by your Lordship's predecessor upon the advice of the Law Officers, that the minor, whilst he forms part of his father's family, should not be taken under British protection.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 18.)

My Lord, Temple, March 18, 1869.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying memorial from a Mr. Spraight, requesting, under the circumstances therein set forth, the assistance of Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople in the recovery from the Turkish Government of certain property belonging to his wife and his father-in-law, Mr. Beretta, an Ionian merchant. A despatch from Mr. Elliot with its inclosures, containing a full report of all the circumstances connected with Mr. Beretta's claim against the Turkish Government, and the steps taken in order to obtain a settlement of the same, was also inclosed. Mr. Hammond was also pleased to state, that I should perceive that this case was originally taken up by Her Majesty's Embassy when Mr. Beretta was, as an Ionian subject, entitled to British protection, but was allowed to remain dormant until after the expiration of the time when, under an arrangement, on the cession of the Ionian Islands to Greece, the management of Ionian matters devolved on the Greek Missions; and Mr. Hammond was to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon, in order that your Lordship may be enabled to judge as to the propriety of instructing Mr. Elliot to lend his good offices to his Greek colleague in support of Mr. Beretta's case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That there does not appear to be anything exceptional in the circumstances of Mr. Beretta's claim, which could justify him on that account in refusing to listen to the mode of arrangement proposed to him by the Malieh in 1862, as detailed in Mr. Pisani's report of August 9, 1862. Mr. Beretta's conduct on that occasion was not, in my opinion, that of a reasonably prudent man, and as the proposal of the Malieh had been brought about by the intervention of Her Majesty's Embassy, it was not becoming in Mr. Beretta, after requesting the delay of a few days to think over the arrangement, to quit Constantinople and leave the affair in abeyance for so many years without any communication with Her Majesty's Embassy, or with the Turkish authorities.

With regard to the claim the particulars of which are set out in the Memorial of Mr. Beretta, I think your Lordship may properly decline to authorize Mr. Elliot to give any support to it; but if your Lordship should be disposed to accord some assistance to Mr. Beretta under the heavy pecuniary loss which he has sustained, it should, I venture to suggest, be confined to instructing Mr. Elliot to lend his good offices to his Hellenic colleague to bring about the completion of the arrangement proposed by the Malieh in 1862, if Mr. Beretta is now disposed to accede to it.

My Lord, Temple, March 19, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 26th February ultimo, stating that, with reference to the Reports of the Law Officers of the Crown of the 9th of December last upon Messrs. Carver and Gill's claims, arising out of a law-suit against Ernani Bey, in the Mixed Commercial Courts in Egypt, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter and its inclosures from Mr. Charles Gill upon this case, dated the 20th ultimo.

Mr. Murray was also pleased to say that the previous correspondence therewith inclosed would furnish the history of the matter, and that in his present letter Mr. Gill decidedly refuses to accept Cherif Pasha's proposal that application should be made to the Alexandrian Court for arrest of judgment in favour of Ernani Bey, that Mr. Gill further contends that the justification of the proceedings of the Egyptian authorities, put forward in a despatch from Zoulfikar Pacha of the 27th of June, 1868, contains admissions which prove that the Alexandrian Court of Appeal acted in contravention of the law, and was unduly controlled by the executive in admitting Ernani Bey to deposit securities instead of cash, and in neglecting to entertain Messrs. Carver and Gill's application for a provisional execution of the sentence of the Cairo Court of First Instance.

That Mr. Gill further inclosed a letter from Mr. Bleton, one of the Judges of the Alexandrian Court, containing his account of what passed at the hearing of the case, and confirming the statement of Mr. Liddell, another Judge, with regard to the false translation of a letter from Messrs. Carver and Gill, upon which the adverse decision of the Court is said to have been founded.

That Mr. Gill conceives that this evidence is sufficient to prove his charge of wilful and corrupt perversion and denial of justice against the Alexandrian Court.

Mr. Murray was pleased further to say that he was to request that we would take the whole case into our consideration in connection with the statements and evidence contained in Mr. Gill's last letter and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which Her Majesty's Government can properly pursue in the present position of the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears from Mr. Charles Gill's letter of the 20th February last that, after consultation with his legal adviser at Cairo, he has signified to your Lordship his definite refusal to adopt the proposal of Cherif Pasha; that upon being served with notice of the Judgment of the Alexandrian Court he should object to it, "par la voie de l'opposition," and so obtain a re-hearing of his case. Under these circumstances we think your Lordship cannot well insist upon Messrs. Carver and Gill adopting that course.

With regard to the objection again raised and discussed at great length in Mr. Charles Gill's letter, that the Alexandrian Court acted corruptly in holding the deposit of securities instead of money by Enani Bey to be sufficient, we see no reason to dissent from the opinion already expressed by the Law Officers, that such acceptance of securities instead of money was not necessarily contrary to law, and did not nullify the subsequent proceedings.

We attach more importance to the second objection, founded upon the 24th Article of the Capitulations. Colonel Stanton has already contended that the Alexandrian Court ought not to have proceeded with the Appeal in the absence of the British Consul and Dragoman, and against the protest of the former We concur with Mr. Charles Gill in thinking that the objections taken by Zoulfikar Pacha against the application of the Article to the Mixed Commercial Courts are not conclusive, and we may observe that the proceedings of the Alexandria Court in serving notice on the British Consul instead of the Respondent personally is not reconcileable with Zoulfikar Pacha's view.

The most serious charge remains, which we think may be regarded by your Lordship as sufficiently proved, namely, that the Judgment of the Alexandrian Court proceeded upon a false translation of a letter from the respondent to the appellant, the falseness of which which was pointed out to the Court by Mr. Liddell, the British member of it. But we are not prepared to say, however glaring may have been the miscarriage of justice, that your Lordship would be justified in denouncing the Judgment of the Alexandrian Court as "corrupt," seeing that Mr. Liddell and Mr. Bleton, and a third member of the Court, who dissented from the Judgment, attached their signatures to it, and neither Mr. Liddell nor Mr. Bleton thought the matter of such importance as to require them to protest against the Judgment. How the falsified document found its way into the registry of the Alexandrian Court does not appear. That it was not produced in the Inferior Court at Cairo may, we think, be taken for granted, and we rather gather from Mr. Liddell's statement of 31st January, 1868 (No. 2 in Colonel Stanton's No. 24), that it was produced for the first time in the Alexandrian Court. The Court appears to have relied upon it as the groundwork of its Judgment, notwithstanding Mr. Liddell had pointed out to the Court that it was a false translation.

Under the very delicate circumstances of this case we feel some difficulty in advising your Lordship as to the course which your Lordship can properly pursue. We think as Colonel Stanton has taken the objection to the proceedings of the Alexandrian Court on the ground of the non-observance of Article 24 of the Capitulations, that he may endeavour to procure the proceedings to be declared null and void on that ground, and that he may strengthen his position at the same time by stating that Messrs. Carver and Gill are prepared with evidence to show that the Judgment of the Alexandrian Court was founded on a false translation of a letter from the respondent to the appellant, improperly produced behind the back of the respondent, and notwithstanding the remonstrance of Mr. Liddell against the Court accepting the false translation, which would have been impossible if the British Consul had been present to protest against the acceptance of the document.

But we are not prepared to advise your Lordship to go further, as we think Messrs. Carver and Gill ought never to have allowed the Court at Alexandria to proceed by default, and that what has happened is in a great measure their own fault.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 30.)

Temple, April 29, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence on the subject of the new Law, which has recently been promulgated by the Port in respect to naturalization in Turkey, that we should perceive from these papers the view taken by the different Governments interested in this question; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that we would take the matter into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion in regard to the Law in question, accompanied by any suggestions which he may have to offer, as to the course which it would be right and proper to take respecting it.

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, transmitting certain documents received from Baron Brunnow, namely, General Ignatiew's remarks on the Turkish Law of Naturalization, and a notice on the same subject communicated by M. Rangale.

In obedience to your Lordship we have the honour to report—

That if Turkey is to be treated as a Sovereign State, she has a right to make such Municipal Law as she chooses respecting naturalization, except that she has no right to make Municipal Law in violation of any existing Treaty obligations, and that if the Municipal Law she makes is generally obnoxious to and inconvenient for other European nations, there is nothing unreasonable or improper in concerted action on their part to obtain from Turkey a relaxation of such obnoxious or inconvenient Law. It is no doubt further conceivable, that a Municipal Law might be so framed as to be inconsistent with the accepted code and practice of all civilized nations, and this might in popular language be said to be contrary to International Law. We do not think there is anything in the Turkish Law of 19th January, 1869, at variance with the Law of Nations. Nor are we disposed to agree with General Ignatiew in considering Article II open to the objection, that it is opposed to the principles of universal legislation. If he means that the Municipal Law of Turkey is not like the Municipal Law of other countries, there is nothing in his objections; and if he means that the provisions of this Law are at variance with the Law of Nations, he does not seem to us to be justified by facts in so saying. There is nothing that we know of in the Law of Nations which compels a country in its Municipal Law to acknowledge the doctrine of perpetual allegiance. Treating the question, however, as one not of International Law, but of diplomacy, it is plain that the Law of January 19th may be open to objection on two points. First, it may in some of its provisions be at variance with the Treaties already existing between Turkey and some one or more of the foreign Powers. Secondly, it may be a Law which, though within the competency of Turkey to make, is nevertheless likely to lead to complications between her and her neighbours, especially Greece. The retroactive effect of the new Law might not improbably have this result. Although, therefore, the Law as a Municipal Law is one which Turkey is (apart from special Treaties) competent to make, there is no reason why Turkey should not be urged to examine the Law of January 19th with reference to existing Treaties and to possible future difficulties. But this is matter rather for your Lordship's discretion than for our opinion.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Murray's letter of the 18th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Aleppo, in which questions are raised with regard to the conflicting laws of marriage applicable to Jews who are British subjects; and Mr. Murray was pleased to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the points in Mr. Skene's despatch.

Mr. Murray also inclosed the Order in Council of the 30th of November, 1868, and was pleased to call our attention to the clauses which relate to the British Indian subjects.

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship we have the honour to report—

That, if the suit before the Consul at Aleppo be, strictly speaking, a matrimonial cause, the Consular Court has no jurisdiction to entertain such a suit between British Indian Jews living there under British protection. It may be, however, that it is a suit as to property, in which case it will be necessary for the Consular Court to decide the point as to the validity of the marriage in question before it. The English Court of Divorce does not recognize polygamic contracts, even when they are sanctioned by the lex loci. Neither do the Courts of Common Law. The English law knows marriage or legitimacy only in the sense in which it is understood amongst Christian nations; the state of the husband of one wife, and the status of children, the issue of such a union. By the 7th section of the Order in Council of 31st December, 1864, the civil jurisdiction of the Consular Court is, "as far as circumstances admit, to be exercised upon the principles of and in conformity with the Common Law of England," and the English law recognizes no such marriage as that which has here been contracted. The fact that such a marriage is tolerated by Turkish law does not affect the question. Nor does the fact, that the Jewish law enjoins or sanctions such a marriage, make any difference. Such a marriage does not become good in English law, because it does not offend a Jewish conscience.

We may add that this would appear to us a fit case to be remitted to the Supreme Consular Court under section 30 of the Order in Council, unless there be objections to this course, of which we are not aware.

Galatti, a naturalized British subject, resident in this country, respecting his application for the permanent protection of Her Majesty's Government in favour of his firm at Alexandria, consisting of his two nephews, one of whom is stated to be also a naturalized British subject; and Mr. Spring Rice was to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, with reference to the precedents quoted at page 76 of the accompanying Report of the Commissioners on Naturalization, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Mr. Galatti's application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. John Sergio Galatti should be requested to inform your Lordship whether the firm of Constantin S. Galatti and Fils, at Alexandra, consists of himself alone, or whether his nephews, whom he describes as managers, or any other persons have an interest in that firm.

As Mr. J. Sergio Galatti states his London firm to have been founded by his late brother Pandia S. Galatti, the Alexandrian firm of Constantin S. Galatti and Fils, would appear from its name to have had another origin, and may not be identical in its interests with the London firm.

If the Alexandrian firm should not be identical in its interests with the London firm, but should consist either of Mr. J. Sergio Galatti and his two nephews, or, as suggested in Mr. Spring Rice's letter, of his two nephews, one of whom only is stated to be a naturalized British subject, it may be a question whether the interests of the firm, being partly foreign, can properly be allowed British protection.

With regard to the nephew at Alexandria, who is stated to be a naturalized British subject, his certificate of naturalization has not been submitted to your Lordship, and it does not appear that he has obtained a license from any of Her Majesty's Secretaries of State to be absent more than six months, which would be a necessary condition for his claiming any British rights or capacities whilst resident in Egypt. It may be observed that the certificate of Mr. J. Sergio Galatti's contains the express exception "of any rights and capacities of a natural-born British subject out of and beyond the dominions of the British Crown." I am disposed to think that this clause should not be interpreted as debarring Mr. J. Sergio Galatti from obtaining British protection, as long as he is resident within British dominions, for the interests of his house at Alexandria, if that house is exclusively his own, and his nephews are his agents; but in such a case his nephews would only be intitled to British protection for the interest which they represent, not for themselves personally nor for their own private interests.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received August 18.)

My Lord, Temple, August 18, 1869.

i AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 12th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 21st ultimo, upon the subject of Mr. Galatti's petition for the permanent protection of Her Majesty's Government in favour of his firm at Alexandria, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the inclosed correspondence with Mr. Galatti regarding the points referred to in my Report as requiring farther explanation; and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether Mr. Galatti's application can be entertained.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. John Sergio Galatti has omitted to give a direct answer to the first question addressed to him by your Lordship, whether the firm at Alexandria consists of himself alone, or whether his nephews, whom he describes as managing the firm, have an interest in it.

His first application to your Lordship of 7th July, 1869, in which he states that he had thought it advisable to place his firm in Alexandria under British protection, which the British Consulate had readily accorded, is suggestive of a firm belonging exclusively to himself, to which Her Majesty's Consul-General in Egypt would have been justified in granting British protection agreeably to the precedent in Mr. D. Cassavetti's case in 1851 (Report, No. 76). But Mr. J. S. Galatti's last letter is suggestive of a firm in which his nephews have an interest, in which case, as both the nephews are foreigners, one of whom only has obtained British naturalization, the house at Alexandria having foreign interests, would not be entitled to the protection of Her Majesty's Consul-General except in so far as the direct interest of British subjects, apart from those of foreigners, should be involved. Such would appear to be the view which your Lordship's predecessor, Earl Russell, took upon the advice of the Queen's Advocate in regard to the application of Mr. Sophocle's Theologo, 1862, and I consider the view to be right and proper.

My Lord, Temple, January 11, 1869.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter, dated the 4th instant, from Madame Chantems, a lady of English birth, married to a Swiss, from whom she is apparently separated, requesting your Lordship's assistance in support of a claim which she is preferring against General Clay, late American Minister at St. Petersburgh. That I should see from the previous papers, which were also annexed, that on a former occasion your Lordship refused to interfere on her behalf, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take Madame Chantems present application into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to it; and to add, that your Lordship would be glad to be furnished with my opinion as soon as convenient, as Madame Chantems states that she proposes to proceed to the United States in the course of this week.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears from the narrative of facts which is annexed to the petition which Madame Chantems has addressed to Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburgh, that her husband, who is a Swiss by birth, is by naturalization a Russian subject, and was resident at St. Petersburgh at the time when the events took place respecting which she proposes to sue General Clay in the Courts of the United States, and further, that he has been personally mixed up in the transactions with General Clay.

As Madame Chantems is a married woman, and the cause of action has arisen during her coverture, notwithstanding she may be living apart from her husband, she must sue General Clay in her husband's name, and the law of Russia will govern the action in regard to the merits and rights involved in it. Her proper course, therefore, would be, to address herself for protection at Washington to the Russian Authorities, as her nationality by birth has been merged in the nationality of her husband, and none but Russian interests are involved in her complaint.

Claims of Messrs. Parr and Mrs. Luck Losses during Civil War.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying papers respecting various claims prepared by Isaac and William Parr and Mrs. Luck against the Government of the United States on account of injuries and losses sustained in Texas during the late Civil War; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the same into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to

Report—

That we are of opinion that no representation founded on a claim of right can be made to the American Government on behalf of the applicants. The losses sustained by them during the war at the hand of the Confederate Government and their officers are clearly not the subject of claim against the United States' Government, and, inasmuch as the Parrs actually served in the Confederate Forces, the United States' Government were entitled, primâ facie at least, to confiscate their property, nor can we insist on the statement of the Parrs being accepted that they were enlisted against their will. Nevertheless, as there seem some grounds for believing this, and, as it appears that after the conclusion of the war the United States' Government took possession of some of their property, we think that there is enough to justify the commendation of their case to the favourable consideration of the United States' Government.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 16.)

My Lord, Temple, February 15, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mr. Forbes Campbell, urging the claims of the owners of the cargo of the British vessel "Springbok" on account of the condemnation of their property in the Prize Courts of the United States in 1863. A letter addressed to Mr. Forbes Campbell by your Lordship on the 17th ultimo, refusing to make such a claim on the United States' Government, together with the Reports of the Law Advisers of the late Government, on which that letter was founded, is also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the case into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Campbell's present application. A volume of manuscript correspondence, a collection of papers printed for Parliament, but not presented, and other documents relating to this case, were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think it is too late for the claimants now to make up what was wanting in their case before as to the bonâ fide destination of the cargo by declarations dated in January 1869. It is impossible not to ask why these declarations were not converted into proofs and laid before the Supreme Court of the United States. The fair presumption is that the claimants feared they could not make them good under cross-examination. As to the absence from Nassau of the "Gertrude," it is clear from the language of the Supreme Court that the decision was not based upon the presence of that vessel, and the language of our predecessors places this part of the subject in what we conceive to be the true light. We think it impossible to say that there has been a clear failure of justice. The utmost which can be said is that the inferences of fact drawn by the Supreme Court as to the destination of the cargo may have been erroneous, but there seems to us to be a great deal of evidence to justify the decision of the Court, and it is the fault of the claimants only if they choose to abstain from producing in America the proofs which they now put forward ex parte to their own Government.

My Lord, Temple, March 25, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th February ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 15th February last on the case of the "Springbok," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter which you had received from Mr. Forbes Campbell upon that subject, and further stating that he was also to transmit to us the previous papers, as marked in the margin,* in regard to this case, and that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into our consideration, and we have the honour to report—

That the grounds alleged in the further letter of Mr. Forbes Campbell of the 25th February, 1869, why the supplementary declarations now submitted to your Lordship were not converted into proofs and laid before the Supreme Court, do not, in our opinion, furnish any new support to the application of the claimants for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government.

It ought not to be overlooked in this case that the Supreme Court, in the concluding part of its Judgment, laid stress on the "remarkable fact that not only no application had been made by the claimants for leave to take further proof in order to furnish some explanation of the concealment of the character of the cargo attempted in the bills of lading and the manifest, but that no claim sworn to personally by either of the claimants had ever been filed." Had the opportunity of applying to give such further proof been confined by the practice of the United States' Prize Courts to the District Court, the excuse suggested in the opinion of Mr. Mellish, Q.C., and Mr. Vernon Harcourt, Q.C., for the "very unfortunate circumstance that the statement of Mr. B. W. Hart was not put in evidence in the District Court," might have had some weight. But it is the practice of the Supreme Court of the United States to show greater indulgence in respect of allowing further proof than is granted by British Prize Courts, and the Supreme Court allows application to be made to it by appellants to bring in further proof after the cause has been heard by it in the first instance upon the evidence transmitted from the inferior Court. (The "London Packet," 2 Wheaton, p. 371.)

It also deserves remark that in the present case the definitive Judgment of the Supreme Court was not delivered for many months after the cause had been heard by it upon the evidence before the District Court. There was thus ample opportunity for the claimants to have applied to the Supreme Court to be allowed to repair any neglect of which they had been guilty in the District Court. No such application, however, was made by them, although the Judgment of the District Court was eminently calculated to awaken the claimants of the cargo to the propriety of applying to give further proof of its alleged destination for sale in the market of Nassau.

The proof of such a destination was needed as much after the Judgment of the District Court had condemned both ship and cargo as it would have been if the District Court had taken the more lenient view which the Supreme Court did as regards the ship. The continued silence of the claimants of the cargo led the Supreme Court to presume everything against it from its character, and it is now too late, in our opinion, for the claimants to allege that they have been taken by surprise by the Supreme Court condemning the cargo whilst it released the ship.

My Lord, Temple, July 14, 1869.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for perusal, a despatch from Mr. Thornton No. 204 June 6, 1869, inclosing a copy of papers presented to Congress in 1858, showing the policy of neutrality pursued by the United States during the civil war in Peru in 1857.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have perused the despatch of Mr. Thornton and the collection of documents transmitted with it, which your Lordship has sent to us. We hardly know how far your Lordship expects or wishes a detailed comment upon them from us; but it may be well, as the arguments deducible from these papers are in the nature of argumenta ad hominem, to point out what these papers do show, and how far they may be safely used in any possible controversy. Such arguments have an element of irritation in them, and are seldom useful unless they are absolutely conclusive.

They do establish, we think, that the United States in 1857-58 contended for the two following propositions, which they asserted in their then controversy with Peru.

1. When a port belonging to a State is occupied by belligerents exercising a de facto authority in defiance of the State law, the State laws are then for the time suspended, so far as regards neutral vessels within the port, and they are not bound to do more than to conform to such de facto laws as they find established. (See p. 23 and the opinion of the United States' Attorney-General p. 30.)

2. The second point insisted on was that in the case of the "Darcas C. Yeaton." There being no blockade, it exceeds the acknowledged belligerent right of search and capture, if a neutral vessel be boarded and taken possession of on the high seas for the alleged offence of intending to violate the municipal law of one of the belligerents.

But neither of these propositions amount to or are quite equivalent with the two propositions which Mr. Thornton has deduced from these papers, as asserted by the United States in 1857-58.

It is, indeed, very probable that the United States would have contended for the first of Mr. Thornton's propositions, if it had been necessary. But we cannot say that these papers show that they did so contend in fact.

It is doubtful whether Mr. Thornton's second proposition is true, except with some qualification, and it certainly does not appear to have been contended for in terms by the United States in these papers. They do contend for the doctrine that no blockade existing, and no question of contraband of war arising, vessels have a right to sail on the high seas towards and with the intention of trading with an insurgent port. But this is not quite the same thing.

We wish to guard against the danger of pushing too far the argument to be derived from these papers, and we have no further observations to make upon them.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received October 5.)

Temple, October 4, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Charles Spring Rice's letter of August 31, 1869, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us copy of a note from the Minister of the United States calling the attention of Her Majesty's Government to the inconveniences which result from the absence of any Convention between the two Governments defining the rights, powers, and duties of Consular officers.

Mr. Rice was pleased to annex to the note the draft of a Consular Convention which Mr. Motley stated he had full powers to negotiate with Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Rice was further pleased to state that the question as to the Consular Convention with the United States was one which, as we were aware, had been frequently under consideration, and the matter was included in a Report upon the whole question as to Conventions of that nature, which had been drawn up for the use of Her Majesty's Government by Mr. Reilly, under the authority of the Lords of the Treasury.

That he was to inclose a copy of that Report, in which we would find the full particulars of what had already passed between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of the United States on the subject, and from which we would learn the grounds upon which it was suggested that Her Majesty's Government should provide for existing evils rather by legislation than by the negotiation of Consular Conventions with foreign Governments.

That your Lordship directed him to state that, in your Lordship's opinion, such a Convention as that proposed by Mr. Motley was much needed, as without it Her Majesty's Consuls were at a disadvantage with other nations who had entered into such Conventions, and the want of which was much felt by American citizens at Liverpool and other ports in this country.

That your Lordship was aware that the laws of England would interpose great difficulties in the way of such an arrangement as that which Mr. Motley proposed, but that your Lordship conceived that it might be possible for us to suggest means for overcoming some of the difficulties; and that your Lordship accordingly requested that we would take the subject into our consideration, and at our early convenience report our opinion as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should pursue in dealing with the matter.

And that he was to add that your Lordship thought we might be glad to read the inclosed despatch from Mr. Consul Bernal, as setting forth the matter with much clearness.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these matters into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, with respect to Article I, we see no insuperable objection on principle against exempting Consular officers, subjects, or citizens of the State by which they are appointed from arrest as proposed, and from personal services as proposed, and from all personal taxation. But we think that great objections exist against exempting houses and lands which they may occupy from local rates.

Article II. We see great difficulty in acceding to Article II.

Article III. We think that the privilege of inviolability should be limited to the archives of the Consular office, or if extended to the Consular office, the privilege should be confined to cases where the Consul is not engaged in trade.

Article IV. We see no objection to this Article.

Article V and VI. We have much doubt whether it would be possible to legislate so as to give effect to Articles V and VI, and without legislation of course these Articles would be practically inoperative. A more practicable basis of legislation appears to us to be laid down in Mr. Farrer's letter of August 1866, page 2 of the paper entitled Consular Conventions.

Article VII. A good deal of objection may be anticipated to this Article, which confers a new and extensive jurisdiction upon Consuls, but inasmuch as it will be competent to all persons to provide against its exercise, if they think fit, we do not think the objection insuperable.

Article VIII. This Article is somewhat obscurely expressed, but if it means that the Consul is to adjudicate on all questions of salvage, we think it would be difficult to obtain the assent of Parliament to it.

Articles IX and X. We think these Articles unobjectionable.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 24.)

Temple, February 23, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to inform me that, on the coming into office of the present Venezuelan Government, they intimated that they were desirous of providing for the payment of the claims on the Republic of the subjects of foreign Powers, and submitted certain arrangements which they were prepared to make for effecting this object.

That Her Majesty's Government, so far as British subjects were concerned, accepted the proposals of the Venezuelan Government, and, as a preliminary step, obtained their assent to the appointment of a mixed British and Venezuelan Commission to examine into pending British claims.

That a Mixed Commission for this purpose was accordingly established. and is now pursuing its labours at Caraccas, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at that place, inclosing copies of a correspondence which has taken place between the British and the Venezuelan Commissioners, on the subject of certain claims which have been rejected by the Government of Venezuela, on the plea that the declarations testifying to the losses had not been made before the Government officer charged with the examination of the witnesses (the decree prescribing this formality having been published after the claims had been prepared); and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the steps which Her Majesty's Government should take in the matter.

The previous papers were sent therewith for reference, if required.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it would be advisable in my opinion for Messrs. Blondel and Hartman to prove their claims in the manner in which other claims have been proved before the Fiscal, according to the provisions of the Law of 16th June, 1865. I do not think that the objection of the British Commission is tenable, that it is contrary to equity to give to that law a retroactive effect, as I apprehend that the object of it was to regulate the mode of proving all claims then pending against the Republic. I have not a copy of the law before me, but I observe that the Collective Note which forms the basis of the Mixed Commission refers to the Law of 14th June, 1865, as the Law whereby the Venezuelan Government was authorized to bring to a settlement all pending claims, and it is a fair presumption that the Law of 16th June, 1865, was intended to be subsidiary to that law, and was to regulate the manner of proving such claims. If such should be the case, as the Collective Note is entirely silent as to the form in which claims are to be proved before the Commission, I do not see any valid ground for asserting any exemption in favour of Messrs. Blundel and Hartman by reason of their having prepared their claims in another form prior to the passing of the Law of 16th June.

My Lord,
Temple, May 21, 1869.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, dated the 10th instant, inclosing a petition from a Mr. Every, a British subject, native of St. Christopher, in which he claims redress from the Venezuelan Government for loss suffered by him through the detention by the Authorities at Marguerita of his vessel the "Elizabeth;" and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in taking any steps to support Mr. Every's claim.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears from the protest of the Captain of the sloop "Elizabeth," and the accompanying papers annexed to the petition of Mr. Every, her owner, and marked B, that the sloop was seized by the Custom-house authorities in the Port of Van Gregor for an alleged breach of the Revenue Laws of the United States of Venezuela upon the information of certain fishermen, and was in the Court of First Instance condemned, but, on a rehearing of the case, the sentence was pronounced to be illegal, and the question referred to the High Court of Marguerita. The latter Court, after some delay, decreed the seizure of the vessel not to be a State question, and referred the petitioner to the Government of Caraccas, which ultimately, by a decree of the President (D), directed the proceedings to be cancelled, and ordered the vessel to be delivered up to the owner, after an inventory and estimate had been taken, with all her sail and apparatus.

It further appears that on the vessel being restored to the owner, much damage was found to have meanwhile accrued to the vessel itself and her cargo, and many articles were missing which were on board when she was seized.

I am of opinion that the owner of the "Elizabeth" is entitled of right to have his vessel restored to him with her cargo and all her appurtenances in the condition in which they were when they were seized by the local Custom-house authorities, or to be compensated for any damage which may have accrued to them. With regard to demurrage or detention-money and the other items set out in the account marked (D), if the purport of the decree of the President of the State (D) is to declare the seizure to have been illegal, then I think that the owner of the "Elizabeth" would be entitled to compensation for all the expenses to which he was exposed by the detention of his vessel, and to reasonable demurrage for the loss of her services. I venture, however, to suggest that before any demand is made against the Government of the United States of Venezuela, Mr. Fagan may properly be required to report upon this case to your Lordship.

I have, &c.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 2.)

My Lord,
Temple, October 30, 1869.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me an accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Acting Consul-General at Caraccas, inclosing copies and translations of certain laws affecting foreigners, which have lately been passed by the Venezuelan Legislature, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would favour your Lordship with my opinion upon the said laws.

The Treaty of October 29, 1834, with Venezuela, and that with Colombia of April 8, 1825, were annexed, and Mr. Hammond also inclosed a correspondence upon the subject of the laws in question, which had passed between your Lordship and the German and Dutch Representatives at this Court.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I have carefully considered the new laws, more particularly with reference to Mr. Joel's observations that they are not only extremely onerous, but some of the provisions are in contravention of Treaty engagements. With regard to the Decree which purports to affect Venezuelan citizens as well as foreigners, passed on 12th May, 1869, I am unable to appreciate the full scope of the alterations which it will affect in the legal status of foreigners without some information as to the provisions of the Law of March 6, 1854, "respecting indemnification of foreigners," which is abrogated by the concluding Article of the Decree. The Articles, however, which primâ facie challenge remark, are Articles XX and XXVIII. Whether it is intended by the Venezuelan Government to apply the provisions of those Articles to reclamations on behalf of British subjects may be doubtful, seeing that the following Decree of 15th May, 1869, makes an exception in favour of existing public Treaties, but there is no corresponding reservation in favour of such Treaties to be found in the Decree of 12th May. If it should, therefore, be intended to give effect to that Decree in all cases of British claims, then it may deserve your Lordship's consideration, whether Mr. Joel should not be instructed to announce to the Venezuelan Minister of Foreign Affairs that your Lordship, as regards this Decree, reserves to Her Majesty's Government the right, if occasion should require it, to object to the Venezuelan Republic claiming at any future time to have relieved itself by its own Decree from responsibility towards Great Britain in respect of injuries done to British subjects, for which it would be liable to make compensation either under the general law of nations, or under its Treaty engagements.

With regard to the Decree passed on the 18th of May, 1869, the letter of the German Representative at this Court, addressed to your Lordship, shows how difficult it would be to form a correct opinion as to the effect of this Decree without a knowledge of the provisions of Article XII of the Constitution. That Article is imported into the first paragraph of Article II of the Decree by simple reference, and its importance might have been overlooked, if M. de Katte had not called upon your Lordship's attention to the fact that, "it requires that foreign Powers should first renounce the possibility of assisting their subjects to obtain their rights by recourse to warlike means." Such a stipulation could not, in my opinion, be properly admitted into an international Treaty, although it might be consistently admitted into a Federal compact, and your Lordship need have no difficulty, I consider, in communicating to M. de Katte that Great Britain could never consent to negotiate a Treaty on such a basis. It would not be unreasonable, I conceive, for nations to agree to refer any dispute as to the construction of a Treaty to a third Power instead of having recourse at once to reprisals for an alleged breach of it; but for a nation to renounce the right to obtain redress by force of arms for manifest wrong done by another nation, would be to abdicate its highest duty towards its own citizens, and to renounce one of the great objects for which political society exists.

The observations of the Chevalier Cadorna upon this Decree proceed also, I presume, upon the consideration of the provisions of Article CXII of the Constitution, which I have not before me. With regard to Article VIII of the Decree of 15th May, 1869, to which Mr. Joel has called your Lordship's attention as in practice likely to prove most objectionable, I do not consider that its provisions primâ facie challenge objection; nor do I think that your Lordship would be justified in anticipating that this Article will be applied by the Venezuelan Courts in such a manner as would be inconsistent with justice. If it should be so applied at any future time, it will always be competent for your Lordship to require justice to be done by the Executive Government of the Republic, when its Courts are inefficient.

The question submitted to your Lordship by M. de Katte, upon which he requests to be favoured with a confidential communication, as to whether Her Majesty's Government is of opinion that any attempt of the Republic of Venezula in the direction pointed out by the said Articles should be anticipated by a declaration at Caraccas, is a question rather of policy as regards the common action of the European Governments, upon which your Lordship will be the best judge, and upon which I do not presume to offer an opinion.

Temple, November 12, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me, for my consideration, together with the papers sent to me on the 16th September last, the accompanying despatch from the British Acting Consul-General at Caraccas relative to the laws affecting foreigners, which have been recently passed by the Venezuelan Legislature, and to request that I would report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That with regard to the observation of Mr. Joel that the forms prescribed for proving claims against the Venezuelan Government will be extremely onerous on foreigners, I think it will depend very much upon the good faith with which the Venezuelan authorities act in giving effect to the new laws. I have no accurate knowledge of the Constitution of the Venezuelan Republic, but the more intricate portion of the laws seem to me to be framed to meet cases where wrong has been inflicted on foreigners by the authorities of the States which constitute the Republic, as distinguished from the Republic itself, and it also seems to me that if the forms provided for such cases should be observed the remedy would be easy of attainment.

On the other hand, provision appears to be made to meet cases where it might prove impossible to comply with the forms.

With regard to the payment of claims, to which Mr. Joel also alludes, which may may be proved, the new laws purpose to place foreigners on a platform of equality with natives, and it must be assumed, I think, until experience refutes the assumption that a platform of justice—not of injustice—has been contemplated by the Venezuelan Legislature. If it should hereafter prove that this Law is intended to work injustice to foreigners, and that it is made use of by the Venezuelan Courts for that purpose, the Venezuelan Government cannot be allowed to take advantage of its own wrong, if complaint is made by a foreign Power, nor will it be any justification of such injustice for the Venezuelan Government to allege that it is sanctioned by Venezuelan law.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 21.)

Temple, December 20, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch which he has received from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caraccas (No. 6 of November 15, 1869), inclosing copy of a protest addressed by the Diplomatic Body to the Venezuelan Minister for Foreign Affairs on the 27th of July last against the 7th Article of a law passed by the Legislature on the 15th of May last, which, in the opinion of the Diplomatic Agents infringes the immunities enjoyed by such Agents in the countries to which they are accredited; and Mr. Hammond was to request that I would take this matter into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion whether the Article complained of is such as to call for, or justify a representation on the part of Her Majesty's Government. Mr. Hammond was also pleased to add that I should observe that the protest was not signed by any British Agent, there having been no British Chargé d'Affaires at Caraccas at the time.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I think it probable that the object of the law in question was to define the functions of the High Federal Court of the Republic as distinguished from the State Courts, and to reserve to the former all questions touching the law of nations in its application to the Diplomatic Corps. But as the law is open to another interpretation, and the Venezuelan Government has taken time to consider whether that interpretation is or is not to be given to the law, I think your Lordship may properly instruct Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to support the declaration of the other Diplomatic Agents.

Temple, June 29, 1869.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 28th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Stuttgardt, inquiring whether he would be justified in marrying at the Legation two Wurtemberg subjects, one of whom has been naturalized as a British subject; and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to this inquiry.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That unless Her Majesty's Minister at Stuttgardt is satisfied that all the preliminaries to a valid marriage which are required by the law of Wurtemberg have been observed by both parties, and that the proposed marriage will not in any way work a fraud against that law, I am of opinion, that Her Majesty's Minister at Stuttgardt ought not to allow the proposed marriage to be solemnized at Her Majesty's Legation.

Temple, October 16, 1869.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating—1st. That he had the honour to transmit to us by direction of your Lordship, a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Stuttgardt, dated the 23rd ultimo, relative to the celebration of marriages abroad in which one or both parties were British subjects. The first part of the despatch referred to the more general question of British marriages abroad; bnt it was to the latter part, namely, Mr. Gordon's statement of his own practice, that he was more particularly to call our attention. 2nd. It would be seen from the despatch that marriages had recently been solemnized with Mr. Gordon's concurrence at the British chapels at Stuttgardt and Heidelberg, and not in the chapel or house of the British Minister, as directed by the Act 4, Geo. IV, cap. 41, the parties so married at Heidelberg having been previously married according to the law of Baden, though it was not specifically stated that that formality was observed in the case of the marriages performed at Stuttgardt. 3rd. That Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to Mr. Gordon's proceedings, and as to the answer which should be returned to his inquiry how marriages so solemnized could be registered in England.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Gordon's proceedings are correct as regards his advising British subjects that if they are married according to the laws of the country wherein they are residing, their marriage would be held valid and legal in England, and that they are at liberty to add a religious ceremony in a British chapel, if they are so minded, for the satisfaction of any religious scruples or feelings on their own part; but Mr. Gordon is wrong, in our opinion, in requesting, as he appears to have done in the case of the marriage solemnized in the British chapel at Heidelberg by the Rev. H. Hodges, that a certificate of the German marriage of the parties, and a certificate of the English religious ceremony, or, as it purports to be, of a marriage solemnized between the parties according to the rites of the Church of England, should be forwarded to Her Majesty's Legation at Stuttgardt, if they were so required by him for the purpose either of registration at the Legation, or of registration in England. There is no legal mode of registering in England marriages so solemnized, and it is for your Lordship to consider whether it is advisable to authorize any Register for Marriages to be kept at Her Majesty's Legation, except for marriages actually celebrated in the chapel or house of Her Majesty's Minister.

We have, &c.

| 61 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 22, 1870 | Case of the "Meta." As to instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Consuls on the course they should pursue in like cases of captures of neutral vessels. Owners of cargo should be informed they must appear before Prize Tribunals to prove ownership | 39 |
| 62 | Law Officers | 23, | Her Majesty's Government should decline to state to Mr. Moss, a broker, and Mr. Thompson, owner of a steam collier, whether it would be an infringement of neutrality to effect a sale of that vessel to the French Government | 39 |
| 63 | Law Officers | 23, | As to notice issued by Prussian Government for engaging ships privately armed in the war service of the North German Confederation. This would not interfere with the Declaration of Paris of 1856 acceded to by Prussia, but Prussian Government might be reminded of the Declaration | 40 |
| 64 | Law Officers | 26, | Reply to be given to British subjects requesting protection to their property, and exemption from military contributions in France during the war | 41 |
| 65 | Queen's Advocate | 30, | The Prize Court alone can determine whether the British owners of the cargo of a captured German vessel may use that vessel to convey the cargo to its place of destination. The Secretary of Lloyd's Association should be told Her Majesty's Government could not interfere in case of accident | 41 |
| 66 | Queen's Advocate | Sept. 2, | No objection to publication in the "London Gazette" of the Imperial Decrees relative to the establishment of regulations of the French Prize Court | 42 |
| 67 | Queen's Advocate | 5, | Her Majesty's Consul at Bordeaux was justified in facilitating the escape of subjects of the German States. No objection to their employment as extra hands on board the "Finchale" | 42 |
| 68 | Queen's Advocate | 14, | War. France and Germany. As to the alleged intention of the French Government to burn the warehouses at Havre on approach of the German forces. No objection to foreign Consuls making a catalogue of the neutral property warehoused there | 42 |
| 69 | Law Officers | 15, | Opinion of Mr. Rothery with regard to the forfeiture of cargoes on board vessels contravening Slave Trade Acts, is correct. Claim of Messrs. Raband, Frassinet, and Co. Case of the "Salama," captured by Her Majesty's ship "Nymph" | 43 |
| 70 | Law Officers | 19, | Submarine telegraph cable. No objection on principle to the neutralization of submarine telegraphs so as to prevent destruction in time of war, but the Telegraph Company's suggestions can only be carried out by conforming to the rights of neutrality in time of war, and this would require a special Convention, for the benefit of belligerents as well as neutrals | 43 |
| 71 | Queen's Advocate | 24, | War. France and Germany. British Vice-Consul and British residents at Dieppe cannot claim exemption from forced contributions, if levied by Prussian armies | 45 |
| 72 | Queen's Advocate | Oct. 15, | As to complaint of the South Western Railway Company against Provisional Government at Tours on account of the traffic being impeded by war with Germany. Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in sending a British vessel of war to embark British subjects at Granville, unless in concert with Governor of Tours | 45 |
| 73 | Queen's Advocate | 12, | Instructions that should be sent to Her Majesty's Consul at Havre with respect to liability of British subjects in France to military requisitions, either by France or Germany during the war. Such exemptions were rightfully claimed in New Granada under Treaty | 46 |

| 74 | Queen's Advocate | Oct. 17, 1870 | Course that should be pursued by Her Majesty's Government on account of riotous conduct of the inhabitants of Honfleur to prevent the export of provisions to England. South Western Railway Company should be advised to discontinue their trade | 46 |
| 75 | Queen's Advocate | 20, | Instructions given by Lord Lyons to Her Majesty's Consul at Cherbourg relating to a formation of an Irish Legion there, were right and proper | 47 |
| 76 | Queen's Advocate | 25, | As to the arrival of French vessels of war in the Frith of Forth with German prisoners on board. Neutral Power no right to interfere so long as prisoners are under French jurisdiction | 47 |
| 77 | Queen's Advocate | Nov. 5, | As to further instructions to be sent to Consul Segrave on the question of compulsory service of British subjects in the local militia at Réunion. British subjects resident cannot claim exemption in case of defence of the island from foreign invasion | 47 |
| 78 | Law Officers | 9, | As to protection to be afforded to British subjects having establishments in France. British capsule manufactory at Bordeaux. Requisition for military service. Messrs. Betts and Co. must bear equally the French burdens imposed by war | 48 |
| 79 | Queen's Advocate | Dec. 1, | As to liability of British subjects at Dieppe to serve in the French National Guard, or to serve in the field against the forces of a friendly Power who had issued a Declaration of Neutrality. Want to know the special law of France relative to Dieppe | 48 |
| 80 | Law Officers | 14, | Conduct of French Government in detaining crews of captured vessels belonging to German Mercantile Marine as prisoners of war is correct, and according to precedent | 49 |
| 81 | Queen's Advocate | 14, | Blockade of the River Seine established at Havre by French authorities. Notification of the Commandant of the Military and Naval Division insufficient to justify the condemnation of neutral vessels entering or leaving that river, and should be treated as such. Warning should be given to each individual vessel | 49 |
| 82 | Queen's Advocate | 14, | Estate of the late Mrs. Kozminsky. As General Frome has obtained letters of administration in the Probate Court in London, Her Majesty's Consul at Havre may assist him in obtaining recognition by French authorities, as the legal representative of the deceased, according to English law | 50 |
| 83 | Queen's Advocate | 19, | As to notification of blockade of Ports of Rouen, Dieppe, and Fécamp. Communication of Count Chaudordy to Her Majesty's Ambassador in France sufficient to warrant it. Draft notification for "Gazette" | 50 |
| 84 | Queen's Advocate | 20, | Further notice of the French authorities at Havre relative to the blockade of the Seine, does not call for any action on the part of Her Majesty's Government. Her Majesty's Consul should report in what way the blockade of Rouen is maintained | 51 |
| 85 | Law Officers | 26, | As to the detention of the British vessel "International" with telegraph cable, intended to have been laid down between the English and French coasts. Her Majesty's Government should decline to state to the Telegraph Company their views on an hypothetical case whether it was a breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act | 52 |
| 86 | Law Officers | 30, | Further report relative to the proposal of the Submarine Telegraph Company to lay down a cable between the English and French coasts for the military use of the French Government. No encouragement should be given, as contrary to British neutrality, and interference should be made to prevent the laying of the cable | 52 |

GENERAL.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 87 | Queen's Advocate | June 11, 1870 | Naturalization Act | 53 |
| 88 | Law Officers | July 16, | Draft Proclamation of Neutrality in the war between France and Prussia, and letter to public Departments, with alterations | 53 |
| 89 | Law Officers | 21, | Export of arms for France. Approves letter to Treasury, as Her Majesty's Government do not intend to put in force 150th Section of the Customs Consolidation Act | 54 |
| 90 | Law Officers | 21, | Proposed sale of Admiralty stores no breach of neutrality | 54 |
| 91 | Law Officers | 25, | Employment of British colliers for French fleet would be liable to detention under the Foreign Enlistment Act, as they would become store ships | 55 |
| 92 | Law Officers | 28, | As to the employment of pilots by ships of war by either of the belligerents. The sanction should be confined to British waters, and to English ports within three miles limit | 55 |
| 93 | Law Officers | 29, | Question of Messrs. W. and H. P. Sharp as to advance of money to belligerent Powers. Loans to belligerents would not create a criminal liability, but would be contrary to the spirit of the Queen's Proclamation | 56 |
| 94 | Law Officers | 29, | Alleged employment of British colliers to supply French fleet with coal in London and Liverpool. No ground for interference of Her Majesty's Government at present, but the utmost vigilance to be used | 56 |
| 95 | Law Officers | Aug. 3, | Draft Notice of Board of Trade for the instruction of pilots, founded on Report of the 28th July; returns with alterations | 57 |
| 96 | Law Officers | 3, | Instruction to pilots may be issued at once, without waiting for new Foreign Enlistment Act. Suggesting insertion of words respecting "ships of war in distress" | 57 |
| 97 | Attorney-General and Queen's Advocate | 5, | Neutral obligation under the Guarantee as regards Belgium. Refusal of one or more of the Guaranteeing Powers does not release the remaining Powers from their obligation | 57 |
| 98 | Law Officers | 5, | As to sale of the steam collier "Solent" to French Government. Messrs. Hein and Company should be told the vessel cannot be dispatched, and the parties to its sale run a risk of criminal prosecution | 58 |
| 99 | Law Officers | 5, | No sufficient case for interference with the vessel "Nonpareil," for the alleged shipment of steam-coal for Copenhagen, Australia, and Vancouver's Island, but grounds for suspicion | 59 |
| 100 | Law Officers | 8, | Case of the "Steady," formerly a gun boat, fitted out at Liverpool for supposed mercantile purposes. Criminal prosecution could be taken against Messrs. Bowdler and Company, who have received orders to repair the vessel, should the vessel be employed by either belligerent | 59 |
| 101 | Law Officers | 10, | Case of the "Solent," "Norseman," and "Sweden" steamers sold to French Government. Steps should be taken to find who ordered the sale of the vessels | 59 |
| 102 | Law Officers | 11, | As to the supplies of coal for the French fleet. Case of vessels "Marie" and "Emma" cleared from Cardiff for Cherbourg. Inquiries should be instituted whether Mr. H. Worms, the alleged owner, is a French subject | 60 |
| 103 | Law Officers | 11, | As to precautions taken to prevent the sale of Her Majesty's old ships of war to either belligerent. Officers of Customs should report the registered owner of the "Brisk" and the nature of her repairs | 61 |
| 104 | Law Officers | Aug. 13, 1870 | On case of the "Hypatia." Said to have been sold at Cherbourg to the French Government. Customs officers at Sunderland and Registrar-General of Seamen at Southampton should report particulars. The case apparently a violation of neutrality | 61 |
| 105 | Law Officers | 13, | As to instructions from Admiralty for guidance of naval officers during the French and German war. Not necessary to instruct them relative to sale of belligerent ships of war in British waters. Question of a belligerent captor giving up foreign mails found on board captured vessels, must be considered carefully, for fear of enemy's despatches becoming protected from discovery and seizure | 62 |
| 106 | Law Officers | 13, | Reply to Mr. Rayner, as to his proposed communications to either of the belligerents in the present war of certain improvements in efficiency of artillery. Must make them at his own peril | 62 |
| 107 | Law Officers | 19, | Cases of the steam colliers "Marie" and "Emma." No sufficient evidence of their being store ships in the French service. No justification for interference. No further steps necessary relative to the vessels "Steady" and "Brisk" | 63 |
| 108 | Attorney-General and Queen's Advocate | 20, | As to blockade of German rivers. Divergent opinions as to the French Admiral's notification of blockade being conveyed from one belligerent to another by an English man of war. Governor of Heligoland in error | 63 |
| 109 | Queen's Advocate | 20, | No further notice need be given as regards the error in the communication made by Governor of Heligoland to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin, and Consul at Hamburgh, of the blockade of German rivers | 64 |
| 110 | Law Officers | 23, | No steps can be taken against former owner of the "Norseman," not fitted out before she left England, as a transport or storeship. Case of the "Sweden" already reported | 65 |
| 111 | Law Officers | 23, | Further respecting the sale of the collier "Sweden," the temporary detention was proper; may proceed to Gottenberg, but shippers should be informed she was suspected of being sold to the French Government. Consul should report her arrival | 65 |
| 112 | Law Officers | 25, | Case of the "Hypatia." Cannot be proceeded against, as she was dispatched before the Foreign Enlistment Act of 1870. | 65 |
| 113 | Law Officers | 26, | As to the supply of coal by British vessels to the French fleet. Care should be taken to ascertain whether the coals were bonâ fide for French ports, and that they have not been re-shipped to the Baltic | 66 |
| 114 | Queen's Advocate | 26, | Blockade of German ports, as to its validity. Messrs. Russell to be informed Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in intervening on only part of the coast of Sleswig being blockaded | 66 |
| 115 | Queen's Advocate | 27, | Opinion on notification of the blockade of the Baltic German ports | 67 |
| 116 | Law Officers | 27, | German emigrants detained at Hamburgh. As to requesting French Government's permission for them to proceed to Queensland through blockading squadron. Approves proposed draft despatch. Opinion of Queen's Advocate that there is no sufficient ground to solicit the favour if proceeding in an enemy's ship | 67 |
| 117 | Queen's Advocate | 30, | Baltic blockade. As to publishing rectification of date in the "London Gazette" | 68 |
| 118 | Queen's Advocate | 30, | Baltic blockade. Would be as well to await official notification of change of date before inserting it in the "London Gazette" | 69 |
| 119 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | 30, | German emigrants at Hamburgh. Do not agree with Queen's Advocate as to enemy's ship being employed for the purpose. No objection to asking French Government to let it pass | 69 |

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 120 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 31, 1870 | Baltic blockade. Notification of the correction of error as to date of its commencement, for insertion in "London Gazette" | 70 |
| 121 | Law Officers | Sept. 14, | Complaint of Mr. A. Walker on detention of the steam-ship "Steady" by Customs authorities at Birkenhead. Vessel should not be released until proof of her destination is given | 70 |
| 122 | Queen's Advocate | 14, | French corvette "Déciés" off Heligoland. The Governor was correct in objecting to her leaving her station as one of the blockading squadron, to take in coals within British waters | 71 |
| 123 | Queen's Advocate | 18, | Draft of proposed Report on case of the "Steady." Steps to be taken at once at Liverpool; not to leave on trial trip | 71 |
| 124 | Queen's Advocate | 19, | Case of the "Steady." Vessel should not be allowed to go on trial trip without guard on board. Circumstances relating to her sale open to suspicion | 71 |
| 125 | Queen's Advocate | 20, | As to prohibition for belligerent ships of war bringing prizes into British ports. Extends also to prizes manned by a prize crew, although not accompanied by an armed ship | 72 |
| 126 | Queen's Advocate | 21, | As to complaint of Messrs. Campbell and Fraser of the insufficiency of the blockade of German ports in the Baltic | 72 |
| 127 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | 22, | Case of the "Steady." Agree with Queen's Advocate as reported on the 19th instant | 73 |
| 128 | Queen's Advocate | 22, | Notification for insertion in "London Gazette" of the raising of the blockade of the German ports in the North Sea | 73 |
| 129 | Queen's Advocate | 26, | Notification for insertion in "London Gazette" of the raising of the blockade of German ports in the Baltic | 74 |
| 130 | Law Officers | 27, | Case of the "Steady." Trial trip must not be allowed without sufficient guard to insure her return to Liverpool. A force of Marines should be kept there for security | 74 |
| 131 | Law Officers | 27, | As to the exercise of compulsion on belligerent ships of war refusing to comply with instructions of Neutrality Circular. Notice should be given of intention to enforce neutral rights | 75 |
| 132 | Law Officers | Oct. 8, | As to threat of Mr. Walker to take legal proceedings if his vessel, the "Steady," is any longer detained. To be told she may go on trial trip with armed Marines on board | 75 |
| 133 | Law Officers | 11, | As to reply to be given to Mr. Hilbery, solicitor to Mr. Walker, on the detention of the "Steady" | 75 |
| 134 | Queen's Advocate | 15, | Establishment of an Ambulance Corps exclusively for one of the belligerents in this country would not be a breach of neutrality, if confined to movements of troops of one belligerent exclusively | 76 |
| 135 | Law Officers | 25, | Case of the "Sharpshooter." Strict watch should be kept on her that she does not leave Liverpool without giving proper explanations | 76 |
| 136 | Queen's Advocate | 25, | The "Marie" being a French vessel regularly employed in the coal trade, and dispatched from a French port to Cardiff, does not come within the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act | 77 |
| 137 | Law Officers | 25, | On the request of Mr. Hilbery, solicitor to Mr. Walker, owner of the "Steady," for her release. Suggesting certain questions that should be asked him. If answered satisfactorily, vessel might be released | 77 |
| 138 | Queen's Advocate | 27, | As to protest of German Vice-Consul at Lowestoft on removal of the German vessel "Heinrich" from the limits of the port, when in possession of a French prize crew. Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in interfering | 78 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 139 | Queen's Advocate | Oct. 28, 1870 | The German vessel ("Heinrich") taken into Lowestoft as a French prize, should not be allowed to remain longer than time to procure provisions, providing there is no stress of weather. In the absence of special notification, belligerents may enter British waters with prizes, for asylum | 78 |
| 140 | Law Officers | 29, | Case of the "Steady." Trial trip under detention. Not to be allowed another without special permission | 78 |
| 141 | Attorney-General | 29, | As to the German vessel ("Heinrich") taken into Lowestoft as a French prize. Belligerents must not bring into and anchor prizes in British waters. Circular of the 19th July should be put in force. Vessels not to be detained, but ordered to quit after provisions secured | 79 |
| 142 | Solicitor-General | 29, | As to German vessel ("Heinrich") taken into Lowestoft as a French prize. Belligerents must not bring into or anchor prizes in British waters, except under special circumstances. Circular of the 19th July to be put into force | 79 |
| 143 | Queen's Advocate | 31, | As to wish of the British owners of cargoes on board German vessels captured by French cruizers, that representation may be made to Provisional Government at Tours for their release, on account of the suspension of the French Prize Courts. Arrangement should be made by Her Majesty's Government for their release, under security | 80 |
| 144 | Law Officers | 31, | Case of the "Steady." Request of Mr. F. N. Hilbery, for copy of warrant of detention, and whether the vessel would be released on security. May be released on security for full value of the vessel | 81 |
| 145 | Solicitor-General | 31, | As to the German vessel "Heinrich," detained as a French prize at Lowestoft. Concurs in reports of the Attorney-General of 29th | 81 |
| 146 | Queen's Advocate | 31, | The German vessel "Heinrich" at Lowestoft should be released, and prize master be requested to proceed on his voyage, unless prevented by stress of weather | 81 |
| 147 | Queen's Advocate | Nov. 3, | As to the German vessel "Heinrich, brought into Lowestoft roads in charge of French prize crew. Circular letter of 19th July correct, and belligerent vessels with prizes ought not to enter British ports, except under stress of weather | 82 |
| 148 | Law Officers | 3, | Case of the "Sharpshooter." Owner may be told his vessel will be allowed free clearance when loaded with cargo for Penang and Singapore | 83 |
| 149 | Law Officers | 16, | Cases of the "Steady" and "Sharpshooter." M. Tissot's representations respecting proceedings of the latter. Owner's alleged connection with the "Alabama" should be ascertained, and warrants prepared | 83 |
| 150 | Law Officers | 17, | Case of the "Sharpshooter." No further advice to offer. If Mr. Bates acted in bad faith, proceedings should be taken against him under 8th Section of Foreign Enlistment Act | 84 |
| 151 | Law Officers | 17, | Case of the "Sharpshooter." Claims of owner for compensation for alleged loss on account of her detention. Inquiries to be made as to Mr. Bates' connection with the "Alabama" | 85 |
| 152 | Queen's Advocate | 19, | As to the propriety of a neutral State supplying belligerents with coals from Government stores, when they can be obtained from private sources | 85 |
| 153 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | 21, | Case of the "Frei," captured by the French vessel "Dessaix" in British waters. Representation may be made by Lord Lyons to the French Government for restitution of vessel and cargo. Approves draft | 86 |
| 154 | Law Officers | 25, | Application of shipping agent at Plymouth for exceptional facilities to trans-ship arms from the steam-ship "Avon." Board of Customs quite right in refusing to accede to request | 86 |

| 174 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 28, 1870 | Claims of Mr. Percy Brandon against the Colombian Government, on account of bonds issued by the former Government of New Granada. Doubt as to expediency of intervention of Her Majesty's Government, to oblige the payment of the "Vales" or bonds by the Colombian Government at par, which had been purchased by Mr. Michelsen, a Danish subject. Wants aid of Law Officers .. | 99 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 175 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | Mar. 11, 1870 | Claim of Mr. Percy Brandon against the Colombian Government on account of certain bonds issued by former Government of New Granada. Her Majesty's Government cannot insist on payment of these depreciated bonds, which had originally been purchased from a Colombian subject | 100 |
| 176 | Queen's Advocate | 14, | As to the commercial contribution levied by the Authorities at Panama, and wish of French Embassy in England, to know what course Her Majesty's Government intend to pursue, for protecting British interests | 101 |
| 177 | Law Officers | July 9, | Claim of Mr. Percy Brandon on Colombian Government. Nothing in his further letter to alter decision given on 11th March last, relative to claim for payment of his bonds | 102 |
| 178 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 31, | As to claim of Mr. W. Ackers Cage against Colombian Government for payment of certain bonds of which he is the holder, and which the Venezuelan Government awarded at the mixed Commission of British claims, which sat at Caracas | 103 |
| 179 | Queen's Advocate | Sept. 1, | Claim of Mr. George Fletcher on Colombian Government for compensation for losses by robbery of his goods in the State of Canca by belligerents, during civil war in 1861 and 1862. As award was granted by Tribunals of Colombia, he is not entitled to the support of Her Majesty's Government | 104 |
| 180 | Queen's Advocate | Dec. 15, | As to claim of Messrs. Robinson and Flemming on the Colombian Government for balance due on account of their vessel the "Cuaspad," purchased in 1866 under a contract with General Mosquera, the Envoy in London. The claim is a just one, as a greater insurance could not be effected on the vessel. | 104 |

PACIFIC ISLANDS.

| 181 | Queen's Advocate | Jan. 13, 1870 | As to proposed instructions to the Acting Consul in the Fiji Islands on subject of the position of British subjects engaged in trading operations, who may enter the service of the Chiefs of those Islands. Contracts entered into by them must be considered as private transactions, and those British subjects would not be entitled to the intervention of Her Majesty's Government, to enforce their fulfilment | 105 |
| 182 | Law Officers | Feb. 28, | Case of Jonathan Morgan, who was deported in irons to Sydney to take his trial, by the Acting Consul at Fiji Islands, for a breach of the peace, but was discharged from custody there after inquiry. The Acting Consul had no right to deport him in irons, but Her Majesty's Government should decline to interfere in any claim for any compensation | 105 |
| 183 | Law Officers | Mar. 12, | Kidnapping operations in the Pacific Islands. Steps necessary to be taken before a Bill is prepared giving Consular jurisdiction over foreign subjects, and for bringing them to trial for these offences in Colonial Courts, after deportation | 106 |
| 184 | Law Officers | 22, | As to the proceedings of the master of the British vessel "Atlantic" in decoying natives of the Pacific Islands under false pretences, and conveying them as slaves to the Fiji Islands. Agree with report of Mr. Rothery, that Captain Hayes should be taken into custody and tried on his arrival in British territory, and that the Consul was justified in detaining the vessel, and sending her for trial at Sydney | 107 |

PERSIA.

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 185 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 22, 1870 | Claims of Messrs. Hector against certain wool-dealers at Harveyzeh. Agree with Mr. Alison, that the parties should be sued in Persia, and instructions to that effect might be sent to him | 113 |

PERU.

| 186 | Law Officers | Mar. 1, 1870 | As to the detention of two British vessels, the "Star of Brunswick" and "Prince Rupert." As the dispute between the owners and the Peruvian Government has been settled by the Peruvian Tribunals, no further steps need be taken than to inquire if the proceedings were fairly conducted. If cause for remonstrance should arise, good offices of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires might be used for settlement of dispute | 114 |
| 187 | Queen's Advocate | Apr. 19, | Mr. J. Pickering has no just claim on the Peruvian Government for compensation on account of the abrogation of the concession for the construction of a railway from Iquique to La Maria, though he has a claim for the reimbursement of expenditure in constructing the railway. Her Majesty's Government justified in not presenting his memorial or in granting him official support | 115 |
| 188 | Law Officers | Aug. 9, | As to claim for compensation put forward by Messrs. Moore and Galloway for detention of the British ships "Star of Brunswick" and "Prince Rupert," and their complaint against the decision of the Peruvian Tribunals. No proof given whether those decisions should be disregarded, but confidential inquiry may be made into the truth of the allegations | 116 |
| 189 | Law Officers | 12, | Claim of Mrs. Stevenson to certain property at Callao left by her grand-daughter. As the claim was made for the whole estate, both real and personal, and given against her by the Peruvian Tribunals, she is debarred from making any further claim to personality apart from the reality, according to the Peruvian Law of Succession | 117 |

PORTUGAL.

| 190 | Queen's Advocate | Jan. 22, 1870 | Necessity for further alterations in Draft Convention with Portugal for modifications in Treaty of 1842, for suppression of Slave Trade, on abolition of the Mixed Commission. No provision made for delivering over detained vessels to cruizers of their own nationality | 118 |
| 191 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 5, | Further Report on subject of the Draft Convention with Portugal for modification of Treaties for suppression of Slave Trade. Question as to vessels detained being handed over to cruizers of their own nationality. Necessity for the seizors to be sufficiently protected | 118 |
| 192 | Law Officers | 26, | If the British Consular Chapel at St. Michaels is not part of the Consulate, marriages performed there would not be valid, and would require an Act of Parliament to make them so | 119 |
| 193 | Queen's Advocate | June 30, | On letter to the Admiralty, with instructions to Commanders of Her Majesty's cruizers on detention of captured slavers during the suspension of the Mixed Commission Courts, which it is proposed to abolish under the new Convention | 119 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 194 | Queen's Advocate | Sept. 13, 1870 | Her Majesty's Consul at St. Michaels should be instructed to warn masters of British vessels, that in communicating with Prussian merchant vessels homeward bound during the war, they might incur the risk of capture by French cruizers. although it would be no breach of a British statute. The French Prize Court would have to consider whether such vessels were liable to condemnation as being in the enemy's service | 120 |
| 195 | Queen's Advocate | Nov. 23, | As to claim of the Post Office on Portuguese Government for payment of postage on letters, newspapers, &c., conveyed between Lisbon and South America by the Pacific Steam Navigation Company, under Post Office Convention of 1859. Objection raised by the Director of the Portuguese Post Office that "mail packets" should be maintained is beside the question | 121 |

PRUSSIA.

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 196 | Queen's Advocate | April 16, 1870 | Her Majesty's Custom-house authorities have no power to seize and detain the books of a commercial firm suspected of an intention to defraud the revenue | 122 |
| 197 | Law Officers | May 6, | Claim of Mr. D. M. Stiebel, the minor son of a naturalized British subject, to be supplied with a British passport. As the father did not continue to reside in England as required by the Naturalization Act, the passport should be refused | 122 |
| 198 | Law Officers | July 19, | Claim of the North German Government for the Governor of Heligoland to be instructed not to allow any but English ships of war to have pilots. Prohibition should apply to both belligerents | 123 |
| 199 | Law Officers | 25, | As to the employment of colliers from Newcastle in conveying coals to the French fleet, the German Minister should be informed that Her Majesty's Proclamation of Neutrality only warns Her Majesty's subjects against the risk of capture if they engage in contraband adventures, but Her Majesty's Government cannot undertake to prevent export of arms or munitions of war to either belligerent. Ships must not be chartered specially for French Government | 123 |
| 200 | Law Officers | Aug. 10, | As to measures proposed by German Minister in England to prevent the shipment of coals, avowedly for German or Baltic ports, but really exported for supply of the French fleet. Her Majesty's Government have no power to stop these vessels, unless evidence is shown they are intended for French naval service | 124 |
| 201 | Queen's Advocate | 22, | As to the transport of French and Prussian wounded through the neutral territory of Luxembourg to Aix-la-Chapelle, with the consent of the Grand Duke; although it would be in accordance with the spirit of the Treaty of Geneva, the Powers guaranteeing Luxembourg must first give their consent | 124 |
| 202 | Queen's Advocate | 24, | As to permission being given to British subjects (Messrs. Gardiner, Parker, and Scott) to enter the Prussian service as surgeons without Her Majesty's special licence | 125 |
| 203 | Law Officers | 25, | As to the transport of wounded Prussian subjects through Luxembourg. Agree in Report of Queen's Advocate on 22nd instant | 126 |
| 204 | Law Officers | 27, | As to complaint of German Ambassador in England against French fleet, and store ships, being allowed to frequent waters of Heligoland. Denial of Governor of Heligoland that the rules of Her Majesty's Government have not been infringed, should not be questioned | 126 |

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 205 | Queen's Advocate | Sept. 3, 1870 | Prussian and French wounded being taken into Belgium and tended there in a Prussian military hospital, would not be consistent with Belgian neutrality | 127 |
| 206 | Law Officers | 5, | On Memorandum of Count Bernstorff, complaining that the permission given by Her Majesty's Government for the export of arms and war material to France, was inconsistent with an attitude of benevolent neutrality. Reports that Her Majesty's Government cannot alter the rules of international law to suit the interests of particular nations | 127 |
| 207 | Queen's Advocate | 14, | As to instructions to be sent to Her Majesty's Consul at Dantzig on the alleged insufficiency of the French blockade in the Baltic | 128 |
| 208 | Queen's Advocate | 14, | As to the instructions to be sent to Lord A. Loftus relative to the case of the French vessel "Nativité." Prussian Prize Courts must be left to construe their own declaration, and decide whether Mr. Kennedy was wrong in urging the Captain of the vessel to continue his voyage to a German port | 128 |
| 209 | Queen's Advocate | 29, | On refusal of the Mayor of Liverpool to give up the name of the vessel, that had shipped ammunition for Spain, to the North German Consul. If the powder magazines and contents were private property, the owner's servant could not be called on to make any declaration, but Her Majesty's Government should make inquiry as to fraudulent shipments of ammunition ostensibly for Spain | 129 |
| 210 | Queen's Advocate | Oct. 13, | As to the effect the new Naturalization Law may have on the right of children of natural-born British subjects, born and resident in foreign countries, to contribute to British funds where Consular Chaplains are maintained. The status of such persons still continues to be privileged as British subjects, unless they have made a declaration of alienage | 12 |
| 211 | Law Officers | 14, | Further report on complaint of Count Bernstoff that a violation of International law and of English law had been committed in the cases of the "Hypatia" and "Norseman," as well as in the export of arms and war material to France | 130 |
| 212 | Queen's Advocate | Nov. 9, | As to the capture of the German vessel "Frei" by the French vessel "Dessaix" in British waters. Her Majesty's Ambassador might properly direct a claim, to be given in before the Prize Court at Tours, for the restitution of the "Frei" and her cargo, as being captured in neutral waters | 131 |
| 213 | Queen's Advocate | 10, | Case of Mr. Worth, who was captured at Verdun, on attempting to escape from Paris in a balloon, and sent to Versailles to be tried by Court Martial. The German Military Authorities would not be justified in treating him as a neutral subject attempting to break through the German lines. When tried before a Council of War, Her Majesty's Government would be justified in expressing a hope for his release, or that he be only detained in France if he is unable to show he was a bonâ fide passenger, without any unneutral object in view. | 132 |
| 214 | Queen's Advocate | 14, | As to the proposed representation to the French Government relative to the alleged capture of the German vessel "Frei" by the French vessel "Dessaix" in British waters. Not proper to intervene officially, pending the proceedings of the Prize Court, unless justice in the case was doubtful | 133 |
| 215 | Queen's Advocate | 19, | As to the instructions that should be sent to Her Majesty's Consul at Hamburgh, relative to protests noted by masters of British vessels which have been, or may be detained in the River Elbe. They should be recorded as documents to be taken in evidence for civil purposes | 134 |
| 216 | Queen's Advocate | 19, | Messrs. Harris and Co., owners of the "Fulmar," not entitled to compensation for detention at Cuxhaven; the vessel when fired at was within the waters of the Elbe and subject to the jurisdiction of the North German Confederation when compelled to return | 134 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 217 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | Nov. 22, 1870 | Case of Mr. Worth attempting to leave Paris in a balloon already reported on by Queen's Advocate, but do not agree with him "that it would be an abuse of belligerent rights if the German authorities were to send Mr. Worth for trial before a belligerent Court-martial." Friendly representations might be made in his behalf | 136 |
| 218 | Law Officers | 29, | No sufficient case to prosecute the steam-vessel "Vigilant" under Foreign Enlistment Act for alleged conveyance of arms and munitions of war from Poplar to Cherbourg. Queen's Advocate suggests the word "directly" should be inserted after "munitions of war" | 136 |
| 219 | Queen's Advocate | Dec. 12, | As to the instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Consul at Altona on claim of Mr. Rainer, a British subject domiciled there, for his son's exemption from conscription. Children of British subjects born abroad, and residing there, cannot claim privileges of British subjects | 137 |
| 220 | Law Officers | 14, | Case of the "Vigilant." Further report on Count Bernstorff's wish for Her Majesty's Government to prosecute under the Foreign Enlistment Act for the traffic in arms and munitions of war. Consul at Cherbourg might inquire how and where the goods have been landed and disposed of | 137 |
| 221 | Law Officers | 20, | As to the course to be pursued against the British vessel "International" for breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act. Alleged intention of laying a telegraph cable for the French Government | 138 |
| 222 | Law Officers | 21, | If proof can be given of an agreement with French authorities, Mr. Mumford may be prosecuted under the Foreign Enlistment Act for employing the British steam-tug in towing the "Lord Brougham," a German vessel captured by a French man-of-war, from the Downs off Deal to Dunkirk | 139 |
| 223 | Law Officers | 24, | Nothing to alter opinion given as to the detention of the British vessel "International" for attempt to lay down a telegraph cable for the French Government. The Company must apply to the Court of Admiralty for her release. Form of warrant should be prepared | 139 |
| 224 | Law Officers | 27, | As to the offer of Mr. Gray, General Manager of the India-rubber and Telegraph Company, to reland from the "International" the telegraph cable, and not to lay it for the French Government during the war. The vessel may be released if security is given. Warrant should be issued for that purpose | 140 |
| 225 | Law Officers | 28, | Case of the "International." Nothing in Memorial of the parties to alter opinion already given. Vessel should not be allowed to depart with the telegraph cable on board or to deliver the cable to the French Government. The ship to be detained until a bond in due form is given | 140 |
| 226 | Law Officers | 28, | As to steps to be taken relative to the seizure by Prussian troops of six British vessels in the River Seine, and sinking them there | 141 |
| 227 | Law Officers | 30, | Case of Mr. Worth. As to the reported statement of Count Bismarck that all persons picked up out of French balloons falling within German lines should be shot as spies. Modern warfare would not justify such extreme measures, if persons entered lines of a belligerent army, without any treacherous intention | 141 |

ROME.

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 228 | Queen's Advocate | Apr. 16, 1870 | The Pope had the right to require Miss Dawkins, together with her two friends, Miss Cunliffe and Miss Greenstreet, and a female servant, to quit Rome without assigning any reason for it | 142 |

RUSSIA.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 229 | Law Officers | Aug. 27, 1870 | As to instructions to be sent to Her Majesty's Consul at Riga relative to the transfer of the North German vessel "Evelina Schroeder" to a British subject. If neither of the parties to the transfer were in the port at the time, the Consul cannot interfere | 143 |
| 230 | Law Officers | Sept. 21, | Case of the "Evelina Schroeder." As to satement of Messrs. Damison and Sons, insufficient to alter opinion already given | 143 |
| 231 | Law Officers | 21, | Further on case of the "Evelina Schroeder" and on provincial Certificates of Registry. Agree with Board of Trade, the transfer must take place when the vessel is in some foreign port | 143 |
| 232 | Queen's Advocate | Oct. 12, | As to an embargo on a cargo of mahogany belonging to Messrs. Borstelmann and Leib. No British Statute authorizing a British Consul to sequester the property of a British subject in a foreign country, for a debt due from him to the estate of a creditor whose affairs are under liquidation, under the Bankruptcy Act | 144 |
| 233 | Queen's Advocate | Dec. 9, | On explanation of the British Vice-Consul at Nicolaieff respecting a sequester placed by him on a cargo of mahogany belonging to Messrs. Borstelmann and Leib, bankrupts. Must not act officially | 144 |

SIAM.

| 234 | Law Officers | Feb. 23, 1870 | On petition of Mr. R. S. Scott, forwarded by Messrs. Shaen and Roscoe, for restitution of certain books and papers relating to his trial for being accessory to the loss of the vessel "Erin," and which were handed over to the Governor of Singapore. Course suggested by Mr. Consul Alabaster may be followed | 145 |
| 235 | Law Officers | May 30, | As to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in certain cases in Siam. If certain powers vested in the Supreme Court at Singapore are to be transferred, must be by Act of Parliament | 145 |
| 236 | Law Officers | Oct. 24, | On further letter from Messrs. Shaen and Roscoe on case of Mr. Scott. They should be informed that his property was distributed to the creditors of the estate, not as bankrupt property, but as property forfeited to the Crown | 146 |

SPAIN.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 237 | Law Officers | Jan. 15, 1870 | Gase of the "Criticado." As to claim of Mr. Marcella on part of the owners for payment of damages, awarded against them in 1864. Doubt as to expediency of re-opening the question | 147 |

1870

| No. | | Date. | Subject | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 238 | Law Officers .. | Jan. 17, 1870 | Opinion on Draft Despatches to Consul Livingstone at Fernando Po, as to the administration of the estate of an intestate British subject | 147 |
| 239 | Law Officers .. | 24, | Case of the "Tornado." As to reply to be sent to Mr. Campbell with respect to the offer made by Spanish Government to place 1,500*l.* in the hands of Her Majesty's Government for distribution amongst the crew but not to the officers | 148 |
| 240 | Law Officers .. | Mar. 11, | As to claim of Mr. Saccone, agent to Messrs. Bibby and Company, of Liverpool, the owners of the steam-ship "Tiber," which towed the Italian ship "Elvezia" into the port of Almeria in a sinking condition. Her Majesty's Government should not support his claim against Spanish Government for releasing the "Elvezia" | 148 |
| 241 | Queen's Advocate | 17, | Case of Mr. Jencken | 149 |
| 242 | Queen's Advocate | Apr. 4, | Case of Mr. Jencken | 150 |
| 243 | Law Officers .. | 10, | As to the power of Her Majesty's Government to prevent or delay the sale of vessels seized and condemned at Nassau for breaches of the revenue laws, so as not to fall into the hands of the Cuban insurgents. Condition of the auction should be that the buyer must give security against employment of the vessels contrary to the provisions of Foreign Enlistment Act | 150 |
| 244 | Queen's Advocate | 19, | Claim of Mr. J. C. Hill against Spanish Government on refusal of authorities in Cuba to allow him to land. Her Majesty's Government should not interfere | 151 |
| 245 | Law Officers .. | 29, | Case of the "Tornado." As to reply to be sent to Mr. Forbes Campbell, with reference to the place where the vessel was seized. Suggests alteration | 151 |
| 246 | Law Officers .. | May 13, | As to the proposed sale of arms and other warlike stores seized on board the "Lilian," one of the vessels condemned at Nassau for breach of the revenue laws. Must be sold by public auction, and if to an agent of the Cuban insurgents, goods to be again put up to auction | 152 |
| 247 | Law Officers .. | 19, | Case of the "Chieftain," formerly Her Majesty's ship "Mutine," about to leave the Thames, said to have been sold to the Japanese Government, but suspected to be destined for the Cuban insurgents,—not to detain her without good grounds for suspicion | 152 |
| 248 | Law Officers .. | 30, | Terms on which Mr. Forbes Campbell will accept from Spanish Government 1,500*l.* on behalf of the officers and crew of the "Tornado," is an indirect refusal of the terms of Spanish note. Her Majesty's Government cannot do more than request the Spanish Government to allow the officers to participate in the award | 153 |
| 249 | Queen's Advocate | June 2, | As to claim of Messrs. Irving, Elsworth, and Holmes for intervention of Her Majesty's Government to prevent the sequestration of the bankrupt estate of Messrs. Morales and Company, of Cardenas in Cuba | 153 |
| 250 | Law Officers .. | July 14, | On the proposed course to be pursued by Governor Sir J. Walker, on the sale of the "Lilian" at Nassau. If the parties claiming as seizors give their consent, no practical objection to it, as the local Act would require it to be sold by auction | 154 |
| 251 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 2, | Cannot advise the re-opening of the case of the "Eliza." The affidavit produced by Mr. J. Ellis tends to strengthen the case of the Spanish authorities | 155 |
| 252 | Law Officers .. | 8, | The Governor of the Bahamas may properly act under the Colonial Act, 17 Vic., c. 3, in the cases of the vessels "Violin" and "Tweed" condemned by the Vice-Admiralty Court of the Colony, under the Foreign Enlistment Act | 155 |
| 253 | Queen's Advocate | Oct. 27, | Case of Mr. Jencken | 156 |

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 254 | Queen's Advocate | Nov. 11, 1870 | No sufficient case made out by Messrs. Williams, the alleged owners of the British vessel "John Gray," for compensation on account of her detention by a Spanish gun-boat, off the coast of Cuba. Had not registered her before sending her on fishing excursion. The crew have just complaint, on account of bad treatment from port authorities at Basacoa | 156 |
| 255 | Queen's Advocate | 26, | Cases of the "Margaret Jessie" and "Guanahani." As to the capture and execution of three British subjects from the Bahamas near Cape Romano, off coast of Cuba, by Spanish Authorities, for running the blockade with arms for Cuban insurgents. If the parties were found guilty, full penalty of the law cannot be disputed | 157 |
| 256 | Queen's Advocate | 28, | As to powers of the Spanish Consuls in England with respect to wrecks of Spanish vessels. Liverpool Wreck Association to be informed there is no Treaty with Spain giving him the right to interfere officially | 158 |
| 257 | Queen's Advocate | Dec. 20, | As to the detention by Spanish Authorities of the master and crew of the vessel "Britannia" of Nassau, captured by Spanish gunboat "Vigia" during stress of weather off the coast of Cuba | 158 |
| 258 | Queen's Advocate | 23, | No sufficient case to warrant interference with Spanish Authorities for settlement of claims of Messrs. Irving, Elsworth, and Holmes against the bankrupt estate of Messrs. Morales and Company at Cardenas in Cuba | 159 |
| 259 | Queen's Advocate | 28, | Cannot call upon Spanish Government for the payment of expenses, amounting to 69*l.* 7*s.* 7*d.*, for support of the crew of the vessel "John Gray," seized off Cuba by a Spanish gunboat, until the principal question of the seizure is settled at the Havana | 159 |

| 264 | Law Officers .. | Feb. 5, 1870 | On discharge of Annunziato Bugega, born in Tunis, of Maltese parents, and sent to Malta for trial for murder. Maltese Criminal Court correct. As Provincial Consular Courts have no legal power to send persons for trial there, warrant should be issued by Judge of Supreme Consular Court, and instructions should be sent to Her Majesty's Consuls accordingly | 162 |
| 265 | Law Officers .. | July 14, | On proposal of the Bey of Tunis for the establishment of a Mixed Tribunal to try cases between foreigners and natives. Agree in opinion of Sir Philip Francis that it should be favourably received by Her Majesty's Government. Suggesting modification in proposal | 163 |

TURKEY.

| No |  | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 266 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 16, 1870 | Agree with Mr. Barron, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Constantinople, that Her Majesty's Government should not support claim with respect to alleged contracts for purchase of certain ores in Turkey, and Mr. White should be so informed; Mr. Paterson has no claim to renewal of the concession of the Dagarde mines | 164 |
| 267 | Queen's Advocate | 21, | As to reply to be sent to Mr. Sutherland, whether Her Majesty's Consul at Salonica, had authority to give him a discharge in Bankruptcy, and whether it holds good in England. Would only be operative within Consular district | 165 |
| 268 | Law Officers .. | 23, | No reason to alter opinion given with respect to Mr. Sutherland's bankruptcy in Salonica | 165 |
| 269 | Law Officers .. | 20, | As to the investment of the surplus money in hands of the Danube Navigation Commission in the English funds. Difficulties may be overcome by appointment of trustees | 165 |
| 270 | Law Officers .. | 27, | Hospital dues at Constantinople and Smyrna | 166 |
| 271 | Queen's Advocate | 29, | The vessels constructed in England for the Hungarian Navigation Company, and lying at Turn Severin in the Danube, are legally and equitably to be considered as British vessels, and are entitled to protection from local authorities as such. Want further information before deciding whether the conduct of Hungarian sailors is piratical | 166 |
| 272 | Law Officers .. | Dec. 12, | Draft Rule proposed by Sir Philip Francis, for remuneration of jurors under the Juries' Act 1870, in the Consular Court in the Levant, should be approved, subject to two verbal alterations | 167 |

| 283 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 23, 1870 | As to instructions to be given to Mr. Middleton, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, with respect to certain British claims on Venezuela. Claims of Mr. P. Award, Oliver Romberg, J. P. K. Stevenson, and Félipe Désiré, to be considered as "expressly reserved." Those of Christian Christopher, J. Horne, and William Thomas, should be brought before the Government, and to request another Commission to adjudicate upon them. Claims of Messrs. Schloss and Company, and Michelsen, might be supported by Her Majesty's Government, as New Granada has paid her share | 176 |
| 284 | Queen's Advocate | July 1, | As to the legality of the protest of Foreign Representatives at Caracas, against closing of the ports of Maracaibo La Vela and Puerto Cabello by the Venezuelan Government to foreign trade | 177 |
| 285 | Law Officers .. | Aug. 11, | The firing upon the British Merchant vessel "Clemencia" while employed as a packet between Puerto Cabello and St. Thomas, and her subsequent plunder by the "Maparari," a war vessel in service of the rebels, was an act of piracy, and the latter may be seized by any British cruizer wherever she may be found, and tried before a British Court of Admiralty | 178 |
| 286 | Queen's Advocate | 12, | Nothing to alter opinion already given respecting the attack on the British vessel "Clemencia" by the war steamer "Maparari," belonging to the opponents of the present Government of Venezuela | 179 |

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 287 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 13, 1870 | Further Report on course pursued by Venezuelan Government in closing certain ports of the Republic to foreign commerce. Her Majesty's Government should recognise their right to do so .. .. .. .. .. | 179 |
| 288 | Queen's Advocate | Sept. 6, | As to the proceedings of certain war steamers cruizing in waters of Trinidad under Venezuelan colours, and declared by the latter Government to be pirates, no general instructions can be given to Governor of West India Islands, but facilities should be given to Venezuelan Consul if he wishes to arrest them .. .. .. .. .. | 180 |
| 289 | Queen's Advocate | Dec. 12, | The Governor of Trinidad should be instructed to report if the "Guzman Blanco," a Venezuelan vessel of war, interferes with any British vessel, and also whether any prohibition has been issued against foreign vessels trading with ports of Guira. No case at present for interference of Her Majesty's Government .. .. .. .. .. | 180 |

ZANZIBAR.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 290 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 3, 1870 | As to the validity of two marriages performed at Zanzibar, the one in presence of Dr. Seward, then acting as Consul under authority, as Registrar of Marriages appointed by the Indian Government, but without a marriage warrant, and the other by Bishop Tozer, in the Bishop's Chapel, Zanzibar, and certified to by Dr. Kirk, Acting Consul and Registrar of Marriages. Both instances very questionable. Might be declared valid by Act of Parliament .. .. | 18 |
| 291 | Law Officers .. | Apr. 11, | As to rights of jurisdiction in Zanzibar over certain native subjects of Kutch, who had waived their claim to British protection. Separate opinion of the Queen's Advocate .. | 182 |
| 292 | Law Offices .. | May 4, | As to the legality of two marriages performed at Zanzibar by a clergyman of the Church of England. Agree with Law Officers' opinion expressed in 1866 that they are valid. Further opinion of the Queen's Advocate .. .. | 183 |

Temple, July 12, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion upon an important question that has been raised as to the constitution of certain Courts of Equity established at various trading places on the West Coast of Africa, beyond Her Majesty's jurisdiction.

That these Courts have been formed either by Treaty or agreement with the native Chiefs to settle disputes between the natives and traders, and that they have exercised the power of inflicting punishments and levying fines. That they have provided a simple and efficient means of administering justice and settling disputes, and that their decisions have always been acknowledged and obeyed both by the natives and traders on the West Coast.

A statement was inclosed showing by what authority and in what manner these Courts were constituted.

That in a case which was recently brought before Mr. Chalmers, the Chief Magistrate of the British Colonial Court at Cape Coast, the particulars of which we should learn from the inclosed correspondence, the defendant pleaded in his favour a decision previously given by one of the Courts of Equity, but that the Judge set aside the plea on the ground that there was no evidence of the legal competency of the Court in question.

That this decision has given rise to a serious question as to the competence of all these Courts of Equity, and Mr. Otway was therefore to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our advice upon the following points:—

1st. Whether the Court of Equity at Brass (the one in question) and those at other places on the West Coast established under similar circumstances in the territories of independent chiefs and acknowledged by them, are legally constituted, and whether their decisions can be considered as having legal force; if not, what measures, if any, can be taken to place them upon a proper footing?

2nd. Whether the decision of Mr. Chalmers was right and proper in the case in point under the circumstances as they were laid before him.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report:—

That the Courts in question appear to us to be useful institutions, to the working of which it is undesirable to oppose obstacles. It may perhaps be worth the consideration of Her Majesty's Government whether means might not be taken to encourage and improve such tribunals, and possibly even to place them by legislation on some more recognized footing. At present, however, we are unable to advise your Lordship that the judgments of these Courts are entitled to the same respect in law as the judgments of the regularly constituted tribunals of recognized and civilized communities.

It does not appear further that the protection of the judgment of the so-called

Court was set up and claimed by the defendant in a proper manner, and on both these grounds we are of opinion that the judgment of the Chief Justice was correct.

We have, &c.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received August 18.)

Temple, August 16, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 13th instant, stating that, with reference to the report of the Law Officers of the 4th ultimo, respecting the question of the legal powers of the Courts of Equity on the West Coast of Africa, as raised by a decision of the Chief Magistrate of the British Court at Cape Coast Castle in a case which had previously been settled by the Court of Equity at Brass, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a further correspondence with Messrs. Irvine and Woodward and with the African Association upon this subject; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would have the goodness to favour your Lordship, at my early convenience, with my opinion whether the reply, of which a draft was inclosed, which your Lordship proposes to return to the applicants is right and proper, and, if not, that I would suggest any alterations in it that I may think proper.

The former papers, previously referred to the Law Officers, were therewith returned.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I have ventured to suggest a few alterations in the draft reply to Messrs. Irvine and Woodward. It would seem from the question raised in their letter of the 6th ultimo, that they have a confused notion of some conflict of territorial jurisdiction between Her Majesty's Consul at Fernando Po and the Judge of the Court at Cape Coast Castle, and that they have overlooked the fact that a British subject may sue another British subject personally for a breach of contract in any British Court if the parties come within its jurisdiction, no matter where the contract may have been entered into. I am not informed under what Order in Council or other authority the Court at Cape Coast Castle is constituted, but it would have been equally competent for it on general principles to have entertained a personal action between the parties in question even if Her Majesty's Consul at Fernando Po had been authorized, under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, to exercise jurisdiction within the district between the Bights of Benin and Biafra.

I have, &c.

Sir,

WITH reference to your letter of the 19th ultimo, stating that you were directed by Earl Granville to transmit to me a copy of a Convention between Her Majesty and the President of the United States of America, signed at Washington on the 3rd June, and the ratifications of which would be exchanged here within a very short time; that the object of this Convention, which was additional to the Treaty signed at Washington on the 7th of April, 1862, for the suppression of the Slave Trade, and carried into effect by the Act 25 and 26 Vict., cap. 40, was to rescind so much of that Treaty as provides for the establishment of Mixed Courts of Justice for the adjudication of captures of Slave-trading vessels, and to provide that such vessels shall be handed over to the jurisdiction of their own country, and that you were to request that I would prepare and submit to the Law Officers, as soon as possible, the draft of a Bill to be brought into Parliament for giving effect to the new Convention.

Temple, April 22, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th April instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acquaint us that he had received from the Archbishop of Canterbury the inclosed Memorial,* addressed to the Queen, praying for Her Majesty's licence under the Act 5 Vict., cap 6, in order to enable his Grace to consecrate the Reverend Thomas Edward Wilkinson, M.A., to be Bishop of the United Church of England and Ireland to the inhabitants of Zululand and the tribes towards the River Zambesi in Africa. Mr. Hammond was also pleased to transmit to us the draft of a licence to the effect prayed for by the Archbishop, and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether there is any objection to the licence being issued.

Mr. Hammond further stated that, as bearing upon this subject, he was to refer us to two Reports addressed by Her Majesty's Law Officers to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonial Department, under date of the 5th October and 20th December, 1858, relative to the consecration of the late Bishop Mackenzie, and especially to the Report of Her Majesty's Law Officers to the Foreign Office, dated the 13th and 29th January, 1863, relative to the consecration of Bishop Tozer and Bishop Twells.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that there is no legal objection to the licence being issued, subject to a slight variation in the designation of the Bishop, so as to bring it into more strict conformity with the language of the Statute, and with the language of the first licence granted under the Statute for the consecration of Dr. Alexander.

We have inserted the proposed variation in the margin of the licence.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received September 20.)

Temple, September 19, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed to request that I would furnish your Lordship, at my earliest convenience, with my opinion as to the proper reply to return to the questions put in the accompanying letter from the Company of African Merchants, the facts of the case being stated in the annexed memorandum.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. Tobin should be requested to furnish further information as to the English house, which is fitting out a steamer of war for the purpose of blockading the River Opobo and attacking Ja Ja.

Meanwhile inquiries should be made at Liverpool whether Mr. Palmer, who purchased the late brig of war "Steady," with the intention of her being employed by a company of merchants on the African coast, is connected with either of the rival African Companies.

Upon the general question raised in Mr. Tobin's letter, before any answer is given by your Lordship which would commit Her Majesty's Government to any declaration of opinion as to there being a state of war on the Bonny River which would invest the rival Chiefs with the rights of belligerent nations, I should wish for more precise information as to the language and measures adopted by Her Majesty's Consul in "warning British subjects not to assist either party, and to discontinue trading with the River Opobo during the continuance of hostilities."

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received September 29.)

Temple, September 29, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 21st instant, stating that with reference to my report of the 19th instant upon the subject of the questions raised by the Company of African Merchants with respect to the hostile measures alleged to be contemplated by the African Chiefs at Bonny and by their rival Ja Ja, he was directed to transmit to me, in compliance with my request, the correspondence that has taken place upon the subject of this quarrel, in order to enable me to form an opinion as to whether a state of war can be said to exist in the Bonny River which would invest the rival Chiefs with the rights of belligerents, and to advise your Lordship as to the proper answer to return to Mr. Tobin's letter.

Mr. Otway was also pleased to add that inquiries will be made at Liverpool and of the African Company, in accordance with my suggestions, as to the alleged purchase of a vessel of war in this country for the use of one of the contending parties.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that a state of hostilities exists, and has been recognized in the correspondence of Her Majesty's Government to exist, in the Bonny River, which would invest the rival Chiefs with the rights of belligerents, and which would expose any persons within Her Majesty's dominions to proceedings under the Foreign Enlistment Act of 1870, if they should dispatch any vessel of war to be employed in the naval service of Ja Ja and his confederates against the King of Bonny, and that Mr. Tobin should be informed that he cannot safely engage in any such enterprise.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received October 8.)

My Lord, Temple, October 7, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 30th ultimo (received this day) stating that with reference to my report of the 29th ultimo upon the subject of the war in Bonny, he was directed to transmit to me three further despatches from Consul Livingstone reporting the steps he has taken to bring the quarrel between the rival Chiefs to arbitration, and to request that I would furnish your Lordship, at my earliest convenience, with my opinion whether the proceeding of Her Majesty's Consul in temporarily stopping the trade of the River Opobo under the circumstances stated in his despatches, is inconsistent with the promised neutrality of Her Majesty's Government, or with the recognition which, I advised, was implied in their correspondence of a state of hostilities between the rival Chiefs.

Mr. Otway was pleased to add that it must be borne in mind that the trade is reported to be entirely in the hands of British subjects, who have doubtless assisted one of the belligerent parties, and continued to trade, notwithstanding the advice and remonstrances of the Consul and Her Majesty's Government.

The previous papers were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

Mr. Otway was also further pleased to inclose a letter received from the Admiralty containing a report of the proceedings of Commander Jones, of Her Majesty's ship "Pert," in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it would be difficult to say that the course adopted by Her Majesty's Consul has been in accordance with strict neutrality on the part of Her Majesty's Government as between the contending parties on the Opobo River. The intervention of Her Majesty's ship "Pert" has been rather an act of armed mediation, the propriety of which can hardly be measured by the ordinary European standards.

If it was the intention of Her Majesty's Government to remain strictly neutral between Ja Ja and the Bonny Chiefs, and to allow them to fight their quarrel out, no matter with what injury to British subjects trading in those parts, Her Majesty's Consul has not carried out that intention, but it appears to me that the circumstances under which this quarrel was fomented by rival traders on the Opobo for selfish purposes, coupled with the fact that Ja Ja voluntarily accepted the mediation of Her Majesty's Consul, and then repudiated it, warranted Her Majesty's Consul in putting some pressure on Ja Ja, sufficient to counteract the influence of those traders who were thriving upon the quarrel and interested in preventing the restoration of peace.

There is an incidental circumstance in this case, to which I would beg to call your Lordship's attention, arising out of the letter of Her Majesty's Consul of August 25, 1870, in which he states that Mr. Chetham, of Bonny, told him on the 22nd instant that he had actually bought the "Steady" in England, but ordered her to be sold on hearing that in protecting Opobo traders Her Majesty's Consul could only regard her English crew as pirates should they fire at their own countrymen.

As the "Steady" is at present under observation at Liverpool, and Mr. Walker, of that town, claims her as his property, and asserts that she was thrown back upon his hands in consequence of a company in Western Africa not completing the purchase of her, it would appear that Mr. Walker, when he contracted to sell her, contemplated dispatching her from this country to be used for war purposes in the Bonny River, and it may be open to doubt whether he is in fact at present the owner of that vessel.

My Lord, Temple, December 14, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office inclosing the draft of a Bill, as amended by us, extending British jurisdiction to crimes and offences committed in the neighbourhood of the several British settlements on the West Coast of Africa (not being British territory) against British subjects or against persons domiciled with any of those Settlements; that it seems to have been the intention of the Secretary of State for the Colonies to limit the operation of this Bill to crimes and offences committed by persons not subjects of any civilized Power; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship of our reasons for omitting this restriction, as it would appear that the alteration would involve the trial and punishment by a British Court of a subject or citizen of any foreign State domiciled in a place where there is no civilized Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the ground on which the proposed extension of British jurisdiction rests is that of necessity—the necessity of protecting life and property in districts where there is no law, and where offenders could not be tried and punished at all, unless tried and punished by British Courts. This necessity appeared to us to extend to the punishment of civilized as well as uncivilized criminals, and we thought that the object of extending our jurisdiction would be in a great degree defeated if it became known that a civilized man was permitted to do with impunity that which was punished as a crime in a savage. We further considered the inconvenience which would arise if it were an available plea on the part of a criminal that he was a citizen of a civilized State, a plea which would lead the Courts into inquiries as to what countries are civilized and what are not, and into questions, often very embarrassing, of citizenship and domicile. In the whole it seemed to us hardly worth while to extend our jurisdiction over certain territories, unless that jurisdiction comprised all persons within them. We feel, however, that this is mainly a question of policy to be determined by Her Majesty's Government.

My Lord, Temple, October 20, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me, in case I might have any observations to offer thereupon, a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Santiago, transmitting the decision of the President of that Republic on the questions submitted to his arbitration by Her Majesty's Government and the Argentine Government, which decision, as I should perceive, has been given against the claims of the British ship-owners. The previous papers, together with a private letter which has been received from Mr. Thomson, was also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship would not be justified, in my opinion, in objecting to the decision of the arbitrator in this case, unless that decision was contrary to reason and justice. There might have been originally grounds of equity for the Argentine Government excepting all the vessels in question from the operation of the Decree of 11th

February, 1845, or at least distinguishing the cases of the "Cestus" and "Sultana" favourably from the rest; but I am unable to advise your Lordship that the adverse Decree of the President of Chile against all the vessels is unreasonable or unjust.

I observe that my predecessor reported to your Lordship's predecessor, on 11th May, 1865, with reference to a Decree issued by the President of the Republic of Chile, dated March 16, 1865, prohibiting neutral vessels from communicating with the Spanish ships of war, under the penalty of not being allowed to touch at, or load in any ports of the Republic; that it was competent to the Government of Chile to make such a Decree in time of war, as a measure of self-defence.

Upon the principles involved in my predecessor's report, from which I see no good ground for departing, and to which I beg leave to refer your Lordship, I am of opinion that the Argentine Republic had a right to put its Decree in force within its own dominions against all neutral vessels, and on that ground the decision of the President of Chile, upholding the application of the Decree to all the vessels in question, does not involve a violation of justice, or conflict with reason.

My Lord, Temple, May 4, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Charles Spring Rice's letter of the 25th April ultimo, stating that he had the honour, by direction of your Lordship, to forward to us a note from the Austrian Ambassador at this Court asking for information as to the proceedings of the Irish Admiralty Court in the case of a collision between an Austrian and a French vessel.

Mr. Rice was also pleased to inclose a letter from the Home Office giving the opinion of the Secretary of State for that Department on the subject; and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration and report to your Lordship our opinion as to what answer should be returned to Count Apponyi.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That his Excellency Count Apponyi may be properly informed that there has existed in Ireland from time immemorial an Instance Court of Admiralty for the determination of causes civil and maritime, and that from the sentences of that Court an appeal lies to Her Majesty in her Chancery of Ireland.

That questions of collisions happening between vessels on the high seas have been held from the earliest times to be questions communis juris maritimi, which law, as between nations, every Admiralty Court is competent to administer, and which questions, as between foreigners coming with their vessel after the collision within the jurisdictional waters of a State, its Admiralty Courts are bound to entertain ob reciprocam gentium utilitatem, in view of the hardships and inconveniences which might be sustained by seafaring men if they had to follow the vessel which had done them injury to its own country.

That his Excellency may be referred to the judgment of the Right Honourable Dr. Lushington in the case of the "Johanna Frederick" (1 May, 1830), reported in 1 William Robinson's Admiralty Reports, p. 40, in which he will find a fuller and more complete exposition of the principles which govern the action of Her Majesty's Admiralty Courts in causes of collision on the high seas, when both the vessels belong to foreign owners, and one of the vessels has been totally lost in consequence of the collision.

My Lord, Temple, August 6, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit therewith the Treaty concluded on the 19th April, 1839, between Great Britain, Austria, France, Prussia, and Russia, by the Ist Article of which the independence and neutrality of Belgium, as stipulated in the VIIth Article of the Treaty signed on the same day between the Netherlands and Belgium, was guaranteed by the five Powers; and he was to request that we would report our opinion at our earliest convenience whether such guarantee is joint or several, and whether the refusal or incapacity of one or more of the guaranteeing Powers to act on their guarantee liberates the remaining Powers from their obligation to do so.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the said Treaty into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that, if the Treaty is to be construed by the rules which govern the construction of contracts by the law of this country, the guarantee is a joint one.

We must point out, however, that the only effect of this construction of a guarantee given by several persons is, that the party entitled to enforce it has to sue all the guarantors jointly. He may, however, enforce the whole of the debt or damages against any one guarantor, who in his turn is able to enforce contribution from his co-guarantors. The term joint-guarantee by no means imports that the guarantee of each is conditional on all the others performing their contract, and that upon one or more refusing to do so the others are released. No such construction would be placed on any guarantee, unless such an intention were clearly expressed in it.

Applying these rules of our municipal law (which we believe to be substantially in accordance in this respect with that of most civilized countries), we reply to Mr. Hammond's second question that the refusal or incapacity of one or more of the guaranteeing Powers to act does not, in our opinion, liberate the remaining Powers from the obligation to do so.

We are quite sensible that other considerations than the strict rules of the municipal law of any country may be applicable to the construction of Treaties. We cannot help thinking, however, that to hold the obligation of each of the five Powers conditional on all the others fulfiling their obligations (a proposition which would lead to the consequence that, if France invaded Belgium, all the other Powers would be thereby released from their obligations to Belgium), would be opposed to the real meaning of the Treaty on any sound principles of construction.

Whether, in the event of none of the co-guaranteeing Powers chosing to co-operate with us, Belgium could reasonably expect Great Britain to undertake single-handed a war against great Continental Powers, is a question into which other elements enter than the strict construction of the Treaty, and on which we do not presume to give an opinion.

My Lord, Temple, August 13, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying papers respecting a claim preferred by the Belgian Minister on behalf of certain Belgian subjects to the right of exporting gunpowder direct from Belgian ports in non-British ships to British colonies, in which, by local regulations, the importation of that article in other than British ships is prohibited or put under exceptional restrictions. The Belgian Minister maintains that such prohibitive and restrictive regulations are inconsistent with the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between this country and Belgium of July 23, 1862, and argues that Article XI of that Treaty, which deals specially with the case of gunpowder, is not applicable to the circumstances. And Mr. Otway was pleased to say that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with my opinion on the matter before replying to the last communication from the Belgian Minister.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the Belgian Minister would appear to be claiming for Belgian subjects under the Treaty of 1862, a greater liberty of trade with the West African Possessions of Her Majesty than is enjoyed by British subjects. He claims, for instance, under Article XV of the Treaty, that Belgian subjects should be allowed to import gunpowder, which is the manufacture of Belgium, direct from Antwerp to the Gambia Settlements, whilst such trade is by a local Ordinance forbidden to British subjects. It does not appear that the local law withholds from gunpowder, as being manfactured in Belgium, any liberty of importation which is permitted to gunpowder of British origin, or that it denies to Belgian subjects or to Belgian vessels any privilege of importing gunpowder which is allowed to British subjects or to British vessels. In the case of both equally a definite locus a quo is the cardinal condition of importation being permitted, and as long as Belgian subjects are allowed, through the special channel of trade prescribed by the local law for this article, the same liberties which are enjoyed by British subjects, I am of opinion that the spirit of the Treaty of 1862 is observed, whilst the letter is in no way violated.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that it would not be a violation of the neutrality of Belgium if, with the consent of the Belgian Government, Prussian and French wounded soldiers should be brought into and tended within Belgian territory under the following conditions:—

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we entirely concur in what the Queen's Advocate has written in its terms. But care should be taken to point out the difference between carrying sick and wounded through a neutral country into the country of one of the belligerents as part of the necessary military operations of war, which would be a breach of the neutral character of the country so used; and taking such portion of the sick and wounded as the neutral country may be willing to receive and keep, and dismiss if cured on condition of not serving again, which we think would not be a breach of neutral character.

We do not understand the Queen's Advocate to be of opinion that the Prussians would be entitled to establish hospitals of their own in Belgium.

Sir,

I AM honoured with your letter of the 25th instant, stating that you were directed to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence relative to the case of the crew of the British vessel "Mary Hamilton," who have been imprisoned and tried for murder of the master of that vessel at Rio de Janeiro in March 1869; and you were pleased to request that I would take this case into my consideration and report my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your commands I have the honour to report—

That as the brawl between the master and crew of the "Mary Hamilton," which led to the death of the master on shore, took place within a Brazilian port, I am of opinion that the Brazilian Courts had ratione loci jurisdiction over the case, and that the local authorities were entitled to try the crew upon a charge of murder or homicide before a Brazilian Court. After the new trial is concluded, if the Court should not have taken a more lenient view of the case as regards some of the prisoners, it may be advisable for them, as suggested by Mr. Mathew, to petition the Emperor, as the state of intoxication in which the master was when the brawl took place appears to me to be a mitigating circumstance to which the Court has not hitherto given sufficient weight.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 6.)

My Lord, Temple, May 5, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Central America, relative to the claims of two persons named Hilario Goussen and Mathew Glenton to be considered British subjects and protected as such, from being obliged to contribute to a forced loan levied by the Government of Nicaragua. That I should observe that the two claims rest on totally different grounds. Goussen is stated to be the natural son of an English mother, and born in British territory, whereas Glenton asserts that he is the legitimate son of a British father, but admits that he was born in Nicaragua. That the Nicaraguan Government deny the validity of either claim, and Mr. Hammond was therefore to request that I would take the inclosed papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course that should be pursued in each case.

The correspondence that took place in 1847 relative to Mr. Goussen was also transmitted.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

Case of Mr. H. Goussen.

That I am of opinion that Mr. Hilario Goussen, if he is the same person who was born at Kingston in Jamaica on 9th May, 1815, and was baptized under that name, is by reason of his place of birth a natural-born subject of the Queen, irrespective of his parentage; and, if he has not contracted any obligations of allegiance to the State of Nicaragua, is entitled to such exemptions as are secured to British subjects by Treaty. But the Nicaraguan Government disputes, it seems, the place of birth of Mr. Hilario Goussen, and asserts that he is a native of Hayti; and it appears, from the despatch of Don Tomas Ayon, of November 29, 1869, that the evidence which Mr. Hilario Goussen has tendered of his nationality has been pronounced by the local authorities defective in point of form. I have no means of judging whether the law of Nicaragua entitles the local authorities to require proof of foreign nationality in any particular form. If it does so, I am of opinion that Mr. Hilario Goussen ought to comply with the law, having done which he may properly receive the protection of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires.

Case of Mr. M. Glenton.

Mr. Mathew Glenton, on the other hand, appears to have been born at Leon in Nicaragua. He is therefore a natural-born citizen of the State of Nicaragua; and, although he may be entitled by British Statute law to the privileges of a natural-born British subject wherever that Statute law is operative, in virtue of his British parentage, I am of opinion that he cannot properly claim, under the Treaty of 1860, to be exempted on the ground of his parentage from any loans to which native citizens are compellable by Nicaraguan law to contribute.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our report of the 9th October, he was directed to transmit to us, together with the previous papers, a letter from the Colonial Office containing observations on a Memorandum furnished to that Department by the Home Office respecting the proposed Hong Kong Ordinance for the extradition of fugitives from justice from Macao; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the same into consideration and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have read with attention the Memorandum of Mr. Hugesson and the remarks of Lord Granville thereupon. So far as relates to any matter reported upon by us in the report we had the honour to submit to Lord Granville on the 9th October, 1869, we see no reason to alter or qualify any opinion therein expressed. The changes of phraseology suggested by Mr. Hugesson appear to us to be unnecessary, but (if it be thought desirable to alter the mere wording of the Ordinance) to be unobjectionable. Some inaccuracies of reference which he has pointed out should be amended. With regard to the important question as to the tribunal, a power which is to decide upon the political or non-political character of the offence as to which extradition is demanded, we agree with the remarks which Lord Granville has made upon it, but we beg leave to repeat what we suggested in our last report, that this, and some other questions which arise upon the Ordinance, are rather for your Lordship's discretion than for our opinion.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of December 30, 1869, stating that with reference to our Report of the 29th instant, upon the Land Regulations for the British, French, and other Concessions at Shanghae, which had been provisionally sanctioned by the Representatives of the Treaty Powers at Pekin, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch which had been received from Her Majesty's Minister in China upon that subject, and he was to request that we would take this despatch into our consideration, and inform your Lordship whether it alters the opinion conveyed in our before-mentioned Report.

Sir Rutherford Alcock's previous despatch was therewith returned to us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th December ultimo stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in China in regard to the registration of British subjects resident in Peking, and also to transmit to us a Memorandum which had been drawn up at the Foreign Office upon the subject, together with a copy of Her Majesty's Commission, which Sir Rutherford Alcock holds as Chief Superintendent of Trade in China, and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the reply which should be returned to Sir Rutherford Alcock.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That as it appears from the Memorandum that the limits of the Consulate at Tien-tsin under the Consular Commission do not extend to Peking, Sir Rutherford Alcock may be properly informed that Peking, for the purposes of the registration of resident British subjects, under Section 114 of the Order in Council of 1865, is not to be understood to lie in the Consular district of Tien-tsin. We are of opinion, however, that with a view of providing against any mischief which might arise from the fact that Peking appears not to be within any Consular jurisdiction, it would be desirable either to confer Consular authority on some member of Her Majesty's Legation resident at Peking, and to make Peking a Consular district, or else to incorporate Peking within some other Consular district, and to give the Consul for such district Consular jurisdiction at Peking.

We have no materials before us for advising your Lordship as to which of these courses be preferable, and we should suggest that Sir R. Alcock should be requested to report on their relative merits, and that inquiry should be made as to which Consular district might best be extended so as to include Peking.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir Edmund Hornby, Chief Judge of the Supreme Court for China and Japan, respecting a question raised by Her Majesty's Consul at Foochow-foo with regard to the exclusive Admiralty jurisdiction conferred on the Supreme Court by the Order in Council of 1865, together with a letter from the Board of Trade, to whom Sir Edmund Hornby's despatch was referred; and he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

No. 30.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 9.)

My Lord, Temple, March 8, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 24th January, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Minister in China in regard to certain outstanding claims of British subjects against the Chinese Government, and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with any observations I may have to offer thereupon.

I am also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th ultimo, transmitting a further despatch from Sir R. Alcock respecting the British claims on the Chinese Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

The Nanzing Claims.

That, as I understand the state of these claims at present from the despatch of the Prince of Kung of January 16, 1869, the only outstanding claims are those on the third list, nine in number, which, according to the Prince's statement, had either no vouchers, or the vouchers produced were not satisfactory, or transit papers were produced in lieu of tax receipts, or the vouchers bore the endorsement of a native firm. The suggestion in the memorandum that the recorded copies of the tax receipts should be taken as evidence of the payment of the le-kin would not assist these claims, and, in fact, it would appear from the Prince of Kung's despatch that such secondary evidence of the payment of the le-kin in the case of the first and second list of claims has been admitted by the Chinese Government.

The third list of claims would therefore appear to be the only claims for your Lordship's consideration.

They resolve themselves under four heads:—

1. Those for which there are no vouchers that le-kin has been paid. I consider that these claims cannot properly be pressed further.

2. Those for which the vouchers are irregular. If such irregularity regards certain matters of form only, I consider that it ought not to bar the claims being paid, as a voucher, though irregular in point of form, would be primâ facie evidence of the le-kin having been paid, and should prevail, if evidence to the contrary is not forthcoming.

3. Those for which transit papers are produced instead of tax receipts. A claim for repayment of the le-kin could clearly not be maintained upon such evidence.

4. Those for which the vouchers bore the endorsement of a native firm. Two very different explanations are offered in regard to these vouchers. On the side of the claimants, it is said that the barrier officials compelled the persons in whose charge the goods were to let them put in Chinese names. On the side of the Chinese authorities it is said that the silk, when taxed, belonged to Chinese firms, who sold it at Shanghae to foreign merchants, with the tax vouchers, and the foreign merchant, ignorant of the fact that the tax vouchers would bar repayment of the tax to him, brought them forward as proof that he had paid the le-kin. It appears from Sir R. Alcock's despatch to the Prince of Kung of June 19, 1868, that after this lapse of time the evidence of the Chinese who had charge of the goods is not forthcoming. Without some such evidence, however, I consider your Lordship would not be justified in maintaining that the explanation given by the Chinese authorities is inadmissible, for the fact of the vouchers being made out in the name of Chinese firms throws, I think, the burden of proof upon the British claimants.

They may have been wronged, as they assert, but justice is not so clearly on their side as to warrant your Lordship in insisting on the payment of these claims in the absence of any evidence to rebut the case set up by the Chinese authorities.

Ising Yang Claims.

I consider it to be open to grave question whether these claims can be properly pressed against the Chinese Government, on the ground of any infringement of rights secured to British subjects by Treaty. I think your Lordship may reasonably acquiesce in the proposal of the Chinese authorities to pay, as a matter of grace, to Messrs. Jardine, Matheson, and Co., one-third of the estimate of their losses, as originally reported by the Compradore to the Ising Yang Magistracy. The proportion would be in accordance with the Russian precedent, and I think the Chinese Government is entitled to adhere to the original report of the Compradore.

Claim of Hogg Brothers.

The question in this case is whether the Chinese authorities are bound to compel the sureties for the Compradore of Messrs. Hogg to make good to that firm certain defalcations in his accounts. The Chinese authorities say that the sureties were not bound to guarantee the particular trade in which the Compradore was engaged for the firm of Messrs. Hogg when he became a defaulter, that trade not being, by Chinese law, open to foreigners, and, therefore, not within the intention of the bond into which the sureties entered.

It is admitted by Messrs. Hogg that, if the trade was not legal, the sureties would not be liable; but they say that the Tariff Rule No. 3, while it prohibits the import and export of salt to British merchants, is silent as regards the internal traffic in salt, and that the foreign merchant is on the same footing as regards that trade as the native merchant.

I do not find any warrant for this argument in the Treaty of Tien-tsin, or the preceding Treaties. It assumes that British merchants are entitled to perfect liberty of trade within the Chinese dominions, unless they are restrained by the Tariff Rules, but no such privilege is, in my opinion, conceded by the Treaties; and, if not so conceded, Messrs. Hogg must show that they are entitled to such privilege under the law of China, which the Prince of Kung denies in his letter of June 16, 1869, as regards internal traffic in salt. I agree with Sir E. Hornby that the fact of the Compradore purchasing the salt in a false name would not prove that the trade was illegal for foreigners to engage in, but, if the fact were so, and the evidence points that way, it would be fatal to the argument of Messrs. Hogg, that the Chinese Government authorized their traffic in salt by issuing transit-passes in the name of their firm. I think your Lordship is bound in comity to acquiesce in the declaration of the Prince of Kung, that the internal trade in salt is confined to a constituted body or Government guild of native merchants, and that it is illegal for foreigners to engage in it.

Claims against the Shang Yu Tai Bank.

I concur in the view taken by Sir E. Hornby of these claims, and consider that the Chinese Government is not directly responsible for the dealings of this Bank with foreign merchants, as regards transactions of commerce not connected with the receipt of Customs duties in accordance with the provisions of Article XXXIII of the Treaty of Tien-tsin. On the other hand, I am of opinion that the Chinese authorities have shown a backwardness, of which your Lordship has just grounds to complain, in fulfilling their engagements under Article XXII of that Treaty to do their utmost to effect the arrest of the proprietors of the Bank, who must be known to the Chinese authorities, and to enforce the recovery of the debts due from the Bank to the British creditors.

With regard to the suggestion of Consul Caine, it would no doubt be a very convenient mode of securing the British creditors from ultimate loss if your Lordship thinks it would be expedient to insist upon the Chinese Government adopting that course, as an alternative, if it is not prepared to fulfil its engagements under Article XXII of the Treaty of Tien-tsin.

Temple, April 9, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to call our attention to the XXVIIIth Article of the Treaty of Tien-tsin,* between Great Britain and China, and to the Rule 7 annexed to it;† to the Ist Article of the Treaty of Nankin,‡ which, though superseded by the later Treaty, has still a bearing on the points that he was to submit to us; to the IIIrd and IVth Articles of a supplementary Convention recently concluded with China,§ but awaiting ratification; to the 1st and 2nd Rules annexed to the same, and to the passage marked in Sir R. Alcock's despatch of October 28, 1869,§ explanatory thereof; to the passages in the inclosed Memorial from merchants interested in the China trade,‖ under the 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th heads; to the observations made by a deputation of merchants, which waited on your Lordship on the 28th February, and to your Lordship's reply, and specifically to the passages marked therein, and to a letter¶ in which Mr. Hammond recorded the substance of his own observations in a conversation with two members of the deputation a few days subsequent to the discussion with that body; to a letter from Her Majesty's Consul at Shanghae, explaining the practice now observed under the XXVIIIth Article and 7th Rule of the Treaty of Tien-tsin;†† and to the passages of the Earl of Elgin's correspondence having reference to the negotiation of the Treaty of Tien-tsin, and the Rules annexed to it, as marked in pages 173, 402, and 426 of the accompanying collection of papers laid before Parliament in 1859.

2. That the points to which he was to call our attention, we would perceive, were 1st, the right of transit secured to British goods into the interior of China, under the Treaty and Rule of 1858; and 2ndly, the right which would be secured to them under the Treaty and Rule of 1869. Mr. Hammond was pleased to say that the Treaty of Nankin reserved to subjects of China alone the right to convey British goods into the interior, on payment of a transit duty, which, however, was not fixed. The Treaty of Tien-tsin, in the 1st clause of the XXVIIIth Article, laid down the principles on which such duty should be estimated, and provided for notification of its amount being published in the English and Chinese languages; but in the 2nd clause of the same Article permission was secured for British merchants themselves to convey their own goods into the interior on payment of a transit duty of 2½ per cent., and in consequence of the transit duty being so fixed, the 7th Rule, by its last clause, dispensed with the publication of any such notification as was provided for in the 1st clause of the XXVIIIth Article.

3. That in that state of Treaty and Rule the following questions had arisen:—

(1.) What was the extent of the immunity from inland taxation, secured to British goods on payment of the transit duty, under the existing provisions of the Treaty of Tien-tsin, and the rules annexed thereto, read in connection with the Ist Article of the Treaty of Nankin? And does such immunity, to whatever extent it is conceded, apply to such goods equally, whether British or Chinese owned?

(2.) Do the provisions of the supplementary Convention awaiting ratification, to which reference has been made, extend or diminish, and, if so, in what manner and to what extent the privileges secured by the existing Treaty in that respect?

(a.) As regards the Treaty port provinces of China, whether the payment of transit duty will exempt all British goods, however owned, from all inland taxation, Imperial or local, not only during their transit to particular markets, but after they have passed into general circulation in the interior of such provinces.

(b.) As regards the non-Treaty provinces, whether, under the Treaty and Rule of 1869, and specifically under the concluding paragraph of the 1st Rule, namely, "on the arrival of such certificated commodities at the place set forth in the certificate, the certificate will become invalid, and the commodities having arrived at the place of destination will be liable to whatever inland charges, dues, or duties the locality they are found in collects, and will thenceforth be treated like native commodities in the localities concerned," British goods transmitted beyond the frontier of the so-called Treaty provinces under a transit pass would, on their arrival at the place of destination, become liable at once to the payment of the inland duties, dues, and charges referred to, even though they should not have passed out of the hands of the British transporter into the general circulation of the country, but be stored in his warehouse pending an opportunity for selling them to native purchasers.

4. That the matter being rather complicated, Mr. Hammond had been directed to draw our particular attention to the points named, but he was to add that your Lordship would be glad to receive any observations bearing on the points of transit and interior duties which, on considering the subject, might suggest themselves to us.

5. That your Lordship would be obliged by our early attention to that reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's command we have the honour to report—

That (1) we are of opinion that the immunity from inland duties, which is secured to goods imported by British subjects in virtue of the transit-duty certificate under the provisions of Article XXVIII of the Treaty of Tien-tsin and the Rules annexed to it, extends to all duties leviable on such goods whilst they are on their way from the port where they have been landed to the inland market named in the certificate, and exempts them also from municipal taxation, either general or local, and whether applicable to goods in store or in general circulation, but that such immunity applies only to goods British owned. Goods so imported and Chinese owned, if the Supplementary Convention should not be ratified, would appear to us to be within the provisions of Article X of the Treaty of Nanking (Hertslet, vol. vi., p. 224) and the Declaration of June 26, 1843 (ibid, 231), that Treaty and Declaration having been renewed and confirmed by Article I of the Treaty of Tien-tsin (Hertslet, vol. xi., p. 86).

We consider that the Supplementary Treaty now awaiting ratification extends the privileges secured to goods imported by British merchants which are subject to import duty.

1. It authorizes such goods, if they are of the classes specified in Article III of that Convention, upon payment of import duty and transit due simultaneously at the port of importation, to be circulated generally, whether British owned or Chinese owned, within the Treaty port provinces without any transit-duty certificate, and to be sold freely along the road without being liable to any other tax or charge, local or Imperial; and in regard to all other foreign merchandize, whether British owned or Chinese owned, if full import duty on it has been paid on importation, and the tariff transit due upon leaving the port where it was landed, it will be exempt from all dues or charges en route until it reaches its place of destination, as set out in the certificate, if that place is within the Treaty port provinces.

2. With regard to the non-Treaty port provinces a like exemption from all duties and charges en route is secured to foreign imports, whether British owned or Chinese owned, whilst on their way from the port where they were landed to any place in such provinces set out in a transit certificate, which must be procured at the port, provided the goods are of the classes specified in Article III, and import duty and transit due have been simultaneously paid on them. We are of opinion, however, that the exemption secured to such goods terminates on their arrival at their place of destination, set out in the transit certificate, and on their immediate arrival there they will be liable to such inland charges as the locality in which they are found collects, although they may remain stored in the warehouse of the Bitish transporter pending an opportunity for selling them to native purchasers.

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Sir E. Hornby, Chief Judge of Her Majesty's Supreme Court for China and Japan, in regard to the difficulty which he had recently experienced in enforcing the sections of the Order in Council of 1855 relative to registration, a copy of which is also inclosed.

Hornby to himself on the same subject, and he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the registration fee is objectionable either in principle or in law.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there is no objection in principle or law in our opinion to the practice of British subjects who may be resident in Japan being required to register themselves at the British Consulate in order to entitle themselves to be recognized or protected by the British authorities in Japan as British subjects; and, as such registration is for the benefit of the respective parties, we think it reasonable that each person when registered should be required to contribute by the payment of a moderate fee towards defraying the expense of the registration of which he receives a certificate. We see no objection to your Lordship writing as suggested, if you yourself think fit to do so.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th instant, stating with reference to our report of the 23rd June, that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous papers, further despatches from Mr. Wade respecting the registration of British subjects in China, and that he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the manner of levying the registration fee under the China Order in Council, and its amount, and also on the question raised by Mr. Wade as to whether it is incumbent on Her Majesty's Consuls to prosecute British subjects who neglect to register themselves.

An explanatory memorandum was also inclosed with a copy of the Order in Council.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it would be advisable in our opinion that the fee for registration payable by all classes of Her Majesty's subjects residing in China should be uniform in amount, and that the certficate of registration should not be required to be renewed except upon change of residence from one Consular district to another. We are of opinion that it is not obligatory on the Consul under Article 114 of the China Order in Council to prosecute British subjects neglecting to register themselves, if any such subject can excuse his or her neglect to the satisfaction of the Consul.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 4.)

My Lord, Temple, April 30, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Mr. Samuel Tilley, setting forth the grounds on which he considers that Captain Cameron, formerly the owner of a vessel called the "Red Gauntlet," has a grievance against Mr. Lamb, Her Majesty's Consul at St. Thomas, for alleged improper and hostile proceedings on the part of the Consul, whereby Captain Cameron lost his vessel, and that Mr. Tilley requests that the circumstances of this case, which were not properly laid before Her Majesty's Government when it was considered on a former occasion, may again be taken into consideration with a view to redress being afforded to Captain Cameron. Mr. Spring Rice was accordingly to transmit to me the former papers relating to this case, and to request that I would take them into my consideration, together with Mr. Tilley's present letter, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion upon the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the charges of improper proceedings on the part of Mr. Lamb in his official capacity, whereby the interests of the owner of the "Red Gauntlet" are alleged to have been seriously prejudiced, appear to me to resolve themselves under two principal heads, namely, the detention of the certificate of registry of the "Red Gauntlet" at the British Consulate, and the description of the tonnage of the vessel in the advertisement for bottomry. It is alleged by Mr. Tilley: (1) that Mr. Lamb not only improperly, but illegally detained the ship's papers of the "Red Gauntlet" at the British Consulate, whereby her owner was prevented from employing an agent to raise money on further bottomry of the vessel, and thus discharging the existing claims upon her; (2) that "the ship was advertised for bottomry by Mr. Lamb as a vessel of 173 tons register, whereas her registered tonnage was $249\frac{60}{100}$ tons, of which Mr. Lamb must have been aware, as the 'Red Gauntlet' was entered on the register in Mr. Lamb's possession as a vessel of $249\frac{60}{100}$ tons."

With regard to the first charge, it would appear from a despatch of Lord Stanley's of May 16, 1868, addressed to Mr. Lamb, that his Lordship had been at that time informed that, by the law of the island, when foreign vessels enter the port of St. Thomas, their ship-papers are required to be deposited at the Custom-house, and are detained there until the vessels are cleared; and that, by some arrangement with the Danish authorities made by Mr. Ball, the Acting British Consul in 1863, the ship-papers of British vessels are in practice deposited at the British Consulate instead of the Custom-house.

Whatever may have been the origin of this latter practice, it is clear, from the certificate issued by the Intendant of Customs at St. Thomas on April 22, 1868, that Her Majesty's Consul was bound, as a matter of official duty, to detain the ship-papers of the "Red Gauntlet" at the British Consulate after he had entered her at the Custom-house. This certificate is endorsed on the entry of the "Red Gauntlet" made by Mr. Lamb as British Consul on the day of her arrival at St. Thomas, and the Intendant of the Customs certifies that, "in conformity with the 5th paragraph of the Law of April 16, 1862, relating to the trade and navigation in St. Thomas, the British Consul, in his capacity as such, is officially and personally responsible for the presence of the ship-papers in his Consulate, until the vessel has cleared at the Custom-house."[*] The formal reference made to this law by the Intendant of the Customs at St. Thomas seems to me to be conclusive against the charge made by Mr. Tilley, that the ship-papers of the "Red Gauntlet" were illegally detained by Mr. Lamb. Their detention, on the contrary, would appear to have been not merely sanctioned, but required by the law of the island, and Mr. Lamb would have acted most improperly, in my opinion, if he had given them up to the master of the "Red Gauntlet" to be handed over to an agent of his own selection.

On the other hand, I do not find any proof in the papers before your Lordship that the owner of the "Red Gauntlet" was prevented by the detention of his ship-papers at the British Consulate from employing an agent to raise money for him on further bottomry. It appears, upon the face of the pleas which Captain Cameron gave in before the Court at St. Thomas, which decreed the sale of his vessel,[†] that he had borrowed the money both on the first bond at the Havana, and on the second bond at Cape Haitien, having reason to expect, as he was carrying emigrants to the Brazils, "that he would find the necessary funds by the Brazilian Consul at St. Thomas, but in this he had been disappointed." It deserves remark also that, in the schedule of charges against Mr. Lamb annexed to the first communication made by the owner of the "Red Gauntlet" to Lord Stanley,[‡] there is no averment that he was prevented raising money on further bottomry by the improper detention of his ship-papers at the British Consulate. This charge, in fact, would seem to be an afterthought.

With regard to the second charge, it appears from the printed advertisements which are amongst the papers before your Lordship, that the "Red Gauntlet" was advertised for bottomry as a British paddle steam-ship of 173 tons register, built at Greenwich in 1864.[§]

The Certificate of Registry to which Mr. Tilley refers, as stating the tonnage to $249\frac{60}{100}$ tons, is not before your Lordship, having been properly transmitted by Mr. Lamb to the British Consul at Mobile upon the sale of the vessel at St. Thomas, but there is secondary evidence of the contents of the certificate, which is of a very high character, although it is under the handwriting of Mr. Lamb himself, being the official entry made by him at the Custom-house of St. Thomas on the day of the arrival of the "Red Gauntlet," in which her tonnage is described as 173 per register British measurement, and $249\frac{41}{100}$ American measurement.[‖] Assuming this to be a correct entry, and no reason of personal interest can well be suggested, why Mr. Lamb on this occasion should have made a false entry of the tonnage of the vessel, I am of opinion that Mr. Lamb was justified, as the "Red Gauntlet" was advertised as a British vessel, in stating the tonnage according to British measurement, and not according to American measurement. It deserves remark that the signature of Charles Cameron as master of the "Red Gauntlet" is appended to the advertisements for bottomry which bear date August 19, 1867, being the day on which the "Red Gauntlet" was entered at the Custom-house of St. Thomas. There is further evidence on this point to be found among the papers which may deserve your Lordship's notice, although it is also under the hand of Mr. Lamb, namely, the letter addressed by him to Her Majesty's Consul at Mobile,[*] inclosing the Provisional Certificate of the "Red Gauntlet," in which Mr. Lamb describes the vessel as of 173 tons British measurement. If the tonnage of the "Red Gauntlet" was so described in the advertisements by the authority of Mr. Lamb, I am of opinion that she was properly described, and that he is free from all blame on this head.

There are some minor topics of complaint to be found in Mr. Tilley's letter, which, as they are directed against Mr. Lamb's official conduct, may be properly noticed.

Mr. Tilley says that the bonds upon which the vessel was arrested were not properly countersigned at Havana and Cape Hayti by the Danish Consul, and that it was the duty of Her Majesty's Consul to see that the bonds were in all respects proper legal documents. I would observe, on this part of the case, that Captain Cameron, who gave the bonds, was owner as well as master of the vessel, and appeared to the actions of the bondholders; that it was competent for him to have taken any objection in point of form to the bonds, if any such objection could be taken, and that it was for the Court to decide whether such an objection was tenable. No such duty as alleged could attach to Her Majesty's Consul, as far as I am aware, when the owner of the vessel was present to watch over his own interests.

Again, it is said by Mr. Tilley, that the ten days allowed under the bond for its redemption was not given to Captain Cameron; but it appears from the letter written by Lamb and Company on 17th August, 1867, to Captain Cameron,[†] that the "Red Gauntlet" had arrived in the Port of St. Thomas on that day, whilst the transcript of the proceedings before the Court at St. Thomas[‡] shows that the citation by request of Hurtzig and Company upon the bond given at Cape Haitien did not issue before 28th August, 1867, on which day the arrest of the vessel was also made. The same observation applies to the proceedings upon the bond given at the Havana,[§] upon which Messrs. Lamb and Company arrested the vessel, so that it is clear that the ten days allowed under the bonds had expired before the vessel was arrested. Mr. Tilley is also in error when he suggests that the crew could not legally claim anything for wages "until the arrival of the vessel at Para in Brazil, to which port she was chartered as per ship's articles." But when a vessel is sold under a bottomry bond, as happened in the case of the "Red Gauntlet," the sale operates as a legal termination of the voyage, and the wages pro ratâ itineris become presently due, and are entitled to priority over the bond; the bondholder, however, if he should not be paid in full, may recover the balance so deducted from the proceeds of the sale for wages, by a personal action against the owner of the vessel. I see no reason for your Lordship arriving at any other conclusion than that upon which Lord Stanley acted in holding that no blame attached to Mr. Lamb in his official character for the proceedings which resulted in the sale of the "Red Gauntlet" by the decree of the Sheriff's Court at St. Thomas.

The Queen's Advocate to Mr. Hammond.—(Received July 7.)

Temple, July 6, 1870.

I AM honoured with your letter of the 1st instant, stating that, with reference to my report of the 30th April, you were directed to transmit to me, together with a volume containing the previous correspondence, two further letters from Mr. Cameron relative to the case of the "Red Gauntlet," and you were pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and report whether the statements therein made induce me to alter in any respects the opinion expressed in my above-mentioned report.

In obedience to your commands I have the honour to report—

That the statements made by Mr. Cameron in his two further letters do not induce me to alter the opinion expressed by me in my previous report. It may be, however, deserving of consideration, with a view to the contingency of Mr. Cameron asserting that the Foreign Office has improperly protected Mr. Lamb, whether Her Majesty's Consul at Mobile should not be instructed to forward a copy of the provisional certificate of the "Red Gauntlet," which upon the sale of that vessel at St. Thomas was remitted to Mobile by Mr. Acting Consul Lamb.

Temple, August 23, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a note from the Danish Minister at this Court, inquiring what course Her Majesty's Government propose to take respecting the transmission of telegraphic messages from either of the belligerents through this country to their respective forces, and whether Her Majesty's Government consider that the International Telegraphic Conventions of 1865 and 1868 in exempting Government despatches from control, infringe on the law of nations. That as the Danish Minister is anxious for an early answer, Mr. Otway was to request that I would furnish your Lordship as soon as possible with my opinion as to the answer that should be returned to his inquiries.

Mr. Otway was pleased to inclose the two Conventions referred to, as regards which he observed that Great Britain took no part in the Convention of 1865, and was a party to that of 1868 only as far as the Indian telegraphs were concerned.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the question upon which your Lordship has requested my opinion is novel and somewhat intricate, but after the best consideration which time will permit me to give to the subject, I have arrived at the conclusion that the Treaties in question properly belong to that class of Treaties the obligation of which is suspended on the occurrence of war between any of the parties, but will revive at the return of peace. For instance, it is obvious that it could not have been the intention of Prussia to bind itself, in the case of its being at war with France, to convey the public despatches of its enemy to that enemy's fleet when carrying on hostilities against Prussia. In fact, it would be a crime læsæ majestatis for a Prussian subject to be engaged in forwarding such despatches. On the other hand, as a war between France and Prussia would impose upon the other contracting parties supervening duties, incidental under the general law of nations to a state of neutrality, they must, I think, in the absence of express words to the contrary, be taken to have become parties to the Treaty, subject to their obligation of fulfilling those duties. In other words, the Treaty must be presumed to have been made for the general advantage of all parties, and it should not be so construed as to work injury to any, in the absence of positive words requiring such an interpretation.

With regard therefore to the general questions raised by the Danish Minister, I am of opinion that the Treaties of 1865 and 1868 do not control the operation of the general rules of the law of nations as regards the transmission of despatches of State in time of war.

Sir,

WE are honoured with your letter of the 11th instant, stating that with reference to our report of the 1st October last, respecting the case of the Telegraphs, you were directed to transmit to us therewith a further letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a copy of a despatch from the Governor of the Leeward Islands, reporting that this vessel has been restored by the Vice-Admiralty Court at Tortola, without costs or damages, on the ground that the acts charged were committed within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Republic of St. Domingo. That the Consul at St. Domingo has, as we should observe, requested an appeal from this decision, undertaking to pay all costs and damages; and you were pleased to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and furnish you with our opinion as to the proper course to be pursued under the circumstances stated by the local Attorney-General. The previous correspondence was also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your commands we have the honour to report—

That we think the decision of the Vice-Admiralty Court of Tortola sufficiently open to question to justify an appeal, on the Dominican Government undertaking to pay all costs and damages.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter and its inclosures from Mr. Tinney, of Alexandria, making complaints against the proceedings of Sir Philip Francis in his judicial capacity, and to request that I would take the matter into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon. Mr. Spring Rice was also to state that your Lordship would be indisposed to take any steps which could be considered as an interference with the judgment of a Court legally constituted, and that your Lordship would wish to learn whether I am of opinion that Mr. Tinney's letter should in the first instance be referred to Sir P. Francis. Mr. Spring Rice was also pleased to state that the case of Polidano referred to at the end of Mr. Tinney's letter will form the subject of a separate reference to the Law Officers.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it would be proper, I think, that Mr. Tinney's letter should be referred in the first instance to Sir P. Francis, and that he should be informed that it is so referred to him for the purpose of enabling him to make any observation upon it which he may think fit.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 9.)

Temple, February 9, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 1st instant, stating that with reference to the report of the Law Officers of the 12th March, 1868, relative to the case of two Maltese named Polidano, sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment for murder committed at Alexandria, he was directed to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office inclosing a petition from them for a remission of their sentence, together with two despatches relative to this case, and containing observations on this petition from Mr. Vice-Consul Lane. The previous papers were also inclosed, and Mr. Spring Rice was pleased to request that we would take this matter into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we concur in the opinion of the Law Officers on this case as expressed in their report of 12th March, 1868, and we find no sufficient grounds stated in the later petition of the prisoners, which has been transmitted from the Colonial Office to Mr. Hammond, to justify a departure from the course then adopted by Her Majesty's Government.

We are not sure, from the tenor of Mr. Spring Rice's letter, whether our opinion is desired upon any other, or what specific questions. We observe that Vice-Consul Lane refers to a threat made against himself by Lorenzo Polidano, and requests that some restraint should be put upon him. Assuming the fact to be as stated (which, however, does not very distinctly appear), the proper course would be to lay the matter before the Italian and Egyptian Governments, and request them to prevent, as far as they can, the return of Lorenzo Polidano to Alexandria.

With respect to other allegations in V. Nicolo Abate Bernardini's letter, without knowing the character of that gentleman, it is impossible to say what weight is to be attributed to them; but inquiry might properly be made into his allegations as to the prison discipline at Malta, and the attention of the Maltese authorities called to the necessity of strictly inflicting the sentences imposed.

As to Vice-Consul Lane's suggestion that safeguards are needed to prevent the return to the Levant of deported Maltese, before your Lordship can be called upon to act in this matter, Vice-Consul Lane should be requested to explain what alterations in the existing law he would propose.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying report on the subject of the proceedings of the International Commission on Judicial Reforms in Egypt. Copies of the instructions given to the British Commissioners previous to their taking part in that Commission were also inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion on the proceedings of the Commission, as well as on the points referred to by Colonel Stanton and Sir Philip Francis.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the proceedings of the Commission, so far as they have gone, may, in our opinion, be generally approved by your Lordship; but we think that any absolute or unqualified approval of the report might lead to future difficulties, and that Her Majesty's Government should be hardly asked to pledge themselves to any particular part or parts of a scheme of reform till they have seen the whole—till they know what code of laws is to be administered, or what procedure is to be adopted—and until they have been able to communicate thereupon with the other Governments interested in the subject.

With respect to the specific questions raised by Her Majesty's Commissioners, namely, whether the new tribunals should entertain suits between foreigners of different nationalities; the attendance of interpreters: the execution of judgments; the jurisdiction as to real property; and the revision of the criminal law; the observations of the Commissioners appears to us, in the main, just, but we suggest the prudence of your Lordship's assent to them being made conditional, not only on the assent of the other Powers, but in the adoption of a satisfactory code of law and system of procedure.

My Lord, Temple, February 24, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 11th instant, stating that, with reference to our report of the 3rd June, on the subject of Messrs. Carver and Gill's claim against the Egyptian Government, he was directed to transmit to us the further correspondence which has since taken place respecting this matter, with especial regard to the statement inclosed in Mr. Gill's letter of the 29th ultimo and which has been drawn up by that gentleman for our greater convenience of reference, and was therewith transmitted to us, together with two pamphlets, which have been also received from Mr. Gill; and Mr. Spring Rice was pleased to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon at our early convenience. The previous papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to the directions of your Lordship, we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion Her Majesty's Government, while unable to object to the re-hearing of the case before the Alexandrian Tribunal, and not being prepared to force upon the Egyptian Government Mr. Gill's interpretation of the articles regulating the deposit and the appeal, may, nevertheless, if they deem it expedient, properly inform the Egyptian Government that they intend to watch closely the proceedings of a Tribunal like that of Alexandria, the judgment of which, in Mr. Gill's case, was given originally under circumstances so remarkable, and which has lately been annulled by the Grand Conseil of the Viceroy. Your Lordship might also, if you should think fit, express a hope on the part of Her Majesty's Government that the Court at Alexandria, in adjudicating upon the claims of Her Majesty's subjects and of Mr. Gill in particular, will not hereafter so administer the law as to call for the intervention and intrusion of a friendly foreign Government.

My Lord, Temple, April 27, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Charles Spring Rice's letter of the 14th April instant, stating that, with reference to our reports of the 5th, 9th, and 28th February, relative to the case of the prisoners Polidano at Malta, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing copies of correspondence with the Government of Malta as to the course to be pursued in case the validity of their detention is called in question, and suggesting that our attention should be called to the second section of the Order in Council of November 10, 1866, inasmuch as it appeared from Mr. Lane's despatch No. 1 of the 15th of January that those prisoners were tried under a deputation granted in pursuance of the provisions of that Order.

Mr. Rice was pleased also to transmit a copy of the Order in Council and the previous correspondence on the subject of the Polidano case, and to request that we would again take the matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the point.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have again taken the matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we have not before us the form of deputation issued to the Consular Court of Egypt under the 2nd section of the Order in Council of 1866, but presuming it to have specified the power of deporting condemned criminals to Malta for the purpose of there undergoing their respective sentences, we are of opinion that the warrant of that Court in the case of the brothers Polidano was a valid warrant, and that they have been lawfully sent to Malta to undergo their punishment. With regard to Earl Granville's observation, to which the attention of Mr. Hammond is invited in the letter from the Colonial Office of the 7th April, 1870, "that no special reference was made to the Order in Council of 1866 in Bugeja's case, and that the Law Officers, in their report, as embodied in Lord Clarendon's despatch to Her Majesty's Consul-General at Tunis of 11th February last, made no allusion to the Order in Council of 1866, but only to the Order in Council of 1864," we would remark that as Bugeja was deported to Malta from Tunis under a warrant from the provincial Consular Court of Tunis, the Order in Council of 1866 could have no application to his case, being concerned exclusively with the powers of the Provincial Consular Court of Egypt.

He was pleased to inclose for consideration a previous despatch from Lord Lyons containing report of the French Commission on the subject, and the former papers which we have had before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That without pledging ourselves to all the details of the proposed Codes, a complete examination of which would defer our report for a considerable time, we are of opinion that they have been framed with great care, and on principles sufficiently in harmony with European jurisprudence to justify Her Majesty's Government in assenting to their adoption as the basis of the new judicial system in Egypt.

Right Hon. Sir,

I AM honoured with your letter of the 4th instant, stating that you were directed to transmit to me a letter from Sir W. Tite complaining of certain proceedings in the Courts at Alexandria and Constantinople in a suit brought against the Bank of Egypt. Explanations on the subject furnished by Mr. Lane and Sir P. Francis were also inclosed, and you were pleased to request that I would take the matter into my consideration, and report my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your commands I have the honour to report—

That under Her Majesty's Order in Council of 30th November, 1864, the Judge of Her Majesty's Consular Court in Egypt had a discretion to report the suit of "Paterson v. The Bank of Egypt" to the Supreme Consular Court at Constantinople, as fit to be heard and determined by that Court, and the Judge of the Court at Constantinople had authority to direct in what mode and where the suit should be heard and determined. Under these circumstances I am of opinion that it would not be proper for Her Majesty's Secretary of State to interfere with the discretion exercised by Mr. Lane in this matter, and that however anxious the Bank may be to have the suit heard in Alexandria, it will be properly left to the Consular Tribunals to decide in what way the ends of justice will be best served.

My Lord, Temple, October 26, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a Memorial from Mr. John P. Schilizzi, requesting, for the reasons therein stated, that he may receive from the British Consulate at Alexandria the protection due to a British subject. A correspondence which took place last year with Her Majesty's Legal Vice-Consul at Alexandria, relative to the protection to be accorded to Mr. Schilizzi's child, and which formed the subject of the Law Officers' report of the 2nd March, 1869, was also inclosed, together with a volume, in the latter part of which there is correspondence bearing on the same subject, and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would take this matter into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be made to Mr. Schilizzi's Memorial.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That there are not, in my opinion, any circumstances in this case of so peculiar a character as to withdraw it from the operation of the general rule laid down and acted upon by your Lordship's predecessor than an alien born, who has obtained British naturalization, is not on that account entitled to claim British protection within the country of his birth. At the same time it may deserve your Lordship's consideration whether a person alien born, who has obtained British naturalization, and has also acquired a British domicile jure gentium, as appears to be the case of Mr. Schilizzi, should not be entitled to the good offices, as distinguished from the protection of Her Majesty's Consul, even in the country of his birth. In the present case those good offices would be fitly discharged, in my opinion, by a few words spoken in his favour to the Egyptian Prime Minister, intimating that Her Majesty's Government would see with pleasure the order which he has given for the payment of Mr. Schilizzi's claim carried into effect without further delay.

Temple, January 18, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to inform me that your Lordship caused the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Quito, which incloses a Minute of the Ecuadorian Government giving their reasons for suspending the payment of the interest due on the foreign debt, to be communicated to the Ecuadorian Commission of Agency, and Mr. Hammond was now to transmit to me therewith a letter, which has been received from that body in reply, and to request that I would take the matter into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon. The previous papers bearing on the bondholders' claims were also inclosed for my more complete information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may, I think, properly instruct Mr. Hamilton to call the attention of the Ecuadorian Minister of Foreign Affairs to the note of the Ecuadorian Government addressed to the Acting British Consul-General at Guyaquil on December 23, 1863, in which that Government states that "as soon as the imminent danger with which the nation is threatened disappears, it will take the necessary steps for the continuance of the payments to the bondholders in compliance with the terms stipulated." It appears from the correspondence, that up to a certain period the Ecuadorian Government has made good this undertaking on its part, but that now it proposes to stop the payment altogether of interest on the bonds under the authority of a Decree of the National Convention of Ecuador of 17th August, 1869. I am of opinion, if your Lordship thinks it otherwise politic to put pressure upon the Ecuadorian Government, seeing that it appears to be labouring under great financial difficulties, that Mr. Hamilton would be justified in stating that your Lordship considers the Decree of the National Convention to involve a violation of the undertaking of the Ecuadorian Government in 1863 towards Her Majesty's Government, and that your Lordship trusts that the President of the Republic will take the necessary steps to have that Decree reconsidered, and to prevent the friendly relations between the two Governments being in any way impaired by effect being given to that Decree.

My Lord, Temple, June 16, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that, on the receipt of my report of the 18th January, relative to the suspension by the Ecuadorian Government of payment of interest on the foreign debt of that Republic, your Lordship addressed to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Quito the instruction, draft of which was inclosed therewith, and that he was directed to transmit to me the reply, which has been received from Mr. Hamilton, reporting what has passed between him and the Ecuadorian Government on the matter.

The previous correspondence was also inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the proper course to be pursued by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the answer of his Excellency the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Ecuador to the note of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires of 16th March last, puts in question a fact which I had assumed in my last report to your Lordship of 18th January last to be incontrovertible, namely, that the note of the Ecuadorian Government addressed to the Acting British Consul at Guyaquil on December 23, 1863, contained an undertaking on the part of that Government, of which Her Majesty's Government was entitled to take cognizance. I have not before me at present the despatch of Mr. Mocatta, No. 3 of 30th January, 1864, which is referred to in your Lordship's despatch to Mr. Hamilton, No. 2 of 26th January, 1870, and in which was inclosed a copy of the note of the Ecuadorian Government. I am therefore unable to advise your Lordship whether there is any solid ground for the distinction which his Excellency seeks to establish between certain passages of that note, which may properly be regarded as addressed to the British Consul, and other passages which are to be regarded as addressed to Mr. Mocatta in his separate character as agent of the bondholders. I am also unable to form an opinion, from the papers before me, whether there is any weight, in his Excellency's view, that the Ecuadorian Government may have engaged its good faith towards the British Government in respect of the Mackintosh debt, but is free from any corresponding engagement as regards the other foreign debt, and that the latter is not entitled to be considered as British property.

Upon these points I shall be glad to have fuller information before I can venture to advise your Lordship as to the further instructions which may properly be given to Mr. Hamilton.

The Queen's Advocate to Mr. Hammond.—(Received June 30.)

Sir, Temple, June 29, 1870.

I AM honoured with your letter of the 20th instant, stating that, with reference to my report of the 10th instant upon the subject of the Ecuadorian debt, you were directed to transmit to me two volumes, one of which contains the further correspondence with which I desired to be furnished relative to the engagements undertaken by the Ecuadorian Government towards that of Her Majesty in December 1863 (Mr. Mocatta, No. 3, January 30th, 1864), and the other the correspondence relative to the Mackintosh debt.

The previous papers were also transmitted for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your commands I have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires may, in my opinion, be properly instructed to express with becoming courtesy the regret of Her Majesty's Government at the tone of the note of the Ecuadorian Minister of Foreign Affairs, and to intimate to his Excellency that Her Majesty's Government cannot admit the claim of the Ecuadorian Government to recognize only as British property the Mackintosh debt, and to put an interpretation upon the engagement entered into by the Ecuadorian Government with Mr. Mocatta in 1864, which is not borne out by the letter of the notes, which passed between Mr. Mocatta and the Ecuadorian Minister of Foreign Affairs, and would in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government be inconsistent with the spirit of them. That with regard to the assertion of the Ecuadorian Government that Her Majesty's Government has no right to interfere in favour of the British bondholders, Her Majesty's Government is at a loss to understand the grounds on which the Ecuadorian Government declines to recognize the bonds held by British subjects as British property, upon which grounds alone Her Majesty's Government presumes that its right to interfere is called in question. That the attention of the Ecuadorian Minister of Foreign Affairs should be invited to the despatch of his Excellency Pablo Herrera of 22nd October, 1864, addressed directly to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, respecting which there can be no suggestion of irregularity, and in which the promises of the Ecuadorian Government are admitted to apply to the payments due to the British bondholders equally as to Mr. Mackintosh.

It will be advisable in my opinion for Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to direct his immediate reply to the issue raised for the first time by the Ecuadorian Government in the three first paragraphs of the last Ecuadorian note, with a view to the possibility of the Ecuadorian Government contemplating a future distinct course of action as regards the bonds from that which it contemplates as regards the Mackintosh debt. It will be of importance in my opinion to bind it down to the adoption of the same principles of action in either case, in accordance with the understanding hitherto existing between the two Governments.

My Lord, Temple, January 14, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Rice's letter of the 31st December last, stating, that with reference to our Report of the 19th August and the 1st December last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Lord Lyons, inclosing the draft of an instruction which he suggested should be addressed to Her Majesty's Consul at Paris, in regard to "Certificates de Coutume" required by the French Railway Companies; and he was pleased to state to us, that if we concurred in the terms of that draft, and were of opinion that it would be sufficient if it was addressed to Her Majesty's Consul at Paris, your Lordship was prepared to instruct Mr. Atlee accordingly.

And he was at the same time to call our attention to the remarks of Mr. Treitt on the general question as to Rentes and Successions in France, raised by the Society of Notaries, in their letter of the 7th August, which was likewise transmitted to us; and he was to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion as to the nature of the reply which should be returned to the Society.

Mr. Rice was pleased further to say that, in addition to those questions, a special case of difficulty in regard to the administration of the estate of a deceased British subject had been brought to your Lordship's notice in the inclosed letter from Messrs. Cookson and Wainwright; and your Lordship would propose, with our concurrence, to inform the parties that Her Majesty's Consul at Paris was about to receive instructions which would enable him to furnish certificates which would meet the requirements of the French Railway Companies.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the terms of the proposed instructions, subject to the omission of all mention of "notaries public" may be properly approved by your Lordship, and that it will be sufficient if they are addressed to Her Majesty's Consul at Paris.

We also concur in the suggestion of Lord Lyons, that (subject, of course, to your Lordship's judgment) it would be better if the letter were addressed to the Consul by your Lordship as Secretary of State.

With regard to the letter of the Secretary of the Society of Public Notaries of London, we are not aware of any authority for such notaries to give certificates of the law of England, by virtue of their office, which should entitle them to object to the proposed certificates as "an uncalled-for evasion of their duties and privileges."

We think your Lordship may properly direct a reply to be returned to the Society to such effect.

We think your Lordship may direct Messrs. Cookson and Wainwright to be informed that general instructions will be sent to Her Majesty's Consul at Paris, which, your Lordship hopes, will enable him to furnish such certificates as will meet the requirements of the French Railway Companies.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 24.)

My Lord, Temple, February 23, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Réunion, relative to the compulsory service of British subjects in the militia of that island, together with a letter from the Colonial Office, stating the practice in regard to the service of foreigners in the militia of British Colonies; and to request that I would take this matter into my consideration and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears to me that this is not a case where your Lordship can claim in favour of Mr. Collard an immunity from service in the militia of Réunion, except he is willing to continue the payment which is required under the local law to procure his exemption, and which he appears to have paid for a period of eight months. Such an immunity could only be claimed of right under Treaty stipulations, or under comity only where there is reciprocity. It appears, however, that in many of the British Colonies aliens are liable to service in the local militia. The argument, therefore, for reciprocity fails, as pointed out by Governor de Lormel, and there is no Treaty which bears upon the present case. The observation of Vattel that "foreigners are not liable to serve in the militia of a State," to which Mr. Consul Segrave refers, may be well-founded as regards foreigners who are not domiciled in the country where they are called upon to serve, but the practice of the present day, as regards domiciled aliens, is the other way (see "Law Officers' Reports," July 31, 1860; September 30, 1861; July 14, 1862; June 20, 1865); and as Mr. Collard appears to have his principal trading establishment at St. Denis, he must, I think, be regarded as domiciled in Réunion.

With regard to the harsh manner in which his refusal to mount guard was punished, much must depend upon the provisions of the local law, and whether due notice of its requirements had been given to him. Upon these points I do not find sufficient information in the papers to enable me to advise your Lordship as to the instructions which should be properly forwarded to Mr. Consul Segrave.

My Lord, Temple, March 23, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me three despatches from Her Majesty's Consul at Réunion, regarding a discussion which has arisen between himself and the Governor of the Colony regarding some proceedings which Mr. Segrave alleges are a violation of the 20th Article of the Convention of 1860, of which a copy was also inclosed.

That I should perceive that the Governor alleges that the course pursued by him is in strict conformity with the Treaty, and with the Labour Regulations of Martinique therein referred to; and Mr. Spring Rice was pleased to state that if this be so, your Lordship apprehends that Mr. Segrave's objections cannot be sustained, but that your Lordship would wish to learn my opinion on the point.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report—

That, assuming the good faith of the Governor of the Colony to be beyond all doubt, when he undertakes that a pass shall never be withheld from any British subject who may seek to avail himself of the right of resort to the British Consul, secured to all British immigrants under Article XX of the Convention, I am of opinion that Mr. Segrave cannot properly object to the Governor enforcing in the interests of public order in regard to all such persons, who may be in the interior of the island, the regulations of the Colony as to providing themselves with passes, before they quit the place of their engagement for the purpose of communicating with the Consul.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Mr. Hammond.—(Received July 7.)

Temple, July 6, 1870.

Sir,

WE are honoured with your letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that with reference to our report of the 18th ultimo, on the subject of a Convention for the protection of submarine cables, you were directed to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the French Ambassador at this Court, inclosing a letter from the Duc de Grammont, the French Minister for Foreign Affairs, stating the views of the French Government upon the question which has just been reported upon by a Special Commission appointed for that purpose, and you were pleased to request that we would take these papers into consideration, and if the views propounded by the Imperial Government should be in any way different from those with which we furnished you, and upon which the instructions which have been addressed to Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, you were further pleased to request that we would state in what particulars we dissent from them. The report and instructions to Mr. Thornton were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your commands we have the honour to report—

That the views of the French Government appear in a great degree to accord with those which we have had the honour to express, and to materially differ from them only on the question to what jurisdiction persons wilfully injuring submarine cables shall be amenable.

The substance of our suggestions contained in our report of February 4 and May 18, 1870, was to the effect that, if it were agreed among the Contracting Parties that wilful injury to cables, both within and without the marine league from shore, should be treated as piracy, it would seem to follow that all persons committing such piracy, who were subjects of any of the Contracting Powers, should be triable in the Courts of any of the Contracting Powers; but we suggested that the term piracy was not properly applicable to offences committed within the territorial limits of any State, and that such offences should be defined and dealt with by the municipal law of the State.

In this latter view the French Government concur, and we are not prepared to differ from their suggestion, that considering the probabilities of the criminal escaping from the jurisdiction of the country within which his crime is committed, he should be triable either in the country in which the crime is committed, or in the country (if it be a different one) to which he belongs. But with respect to offences committed on the high seas without the marine league, we still think that if by agreement among the Contracting Powers such offences are to be deemed piracy, it would properly follow that they should be triable in Courts of any of those Powers. This appears the only question on which our views conflict with that of the French

Government, and this question appears on the whole to be one of policy rather than of law.

My Lord, Temple, July 19, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acknowledge the receipt of our letter of the 7th instant, in which we expressed our opinion that the new Egyptian Codes, which had been transmitted in Lord Lyons' despatch No. 621 of the 22nd ultimo, had been framed with great care and on principles sufficiently in harmony with European jurisprudence to justify Her Majesty's Government in assenting to their adoption as the basis of the new judicial system in Egypt.

That he was to transmit to us a draft of a letter which your Lordship proposed to address to the French Ambassador at this Court, communicating to his Excellency the concurrence of Her Majesty's Government in the principle of the Codes themselves, as well as in the view taken by the Imperial Government and by the French Commission on the subject, and further stating the opinion of Her Majesty's Government on certain matters of principle and of detail in carrying the new reforms into execution.

And that he was to state that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, upon the proposed answer to the French Ambassador, especially as your Lordship proposed to communicate it to the Porte, the Egyptian Government, and the various Governments concerned in the question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the proposed letter (in which we have ventured to suggest one or two trifling verbal alterations) may be properly addressed to the French Ambassador at this Court.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th instant, stating that the French Government had published a notice granting certain facilities for enemy's vessels entering French ports with French-owned cargoes, and departing from thence.

That Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris had been instructed to apply for similar facilities in favour of the same vessels destined for British ports with British-owned cargoes.

That we would see by the inclosed despatch and letter from Lord Lyons the grounds on which the French Government declined to accede to that request.

That we would also see from the inclosed Memorandum received from the Board of Admiralty that the legality of the French refusal was called in question.

And that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would take those papers into our consideration and report to your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, whether any, and in that case, what, notice should be taken of the reply of the French Government.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Colonial Office.—(Received July .)

My Lord, Temple, July 13, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Sir Frederic Rogers' letter of the 27th ultimo, stating—

1st. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us for our consideration copies of part of a correspondence which had passed between the Colonial Office and the Foreign Office relative to the contemplated cession of Gambia to the French Government.

2nd. That it would be seen from that correspondence that both your Lordship and Lord Clarendon concurred in the opinion that the consent of Parliament should be obtained to that transfer, and in the first proposal contained in the instructions sent to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris (a copy of which was therewith inclosed for reference) we would observe that the "consent of Parliament and of the natives" was made a condition precedent to the cession.

3rd. That, in accordance with that view, it was stated a few nights ago in the House of Commons that the cession would not be completed before the whole subject had been brought before Parliament.

4th. That a question had arisen on former occasions, as for example in 1854, upon the question of the abandonment of the Orange River Territory (vide Hansard, Third Series. vol. cxxxiii, pp. 52-66), whether the Crown has power to alienate British territory by its prerogative except under a Treaty of Peace; and your Lordship desired to be favoured with our opinion as to the manner in which the present question should be brought before Parliament, and in which such consent should be obtained, and especially (1) whether, the matter having been fully laid before both Houses and expressly or tacitly approved, it would be competent to Her Majesty to effect the cession by prerogative; or (2) whether it would be necessary to have recourse to an Act of Parliament empowering Her Majesty to enter into a Convention with the French Government; or (3) whether the Convention should first be made, subject to the assent of Parliament, and then brought before Parliament for ratification by Resolution or otherwise.

5th. With reference to the question numbered (1), Sir Frederic further stated that he was to add that the Gambia had fallen under Parliamentary legislation; that it was surrendered in 1749 by the African Company to the British Government; that in 1843, after the passing of the Imperial Act 6 Vict., cap. 13, and by virtue of the provisions of that Act, a Government of the River Gambia Settlement was constituted by Charter of the 24th June.

6th. That this Charter and the Government constituted by it remained in force until 1866, when the Charter was revoked by Letters Patent of the 19th February (copy of which was inclosed), and Gambia was placed under the General Government of the West Africa Settlements, the Governor of Sierra Leone being the Governor-in-chief.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have considered this matter, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the cession of this Settlement cannot be effected by the prerogative alone. The Crown, on the principle that salus Reipublicæ suprema lex, has the sovereign power of alienating State domain in Treaties of Peace, or as an act of supreme necessity in war to save the rest of the dominions.

Even in such a case a Minister would probably have recourse to an Act of Indemnity for the advice which he had given leading to such a result. Beyond the power above stated, we think that the Sovereign has no power to cede territory without the consent of the Legislature.

(2) and (3). It seems to us immaterial whether the consent of Parliament is obtained first or afterwards. It should be given, we think, by Statute, and not by Resolution; but it is a question of policy for the Government whether the Convention should be negotiated first, or powers should be first taken to negotiate.

That the refusal of the French Government to grant a temporary exemption from capture to enemies' ships bound with neutral cargoes to neutral ports does not involve any violation of neutral right by reason of their having granted such an exemption to enemies' vessels bound with French cargoes to French ports.

The case does not, in our opinion, fall within the principle laid down by Lord Stowell in the "Success," and more recently by the Judicial Committee in the "Franceska," viz., that the blockade of an enemy's port to be valid must operate to the entire exclusion of enemies' ships as well as of neutral ships.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from Captain Sherard Osborne, respecting a proposal made by the French Government to a company with which he is connected, to lay down a telegraphic cable from Dunkirk to some point on the coast of the North Sea; and he was to request that we would take the matter into our immediate consideration, and report to your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, our opinion as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should take with reference to Captain Osborne's application, and also as to the general question of British companies undertaking similar operations from one or other of the belligerents.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That in our opinion Captain Sherard Osborne should be informed that it is, to say the least, very questionable whether persons concerned in laying down such a telegraphic cable as he describes will not be liable to a criminal prosecution under the new Foreign Enlistment Bill, now printed and published, when it becomes law; that at all events the undertaking is altogether inconsistent with that neutrality which Her Majesty observes and enjoins upon her subjects.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we assume that the permission asked is no more than would be granted in the ordinary course to a vessel which is described as "beyond the bounds," and that the granting it involves no special leave or license for this particular transaction; on this assumption, and on this only, we think that the permission may be given, but that Mr. Scrutton should be warned, that if the cable is destined for a warlike purpose it may be captured as contraband.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Havre, inclosing a letter from Lieutenant-General Frome, representing the circumstances under which his aunt, Mrs. Kozminska, the widow of an English clergyman, who afterwards married a Polish exile, has died intestate in France, where she was possessed of some property, which has been taken possession of by the French authorities; that General Frome states that he has reason to believe that, if Mrs. Kozminska is claimed by Her Majesty's Consul as a British subject, the French Tribunals would award the division of her property according to English law, and he requests that Her Majesty's Consul may be furnished with instructions in the matter; and Mr. Otway was accordingly to request that I would take this case into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether Mrs. Kozminska can be considered a British subject, and as to any instructions which it may be proper to give to Her Majesty's Consul in this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the distribution of the effects of the late Mrs. Kozminska, in the absence of any Treaty, will be governed by the French law, as her domicile was French at the time of her death. Her legal representative, according to French law, will, therefore, be the person entitled to take out letters of administration to her effects in England; and it will be proper for General Frome, if he is her nearest relative, to obtain first of all in France from the proper authorities his recognition as her legal representative, and afterwards to administer in that character to the effects in England.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a copy of a despatch from Lord Lyons, requesting instructions for his guidance, in the event of a law being proposed by the French Chambers making the subjects of foreigners born in France liable to military service during the war; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the matter into consideration, and at our earliest convenience report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That there is nothing contrary to the law of nations, as generally understood, in the law proposed by the French Government to be enacted. It is, indeed, only making the law of France what our own law still is, though we have lately facilitated the escape of English-born foreigners from its operation. We think that, while it is impossible to treat as a cause of dispute, still less as a cause of war, the passing of such a law, the French Government ought, nevertheless, to allow all persons now first affected by it a ready exit from their territory. It would be extremely unfair to change the condition of British subjects resident in France so seriously without giving them some reasonable notice, and allowing them the opportunity of returning to their own country should they think fit. It is further to be observed that, by the proposed change of the law of France, British subjects may in many cases be compelled, contrary to their own wishes, to abandon the neutral character of the country to which

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith copies of two telegrams from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin and Her Majesty's Consul at Hamburgh, and also a letter from the Admiralty, announcing that notice had been given by the French Admiral of the blockade of the Elbe, Eider, Weser, and Jahde; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my immediate consideration, and if I should be of opinion that the notice is sufficient, prepare a form of notification to be inserted at once in a Supplement to the "London Gazette."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I have prepared a notification for insertion in the "London Gazette," that no time may be lost in giving merchants notice that up to the 25th instant neutral vessels will be allowed to enter or depart from the four rivers.

With regard to the sufficiency of the notice of the French Admiral, I am not aware that it is the practice of the French Government to notify formally to neutral Governments the blockade of an enemy's port, and any communication which brings a blockade to the knowledge of merchants in a way which can leave no doubt in their minds as to the authenticity of the information has been held by our Prize Courts to be sufficient.

There is, however, some ambiguity in the telegram, which will probably be cleared up when the formal declaration of the blockade arrives which Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin has sent by Her Majesty's ship "Rainbow." It will be of importance to ascertain whether the days of grace are exclusive of the 25th instant or will include it.

Draft Notification.

IT is hereby notified that the Right Honourable Earl Granville, K.G., Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has received a communication from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin that the Admiral of the French fleet off Heligoland has requested the Governor of Heligoland to notify, through Her Majesty's Consular Agents in Hamburgh, Cuxhaven, and Bremerhaven, the blockade of the Rivers Eider, Elbe, Weser, and Jahde, to take effect in ten days from the 15th instant, and that up to such time neutral vessels may enter or depart.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed to transmit to me therewith a despatch from Lord Lyons, containing the official notice of blockade, as published by the Ministry for Foreign Affairs, which varies in an important particular from the telegraphic notices I have had before me; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into immediate consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which, under the circumstances, should be pursued.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I have prepared a form of notification for immediate publication in the "London Gazette." It will be advisable, in case that any British vessels may have been misled by the previous notice, issued in conformity with the telegraphic communication from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin, that the Governor of Heligoland should be instructed to forward immediately a copy of the letter which he received from the Admiral of the French fleet, requesting him to communicate the blockade to the British Consular Agents in Hamburgh, Cuxhaven, and Bremerhaven.

Foreign Office, August , 1870.

IT is hereby notified that the Right Honourable Earl Granville, K.G., Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has received from Her Majesty's Ambassador in Paris a copy of the official notification of the blockade of the coast of Prussia and the German States on the North Sea, issued by Vice-Admiral Fourichon, commanding-in-chief the French fleet stationed off that coast, which declares as follows:—

"That from the 15th August, 1870, the coast of Prussia and the North German Confederation, extending from the Island of Baltrum to the north of the Eider, with its ports, rivers, havens, roads, and creeks, is kept in a state of effective blockade by the naval forces under our command, and that friendly or neutral vessels will be allowed a delay of ten days to complete their lading and quit the blockaded ports.

"The geographical limits of the blockade are:—The meridian of 5° (five degrees) of east longitude of Paris, as far as the parallel of 54° 5′ (fifty-four degrees five minutes) of north latitude; the parallel as far as the longitude of 5° 45′ (five degrees forty-five minutes) of Paris; thence the meridian of 5° 45′ (five degrees forty-five minutes), as far as the parallel of 54° 20′ (fifty-four degrees twenty minutes) of latitude; and, finally, this last parallel to the coast. Every vessel that shall attempt to violate the said blockade shall be proceeded against in conformity with the law of nations and the Treaties in force with neutral Powers.

"On board the 'Magnanime,' iron-plated frigate of the Emperor of the French, stationed between the British Island of Heligoland and the Prussian coast.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received August 23.)

Temple, August 22, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 20th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Lord Lyons inquiring what instructions he should give to Her Majesty's Consuls in France with respect to cases similar to that of the cargo on board the ship "Meta," as described by Mr. Vereker in the despatch of which a copy was sent home by Lord Lyons.

A letter was also inclosed from the Board of Trade on the same subject, and Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that I would take the accompanying papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the instructions which should be furnished to Lord Lyons in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the ordinary course in cases of capture is for the master of the ship, in the absence of any agent of the owner of the cargo, to make a claim on his behalf, but it appears to have been the practice during the late civil war in the United States of America for British Consuls to intervene, and file claims in their official character for the owners of the cargo when British subjects. Under what special instructions this practice obtained I am not aware. There may have been exceptional reasons to justify it, such as the distance of the ports of adjudication from England, and the difficulty of communication with the owners of cargo. Under the circumstances of the present war, I do not think it would be advisable to give such instructions to Her Majesty's Consuls in France, as the means of communication with England are easy. If, however, it should be the practice of the French Prize Tribunals not to allow the master of the captured ship to communicate with the owners of the cargo, but, as in the present case, to communicate the capture officially to the Consul of the neutral State of which the owner of the cargo is a subject, then I think that Her Majesty's Consuls might be properly instructed to communicate all captures, when so announced to them, to the owners of the cargo, and to inform them that it will be their duty to appear before the Prize Tribunal, specifying in what place, by their agent for their interest in the cargo. It will be for the Prize Tribunals to decide what proofs of neutral ownership they will require to satisfy them that the cargo in each case is exempted from condemnation by the Declaration of Paris of 1856.

Temple, August 23, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th August instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Treasury (dated August 18) and its inclosures, respecting an application from Mr. Moss for information whether he, as a broker, and Mr. Thompson, as owner of a steam collier, would be guilty of an infringement of neutrality in effecting a sale of that vessel to the French Government, and to request that we would take the case into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion upon it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it does not appear to us to be the duty of Her Majesty's Government, nor of ourselves as Law Officers, to advise private traders as to the legality or otherwise of future or contemplated commercial transactions. It is obvious that the correctness of the answer to questions of this description must depend upon a knowledge of all the circumstances of each transaction, which are known to the inquirer, but which are not known, and in many cases will be concealed from those who are asked to reply; and we think Her Majesty's Government cannot be too cautious in answering questions of this sort, nor too firmly resolved not to take upon themselves the responsibility of advising private traders as to their conduct, a responsibility which we cannot think properly attaches to the Government, and which private traders, honest and dishonest alike, will seek to fasten on the Government.

We think that Messrs. Moss and Thompson may properly be informed that it is no part of the duty of the Executive Government to interpret the laws, and that the Secretary of State must decline to do so. That Messrs. Moss and Thompson must conduct their commercial transactions on their own responsibility, and guided by that legal advice which in any other important matter it would be open to them, and prudent for them, to obtain.

Temple, August 23, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that the French Ambassador had called your Lordship's attention, as we would see by the inclosed correspondence, to a notification of the Prussian Government for engaging ships privately armed in the war-service of the North German Confederation.

That Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin had not up to that time sent home a copy of the notice, but that he (Mr. Hammond) inclosed a translation of it as received from the Swedish Minister at the English Court.

And that he was to request that we would take the matter into our immediate consideration, and, at our earliest convenience, report our opinion as to the character of the notice, with reference to the renunciation by Prussia, under the Declaration of Paris, of the employment of privateers, and as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we think that there are substantial distinctions between the proposed naval volunteer force sanctioned by the Prussian Government and the system of privateers ("la course") which the Declaration of Paris (1856) was intended to suppress. The vessels, as far as we can judge, will be, for all intents and purposes, in the service of the Prussian Government, and the crews will be under the same discipline as the crews on board vessels which belong permanently to the Federal navy. This being so, and while it so continues, Her Majesty's Government cannot object to the Decree of the Prussian Government as infringing the Declaration of Paris.

It may be proper, however, to call the attention of the Prussian Government to the Declaration of Paris, and to express the hope and belief of the English Government that Prussia will take care to prevent, by stringent instructions, any breach of that Declaration, and to inform M. de Lavalette that this has been done.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th instant, stating that as British subjects having establishments in France frequently apply to your Lordship for information as to the course they should pursue for the protection of their property and for obtaining exemption from military requisitions, which might be made upon their property by the belligerents, he was to request that we would inform your Lordship whether the answer to be returned to such applications should be "that British subjects in France are not entitled to any special protection for their property or to exemption from military contributions, to which they will be liable in common with the inhabitants of the place in which they reside, or in which their property may be situate," or whether we would suggest any other general answer.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we would suggest the insertion in the answer of the words "having property" before the words "in France," so that it may be understood that the property of British subjects situated in France will be liable to contribute to belligerent requisitions, whether the owners are resident or not in that country. In other respects we think the answer proper for the purpose.

Temple, August 30, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith a despatch from Lord Lyons, explaining an arrangement which the British owners of the cargo of a captured German vessel are desirous of making for obtaining the services of that vessel when condemned for the conveyance of the cargo to its place of destination, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my immediate consideration, and report my opinion as to the instructions to be given to Lord Lyons, to whom several similar applications have been made.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this matter into my consideration, and have the honour to report—

That this is not a matter in which Her Majesty's Ambassador can properly interfere. The question raised by the Secretary of Lloyds' Association is within the competency of the Prize Court alone to determine, which has to adjudicate upon the capture, and the owners of the cargo must make an application to that Court if they believe it to be for their interest that the cargo should remain on board the vessel until the latter is condemned or sold. The view taken by the Association is novel, and argues some inexperience as regards the delays incidental to prize proceedings, and the expenses to which owners of property may be subject to whilst it remains in the custody of the Prize Court. The Secretary of Lloyd's may, if your Lordship pleases, be informed that if the application should be made and the Prize Court should accede to it, Her Majesty's Government will not be able to interfere if there should be great delay in the proceedings to condemn the vessel, or if the immediate sale of the vessel after condemnation should not be decreed, or should be made under conditions which would frustrate the scheme of the Association as regards the transport of the cargo.

My Lord, Temple, September 2, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Lord Lyons containing documents connected with the composition and regulation of French Prize Courts, and to state that your Lordship concludes it would be desirable to publish these papers in the "London Gazette" for general information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I see no objection to the publication in the "London Gazette" of the Imperial Decrees of 9th May, 1859, and of 28th November, 1861, constituting the French Council of Prize. It is of importance that the British owners of cargo captured on board German vessels and the British Consular Agents should have information as to the nature of the Prize Tribunals, and the parties who are alone entitled to practice before them. But as regards the Règlement of 4th June, 1859, it is rather for the information of the members of the Council of Prize and the practitioners in the Courts than for general information.

Having made these observations, I leave it to your Lordship's judgment whether you will direct it to be printed as appendant to the Decrees.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Board of Trade, inclosing copy of a report from Her Majesty's Consul at Bordeaux, relative to the steps he had taken to facilitate the departure from that place of subjects of the German States; and he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion respecting the course Mr. Consul Hunt had pursued.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That this being a case of the saving of human life, we think the Consul was justified in giving every facility for the escape of those whose personal safety was in danger; and we certainly see no objection in the present case to Her Majesty's Consul sanctioning the engagement of the parties in question as extra hands on board the "Finchale." There was no fraud intended, or in fact worked against the local law, so as to render the protection thereby afforded to the parties in any way improper on his part.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Consul at Havre, relative to an intention alleged to be entertained of burning the warehouses at that port on the approach of the German forces; and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to any instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Bernal in the matter, more especially with reference to the steps taken by him, as reported in his despatch of the 9th instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I see no objection to the proposed action of the foreign Consuls in cataloguing the neutral property which is warehoused in Havre. The intention, if it is seriously entertained by the authorities of the place, of setting fire to the docks and warehouses on the approach of the German forces, would be utterly unjustifiable in my opinion, as such a step can be in no respect necessary for the effective defence of the town against hostile attack.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received September 20.)

My Lord, Temple, September 19, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating:—

1. That with reference to our letter of the 6th July and previous reports on the proposal, which originated with the United States' Government for the conclusion of a Convention for the protection of submarine telegraph cable, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a memorial, which had been addressed to the Postmaster-General by the Chairmen of the principal Submarine Telegraph Companies, in favour of the neutralization of submarine telegraphs in time of war, together with a letter from Lord Monck on the same subject, and the correspondence which had passed between the Post Office and the Foreign Office with regard to it. That proposal appeared to go somewhat further than the Piracy Clause in the United States' draft Convention to which Her Majesty's Government had expressed their readiness to assent in the terms suggested in our reports of the 4th February and 18th May last, and, before taking any steps in the matter, your Lordship would wish to be furnished with our opinion as to the terms in which such a proposal could be made so as to guard against abandoning any right which it might be the interest of this country to reserve.

2. That our reports on the United States' proposal, together with the proposal itself, and our reports thereon, were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no objection on principle to the neutralization of submarine telegraphs with a view to prevent their destruction in time of war, if their neutralization is to be complete, but the memorialists propose that submarine telegraphs should have the advantages of the neutral character, as regards their inviolability in time of war, without being subject to any corresponding obligation, such, for instance, as attaches to neutral territory, viz.: that it shall not subserve the purposes of either belligerent to the prejudice of his adversary.

Such an object can only be attained through means of an Œcumenical Convention; but Œcumenical Conventions on matters of maritime law, which are intended to continue in force notwithstanding war, must, in our opinion, be for the common interest of belligerents as well as neutrals, or at least the maintenance of them in time of war must not be attended with prejudice to any belligerent party, or they will cease to be respected by it.

We think that the memorialists should be prepared, if they wish their property to be invested with the inviolable character which attaches to neutral territory in time of war, to subordinate the use of it to the corresponding obligations of neutral territory as regards belligerent Powers.

The memorialists in the first place assume as a principle of international law, that submarine telegraphs connecting neutral territory would be at present respected by belligerents in time of war, but they entirely overlook the fact that the cables may be made an intermediate vehicle for conveying enemy's despatches, the right to intercept which, if they are discovered by a belligerent cruizer on board a neutral vessel on the high seas in its transit from one neutral country to another, is an incontrovertible principle of the law of nations.

We do not think that submarine telegraphs can properly be withdrawn from the operation of this principle without a general change in the present system of public law as applicable to enemy's despatches. For instance, the conveyance of instructions to the French fleet in the Baltic through the intermediate agency of the submarine cable from England to Denmark might have been attended with most prejudicial effects to the German arms, and it would have been in accordance with the principles of public law, as at present acknowledged, for the Germans to have disabled the cable, if it had been allowed to be used as a vehicle for conveying such instructions.

The memorialists have further entirely misapprehended the mischief which it would be to the interest of a belligerent to prevent as regards telegraphic cables connecting a neutral country with a belligerent country. "The belligerent Power, upon whose territory the cable terminates," is not the Power whose interests alone might be prejudiced by the abuse of the telegraph, his adversary might with reason object to secret communications passing from the neutral to the belligerent country, which at present, if they have any bearing upon the operations of the war, would be contraband, and he would have a right to intercept them.

The intercourse of maritime commerce is at present restricted by the right of visit on the part of the belligerent for the purpose of verifying its innocuous character, and for the purpose of preventing the growth of an unusual and abnormal intercourse which the existence of war quickens, if it does not altogether call it into action.

The argument also, upon which the memorialists justly lay stress, that all civilized nations have a common interest in the preservation of the various links in the chain of telegraphic communication, obviously will fail in time of war, unless the use of each link shall be so regulated that it should not conflict with the just rights of belligerents.

With regard to submarine telegraphs, which are the property of a belligerent Power, we fear that the circumstance, that their destruction would seriously injure the interests of neutral nations, does not make their case an exception to many other kinds of property, such, for instance, as railroads and telegraphs conducted overland. We need hardly point out that the proposal of the memorialists will go far to lessen the value of the right of blockade.

Temple, October 15, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed to transmit to me letters from the South Western Railway Company, the Admiralty, and Lloyds, respecting the interruption offered at Granville, Honfleur, and other ports to the ordinary traffic between those places and this country, and to request that I would take the matter into my consideration and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which should be pursued under the circumstances stated.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the circumstances under which France is at present placed are so exceptional, that it will be difficult for your Lordship to deal with the grievances of the South Western Railway Company on ordinary principles, seeing that the action of the Provisional Government at Tours, on the assumption that it is, for the time being, to be regarded as the responsible Government of France, is paralyzed by the operations of the invading armies. There does not appear to have been, on any of the occasions specified, any indisposition on the part of the local authorities to protect the legitimate trade of the ports; on the contrary, they appear to have used their best efforts to maintain order, so that as regards the past the question would seem to resolve itself into one of damages, to be discussed hereafter with the French Government.

As regards the future, I fear that unless the Government at Tours is prepared to take the necessary steps to secure the safety of British merchant vessels which may resort to the ports in question, there is no alternative for the South Western Railway Company but to abandon their trade for a time with those ports. I cannot advise your Lordship, that under present circumstances, Her Majesty's Government would be justified in ordering a British vessel of war to proceed to Granville to embark British subjects, who may be coming there for embarkation, unless in common concert with the Provisional Government at Tours, and your Lordship would probably require further information as to the necessity of the case.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Havre, requesting information upon certain points which do not seem to him clear in the instructions already furnished him in regard to the liability of British subjects in France to military requisitions by either of the contending parties; and to request that I would take Mr. Bernal's despatch into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Her Majesty's Consul in reply to his inquiries.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Consul at Havre should be informed that, as regards belligerent requisitions, Her Majesty's subjects resident in France can claim no exemption from them in respect of their personal property any more than their real estate.

With regard to the resistance on behalf of Her Majesty's subjects to forced loans and requisitions, which Mr. Bernal reports himself to have successfully maintained when he filled the post of Her Majesty's Consul at Carthagena, in the Republic of New Granada, your Lordship may probably think it right to inform him that such exemption was matter of Treaty engagement between Great Britain and the State of New Granada, and on that ground was rightfully insisted upon by Her Majesty's Consul.

My Lord,

Temple, October 17, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the same day's date, he was directed to transmit to me, for my consideration, a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Consul at Havre, on the subject of the riotous proceedings at Honfleur with the view to prevent the exportation of provisions to this country.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That there appears to be no indisposition on the part of the local authorities at Honfleur to protect the lawful trade of the port, but they are powerless in consequence of a panic amongst the lower classes, which excites them to oppose by violence the exportation of food in any form to England. If this opposition is directed against British vessels only, it would be a breach of the Treaty of Commerce (January 23, 1860) between the two countries, but I apprehend that the violence of the lower classes is indiscriminate, and that the authority of law is for the moment trampled under foot. Under these circumstances, the normal course would be for your Lordship to direct Her Majesty's Ambassador at Tours to call the attention of the Provisional Central Government at Tours to the proceedings of the rioters, and to request its effective interference to protect the trade of British subjects. If the Central Government, however, should declare itself to be unable to control the rioters effectively, I am of opinion that no other course can well be adopted for the present by your Lordship than to advise the South Western Railway Company to discontinue their trade with Honfleur until your Lordship is informed that effective protection will be afforded to their vessels by the Central Government. There does not appear at present to be any danger of life to British subjects at Honfleur apart from their endeavouring to procure the export of food from that port to England.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the inclosed correspondence, which has been received from the Lord Advocate of Edinburgh and the Admiralty, with reference to the arrival in the Frith of Forth of French war vessels with German prisoners on board, and to request that I would take this matter into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship, at my earliest convenience, with my opinion on the question therein raised, and to which attention is drawn by the Consul of the North German Confederation as to the position of such prisoners with reference to the neutral attitude of this country in the present war.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the French war ship had a right to enter the Frith of Forth, and remain there during such time and for such purposes as are allowed to belligerents in the present war under Her Majesty's Proclamation.

With regard to the assertion of the North German Consul at Leith that the German prisoners on board the French vessel were ipso jure free, as she was in neutral waters, there is no warrant in the law of nations for such a position. So long as the prisoners remained on board the French war-ship, they were under French jurisdiction, and the neutral authorities had no right to interfere with them. If they had been landed from the war-ship, the question raised would have been different, as they would have passed out of French jurisdiction and have become practically free. For an exposition of the general principles which govern such cases, I may refer your Lordship to the opinion of the Attorney-General of the United States in the case of Her Majesty's ship "President," which entered the Bay of San Francisco on November 25, 1854, accompanied by a Russian prize, the "Sitka," on which occasion the Attorney-General held that the United States had no jurisdiction over the prisoners on board the "Sitka." My Lord,

Temple, November 5, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that, with reference to my letter of the 23rd February last, he was directed to transmit to me a further despatch which your Lordship has received from Her Majesty's Consul at Réunion upon the question of compulsory service of British subjects in the local militia, together with the former correspondence on this subject, and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Consul Segrave upon this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Consul at Réunion should be instructed that, so long as the employment of the militia of Réunion is limited to the defence of the island from foreign invasion, natural-born British subjects who are domiciled in Réunion cannot claim of right exemption from serving in the militia, if the duty of so serving is imposed upon them by the municipal law.

My Lord, Temple, November 9, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating:—

1. That with reference to our Report of the 26th August last, on the question of protection to be afforded to British subjects having establishments in France, and their exemption from military requisitions which might be made upon them by the belligerents, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch and its inclosures, received from Lord Lyons, respecting a representation which had been addressed by the manager of Messrs. Betts and Co.'s capsule manufactory at Bordeaux to Her Majesty's Consul at that place (and by whom they had been referred to Her Majesty's Ambassador), in consequence of a threatened requisition by the French authorities, in the event of their refusing to accede to their demand that Messrs. Betts should manufacture capsules for warlike purposes for the French Government at their Bordeaux establishment.

2. That although your Lordship entertains little doubt that this is not a case for the interference of Her Majesty's Government, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to the answer which it may be proper to return to the applicants.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the applicants should be informed that they cannot claim to be in a more favourable position in respect of their manufactory at Bordeaux than French citizens would be entitled to in respect of similar manufactories in France; and that as they participate freely with French citizens in the advantages of French territory in time of peace, they must share equally with them the burdens which the defence of that territory imposes upon them in time of war.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Consul at Havre, representing that certain British subjects at Dieppe have been called upon to serve in the French National Guard, and that they are very anxious to have the question as to their liability to serve settled authoritatively; and he was to request that I would take their case into consideration, and furnish your Lordship, at my early convenience, with my opinion upon this matter; and further whether the fact that the National Guard is liable to be called upon by the French authorities to serve in the field, thus bringing the British subjects enrolled in that force in collision with the forces of a friendly Power, notwithstanding Her Majesty's declaration of neutrality, has any bearing upon the merits of this question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, before reporting to your Lordship on the general principles of international law applicable to this question, I should wish to be informed what are the precise provisions of the law of France to which reference is made in Mr. Jorten's letter, as requiring persons of any nation to defend the town of Dieppe or to leave it, and whether such law was in force when the three British subjects in question took up their residence in France or has been passed subsequently; also under what circumstances the three British subjects are residing at Dieppe, whether they must be taken to have acquired by the law of nations a French domicile or not.

My Lord, Temple, December 14, 1870.

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed letter from the French Chargé d'Affaires at this Court, referring to certain communications which had passed between the Government at Tours and that of Prussia on the subject of the hostages which had been detained by the Prussian authorities for the officers and crews of German merchant-vessels captured during the present war, and requesting the intervention of Her Majesty's Government in conveying to that of Prussia the remonstrance of the French Government on that subject.

2. That he was to state to us that, before communicating with Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin on that subject, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion upon the question raised between the two Governments.

3. That further papers upon that subject were annexed for our more complete information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the French Government is of right entitled to treat the crews of the captured vessels belonging to the enemy's mercantile marine as prisoners of war. Such was the practice in the last century, as your Lordship will find on referring to the Cartel for the exchange of prisoners concluded between France and England on 12th March, 1780 (Martens' "Recueil," III, p. 302). Your Lordship will also find on referring to the joint instructions issued to the commanders of the ships of war of Her Majesty and the Emperor of the French on 10th May, 1854 (Martens' N. R., XV, p. 594), that they are directed "to treat as prisoners of war all persons whatever who may be found on board the enemy's vessels, with the exception of women, children, and persons not belonging to the military or naval profession." The practice of France in the present war, which Count Bismarck so strongly denounces, would thus appear to be in perfect accordance with precedent, and so far does not warrant, in our opinion, reprisals of the kind adopted by the Prussian Government.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Consul at Havre, reporting that a blockade of the River Seine has been established by the French authorities at that port, and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether the notification made to Mr. Consul Bernal is of sufficient authority to warrant its publication in the "Gazette," and, if so, that I would draw up a notice for publication.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it would not be advisable, in my opinion, for your Lordship to treat the notice of the closing of the navigation of the Lower Seine, issued by order of the Commandant of the Military and Naval Division of that Department, as a formal notification under the authority of the Provisional Government of France of a belligerent blockade, such as would justify the condemnation of neutral vessels attempting to enter or leave that river. That the French authorities would be entitled to establish a belligerent blockade of the Lower Seine under the circumstance that Rouen is in possession of the enemy, with a view to prevent the entrance or exit of all vessels, cannot be questioned, but as matters stand at present, I think your Lordship may properly require that British vessels seeking to enter or leave the river should be individually warned, and should only be captured in case they should attempt, after warning, to enter or leave the river.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 10th instant, stating that, with reference to my report of the 6th August last, he was directed to transmit to me a letter and its inclosure from Messrs. Benbow and Saltwell soliciting a reconsideration of the decision arrived at by your Lordship in accordance with that report, with regard to the estate of the late Mrs. Kozminska, deceased at Havre, and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and report to your Lordship whether there is anything in their contents to change the opinion already expressed by me with respect to this case. The previous papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That under the circumstance now stated, that General Frome has obtained letters of administration to the effects of Mrs. Kozminska from an English Court of Probate, if such be the meaning of the last paragraph in the letter of Messrs. Benbow and Saltwell, of November 29, Her Majesty's Consul at Havre may be properly instructed to assist General Frome in obtaining his recognition by the French authorities as the legal representative of the deceased according to English law. But if any question should be raised by the French authorities respecting the domicile of the deceased, Her Majesty's Consul should refer to your Lordship for further instructions. I may add that the question of British or French domicile in this case is of importance rather as regards the form of proceeding than the substance of the succession, as it appears at present that the same parties would be entitled, under either system of law, to share in the distribution of the effects of the deceased.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed to acquaint me that the following telegram has been received from Her Majesty's Ambassador in France, dated Bordeaux, December 15, 4 P.M., and received yesterday:—

"I have received to-day (Thursday) the following, dated yesterday, from Count Chaudordy:—'Par suite de l'occupation des ports de Rouen, Dieppe, et Fécamp par les troupes Allemandes, commandants de nos forces navales ont reçu l'ordre d'établir le blocus des ports à dater du 13 de ce mois. Ce blocus sera successivement étendu à tous les ports de nos côtes qui pourraient tomber au pouvoir de l'ennemi.'"

Mr. Hammond was pleased to request, if this notice of blockade should appear to me sufficient, that I would prepare a draft notification thereof for publication in the "London Gazette."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the communication made to Her Majesty's Ambassador in France by the Comte de Chaudordy is of sufficient authority to justify your Lordship in making it publicly known, as far as the three specified ports are concerned.

Whether those ports are in fact blockaded in the manner required under the Declaration of Paris to render the blockade of them binding upon neutrals, is a question upon which Her Majesty's Consuls at those ports may be properly instructed to report to your Lordship, as far as they have the means of ascertaining such a fact.

I would observe that the communication made to Her Majesty's Consul at Havre by the Commandant of the Military and Naval Division of the Lower Seine, if it is to be interpreted with due regard to the subsequent communication made to Her Majesty's Ambassador in France, must be construed under limitations, which still leave the ports of Havre and Honfleur open to neutral commerce.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received December 26.)

My Lord,

Temple, December 26, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that with reference to the intended departure from Greenhithe on the 21st instant of the British vessel "International" for the purpose, as was alleged by Count Bernstorff, of laying a telegraph cable on French account, and which vessel, in consequence of our report of the 20th instant, had been ordered to be detained, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an accompanying letter from the Chairman of the Submarine Telegraph Company, stating the circumstances under which that Company were in expectation of receiving an immediate request from the French Director of Telegraphs to lay down a new cable between the English and French coasts, the English Company having the monopoly of telegraphic communication between the two countries; and, further, stating that Mr. Hammond was to request that we would favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion whether by carrying out the project in question, or any similar undertaking between England and France, the Company would be acting in violation of the Foreign Enlistment Act of 1870.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Government have on previous occasions declined to give opinions as to what acts might, or might not, under hypothetical circumstances constitute a breach of the law. We advise that Sir J. Carmichael be informed of this, and that Her Majesty's Government are unable to say more than that they regard any assistance given by Her Majesty's subjects to the French Government in the establishing of telegraphic communication for military purposes as un-neutral conduct, to which they can give no sanction; that they do not feel able to judge from the facts stated what the precise object or effect would be of the operation contemplated. It occurs to them, however, to observe that under present circumstances much suspicion must arise (to say the least) that telegraphs laid down at the instance of the French Government have some connection with military purposes.

My Lord,

Temple, December 30, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th instant, stating that, with reference to our report of the 26th instant, respecting an anticipated application from the French Director of Telegraphs to the Submarine Telegraph Company to lay down a new cable between the English and French coasts, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the General Post Office, to which department your Lordship had caused that matter to be referred, and in which were stated the reasons for which, in order to carry out practically the proposed undertaking, such an extension of the telegraphic wire would be required as would of necessity connect Her Majesty's Government with the transaction, which, in the opinion of the Postmaster-General, was only necessitated by the military requirements of the French Government. And that he was accordingly to request we would favour your Lordship with our further opinion on this case from the point of view thus taken by the Postmaster-General.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That two separate questions appear to us to arise upon these papers as to which somewhat different considerations may apply. The first question is, whether Her Majesty's Government should give any encouragement to the laying of the proposed cable by a promise or by holding out expectations of themselves connecting the cable with the system of English telegraphs now under Government control. To this we

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.

My Lord,

Temple, June 11, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence with the Home Office and Memorandum respecting the terms on which certificates should be granted and passports issued to aliens naturalized within the United Kingdom under the recently passed Naturalization Act, 33 Vict., cap. 14. That we should observe that the following points are raised in these papers:—

1. Whether the present system should be continued under which certificates of naturalization lapse, if the naturalized alien is voluntarily absent from the United Kingdom for a period of six months without the written licence of the Secretary of State.

2. Whether, if this system is abandoned, any and what qualifications should be inserted in the certificates to be granted under the new Act.

3. Whether passports granted to persons naturalized since 1858, and previously to the passing of the Act, should continue to be limited to six months, and if not, whether any and what limitations should be inserted in them.

4. Whether any and what limitations should be inserted in passports issued to persons naturalized under the new Act.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to state that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion upon these points, as well as with any other observations we might have to offer upon the subject. A copy of the Report of the Naturalization Commission was annexed for reference, together with a copy of the Naturalization Treaty with the United States signed on the 13th ultimo. Mr. Hammond further stated that your Lordship would wish to know whether, as, should that Treaty be ratified, citizens of the United States naturalized within the British dominions would become British subjects absolutely, they would be entitled to the same privileges in regard to passports as natural-born British subjects.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

On the first point, that the qualification in respect of time, which has been in use in the case of persons naturalized under the Statute of 1858, ought not to be continued in the case of persons naturalized under the new Statute.

On the second point, that no qualification in respect of time should be inserted in the certificates of persons to be naturalized under the new Statute.

On the third point, that, in the case of persons naturalized previously to the passing of the new Statute, if they do not avail themselves of the opportunity given to them of obtaining certificates under the 7th clause of the new Statute, the same qualification, as heretofore in use, should be inserted in any passports to be issued to them.

On the fourth point, that no limitation should be inserted in the passports to be issued to persons naturalized under the new Statute other than what is provided in the 7th clause of that Statute, and for that purpose we think it would be convenient that the certificate of naturalization should specify the foreign State of which the party applying for the certificate is at such time a subject.

In case the Treaty concluded with the United States should be ratified, we are of opinion that all citizens of the United States, who shall become naturalized in the United Kingdom under the new Statute, would be entitled to the same privileges in regard to passports as may be enjoyed by natural-born subjects of the Queen. We may add, that we concur in the observations of Lord Tenterden contained in one of the papers sent to us, so far as those observations relate to the questions asked of us in Mr. Hammond's letter.

have no hesitation in answering that we think no such encouragement can properly be given by this country consistently with the preservation of a fair neutrality. The second question is, whether Her Majesty's Government, declining to connect the cable if laid with the system of English telegraphs, should further interfere to prevent the laying of the cable itself.

And we are of opinion that it should so interfere. We gather from Mr. Scudamore's letter that the cable is really wanted, and would be employed almost exclusively for French military purposes, possibly as an indirect means of communication through this country between the different armies of France, and that but for the exigencies of war the cable would in all probability never have been required.

It appears to us, if Mr. Scudamore is correct in his view (which we see no reason to doubt), that even the indirect encouragement given by the Government not making use of its legal powers to prevent the laying of a cable likely to be used for such purposes would be inconsistent with a fair neutrality, and is a course therefore which we are unable to advise Her Majesty's Government to take.

To facilitate the

WE are favoured with your commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an inclosed letter from the Southampton Agents of the North German Lloyds Ocean Mail-Steamers, in which the question was raised as to the light in which colliers chartered in London, for the purpose of following the French fleet, and supplying them with coal (and thus rendering them assistance against German vessels), would be regarded with reference to the terms of the Neutrality Proclamation; and that he was to request that we would take that letter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the subject, and whether any, and, if so, what steps should be taken by Her Majesty's Government to meet the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the said letter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, although the exportation of coal is not generally prohibited, the exporters being warned that, if it be supplied to either belligerent, they run the risk of capture, we are of opinion that, if colliers are chartered for the purpose of attending the French fleet and supplying them with coal to enable them to pursue their hostile operations, such colliers become "store-ships" employed in their service, and (if this fact be established) that they should be detained under the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act. WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us an accompanying letter from the Privy Council Office, and its inclosures from the Board of Trade and Trinity House, on the subject of the employment of pilots by the ships of war of either of the belligerents, and that he was to request that we would take those papers into our immediate consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the propriety of the reply of the Board of Trade to the Trinity House communication, and also of the Circular referred to in Mr. Farrer's letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the Trinity House have sanctioned, subject to the opinion of the Board of Trade, the employment of pilots in "English waters," which we understand to mean "British waters." The reply of the Board of Trade authorizes their employment in "neutral waters," an expression which would apply to all waters other than French or Prussian, and would include (among others) Danish waters. We are clearly of opinion that the sanction should be confined to "British waters," and that in the strict sense of English ports, and sea within three miles of the shore, not in the wider sense in which the term is sometimes used. But, having reference to the Foreign Enlistment Act now before Parliament, and which may be passed in a few days, we think that no sanction can be safely given to pilots to do more than to navigate French vessels in or out of British ports or roadsteads when they are not at the time engaged in any hostile operations. We use the qualification "hostile" to exclude the case of a French ship of war being navigated into a British port in order to lie in wait for Prussian merchantmen, or out of a British port to capture them, or such use as French ships might make of our waters at Heligoland. We think it at the least questionable whether a pilot who enables a French ship of war to shorten her way to the Baltic by passing through our roadsteads, instead of going by the open sea, does not contravene the provisions of the 2nd section of the existing Foreign Enlistment Act.

We think it clear that he does contravene the provisions of the new Foreign Enlistment Bill as it is now drafted.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. W. and H. P. Sharp, inquiring whether the opening of a public subscription for the advance of money by loan to either of the belligerent Powers would be a violation of Her Majesty's Proclamation of Neutrality, and to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to this inquiry.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the advance of money by British subjects on account, or for the benefit of either belligerent, is not a matter which the Crown can of its own authority prohibit, and probably considerable legal difficulty would be experienced in any attempt to enforce a criminal liability for such an act. But directly and substantially to assist either belligerent is a proceeding of which it appears to us that Her Majesty's Government cannot in any way approve, and which does not seem to us to be an observance of that strict and impartial neutrality which Her Majesty observes, and which Her Proclamation expresses that she desires her subjects to observe in like manner.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received July 29.)

Temple, July 29, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that, with reference to our reports of the 25th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two letters from the Treasury, inclosing reports from the Customs Officers in London and Liverpool, relative to the alleged employment of British colliers to supply the French fleet with coal, and the suspected negotiations for the purchase of ships to be employed for belligerent purposes on Prussian and French account at Liverpool, and that he was to request that we would take these reports into our consideration and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which should be pursued in the matters to which they relate.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the said reports into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the existing materials furnish no sufficient ground for active interference on the part of Her Majesty's Government, but it is obviously desirable that the Custom-house Officers should be directed to exercise the utmost vigilance, and to report immediately all information they can obtain to Her Majesty's Government.

Temple, August 3, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that, with reference to our report of the 28th ultimo, and to his letter of that day, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from the Board of Trade, inclosing the draft of notice which they propose to give, founded on our report, for the instruction of pilots; and he was to request that we would take the draft into our immediate consideration, and inform your Lordship whether it met our views and was right and proper to be issued.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this draft into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we have given our best consideration to the observations of the Board of Trade, and have suggested a slight alteration in the interpretation clause, which will, we think, remove the difficulty which they suggest.

Temple, August 3, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that, with reference to your letter of the 28th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from the Board of Trade, proposing to delay issuing fresh instructions to the pilotage authorities until the new Foreign Enlistment Act had passed.

And that he had requested the Board of Trade at once to issue such instructions in conformity with our opinion as to what the law was, without waiting to see what it would be; but he was to call our immediate attention to the observations made by the Board of Trade on one of the clauses of the proposed Act.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That on the whole we think that the proposed instructions may be properly issued at once, and we do not see our way to safely extending them.

We suggest that, in order to prevent any appearance of unfriendliness to the French, there should be added words to this effect—"Ships-of-war in distress may always be piloted out of immediate danger."

The Attorney-General and Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received August 5.)

Temple, August 5, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the Treaty concluded on the 19th April, 1839, between Great Britain, Austria, France, Prussia, and Russia, by the Ist Article of which the independence and neutrality of Belgium, as stipulated in the VIIth Article of the Treaty signed on the same day between the Netherlands and Belgium, is guaranteed by the five Powers; and further stating that he was to request that we would report our opinion at our earliest convenience whether such guarantee is joint or several, and whether the refusal or incapacity of one or more of the Guaranteeing Powers to act on the guarantee liberates the remaining Powers from the obligation to do so.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have considered this matter and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that if the Treaty is to be construed by the rules which govern the construction of contracts by the law of this country, the guarantee is a joint one. We must point out, however, that the only effect of this construction of a guarantee given by several persons is that the party entitled to enforce it has to sue all the guarantors jointly. He may enforce the whole of the debt or damages against any one guarantor, who in his turn is able to enforce contribution from his co-guarantors. The term joint guarantee by no means imports that the guarantee of each is conditional on all the others performing their contract, and that upon one or more refusing to do so the others are released. No such construction would be placed on any guarantee unless such an intention were clearly expressed in it.

Applying these rules of our municipal law (which we believe to be substantially in accordance in this respect with that of most civilized countries), we reply to Mr. Hammond's second question that the refusal or incapacity of one or more of the Guaranteeing Powers to act does not in our opinion liberate the remaining Powers from the obligation to do so.

We are quite sensible that other considerations than the strict rules of the municipal law of any country may be applicable to the construction of Treaties. We cannot help thinking, however, that to hold the obligation of each of the five Powers conditional on all the others fulfilling their obligations,—a proposition leading to the consequence that if France invaded Belgium, all the other Powers would be thereby released from their obligations to Belgium,—would be opposed to the real meaning of the Treaty on any sound principles of construction.

Whether in the event of none of the co-guaranteeing Powers choosing to co-operate with us, Belgium could reasonably expect Great Britain to undertake single-handed a war against great Continental Powers is a question into which other elements enter than the strict construction of the Treaty, and on which we do not presume to give an opinion.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us therewith a letter from the Treasury inclosing a letter from the Board of Customs respecting a negotiation for the sale of a steam-collier named "Solent" to the French Government, and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and report our opinion as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Hein and Co. should be informed that although the mere contract for sale may not be prohibited, still that Her Majesty's Government cannot, under the circumstances, allow the vessel to be dispatched, and that all persons concerned in dispatching her will run a serious risk of being criminally prosecuted.

My Lord,

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit for our perusal, and in case we should have any observations to make thereupon, a letter from the Treasury communicating a report from the Commissioners of Customs respecting the case of the "Steady," lately a gun-boat and then being fitted out at Liverpool ostensibly for mercantile purposes.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That the case appears of a very suspicious character. We suggest that Messrs. Bowdler and Co. should be requested to furnish the name of "the party in London" from whom they have received the alleged order to put the vessel in repair, whether he is the registered owner, if not, by what title he claims to give the order? They should also be asked to show the order. If they refuse to give information on these subjects, the suspicion against them will become stronger. We advise that they be warned that if the vessel should be dispatched, and should afterwards be employed in the service of either belligerent, they will run a very serious risk of being criminally prosecuted under section 9 and other sections of the "Neutrality Act, 1870." Whether further information be obtained from them or not, inquiries should be instantly made and reported as to the ship's registry, who is now registered as the owner, how long he has been so, if a recent transfer has been made, from whom, and we think that the ship should not be allowed to depart until further information is obtained.

My Lord,

and Southampton; that the "Solent" was the subject of our report of the 5th instant; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these letters into our immediate consideration, and report to your Lordship, with our opinion as to the course which should be pursued by Her Majesty's Government in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Case of the "Solent."

That with respect to the "Solent," Mr. Stiles, of Sunderland, who is described by Mr. Wilcox as a part owner of her, should be requested to give the name and address of the Agent of the French Government, who he alleges offered him a profit of 3,000*l.*, and further to state the purpose for which that agent desired to buy the ship. Mr. Wilcox should also be directed to inquire, or to put the police on the track of inquiring, what proposals this "Agent of the French Government" (as he is described) made, and to whom, with respect to the purchase of other ships; and if any evidence can be adduced against him to show that he was soliciting persons to violate the Foreign Enlistment Act, should be at once summoned before the Magistrates, and charged with that offence with a view to his committal for trial. It is said that the "Solent" has left Sunderland for Southampton. It should be ascertained whether she has arrived there, if not what is her real destination. The information from the Customs officers is of a very meagre and unsatisfactory character, and we suggest that they should be directed to make more searching and diligent inquiry. If Mr. Stiles did not sell her to the French Agent, to whom did he sell her? When; for what purpose; whither does he allege she was bound; who are his co-owners? All these questions ought to have been put to him, and his answers reported, or his refusal to answer.

Case of the "Norseman" and "Sweden."

With respect to the alleged sale of the "Norseman" and the "Sweden" to the French Government, it appears that the "Norseman" has already been delivered at Cherbourg, and that the captain and crew are now at Hartlepool. The letter of Mr. Armstrong of the 28th of July looks extremely suspicions. We suggest that the Solicitor to the Treasury should be directed immediately to inquire into the matter either personally or by some local agent. The master and crew should be examined. The former must know who were the owners or at least who acted as such, what instructions he received, to whom he delivered the ship, and must be able to give other important information. The editor of the paper from which the paragraph was extracted should be communicated with. It should be ascertained who was the registered owner when the ship left, what transfer (if any) was made of her shortly before she left, who is Mr. Young mentioned in the letter of Mr. Armstrong, and many other inquiries which will suggest themselves to a solicitor, and which may afford ground for a prosecution. Many of these inquiries might and ought to have been made by the officers of the Customs. If the "Sweden" has not gone, we think that she should not be allowed to go until further information about her has been ascertained.

My Lord, Temple, August 11, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 5th instant and to previous correspondence respecting supplies of coal for the French fleet, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for our information, and for any observations we might have to make thereupon, a further letter from the Treasury and its inclosures upon this subject, and referring especially to the case of the vessels "Marie" and "Emma," which have cleared from Cardiff with coal for Cherbourg.

And Mr. Hammond was to add that Her Majesty's Consul at Cherbourg had been instructed to report whether these two vessels have arrived at Cherbourg according to their clearances.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Miller should be instructed to prosecute a strict inquiry, with a view to ascertain who are the real owners of the "Marie" and "Emma" respectively, which he reports to be ostensibly owned by Mr. H. Worms. Mr. Miller speaks of the two vessels as chartered by the French Government for two years; he subsequently speaks of them as chartered by "Mr. Worms and whosoever is associated with him." Mr. Miller should be requested to state what is the precise information which he has received as to the chartering of these vessels, and whether Mr. Worms, whom he describes as a French coal shipper, is a French subject.

With respect to the list of vessels reported to have cleared from Cardiff in coals to French ports since the 20th ultimo, Mr. Miller should be instructed to report immediately any of such vessels, if it should return to Cardiff, more particularly any of the five vessels which he reports to have cleared to Cherbourg or Brest.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an accompanying letter from the Registrar-General of Seamen and its inclosures, respecting the case of the screw steamer "Hypatia," of London, which left Sunderland on the 23rd ultimo, for various destinations, but which there was reason to believe had been sold at Cherbourg to the French Government.

And that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with any observations or suggestions upon that case if we should have any to offer.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the Superintendent of Customs at Sunderland should be instructed to report under what precise circumstances the "Hypatia" left Sunderland on 23rd ultimo, and whether in ballast or with cargo. Inquiry should also be made whether she touched at Portland before she proceeded to Cherbourg. The Registrar-General of Seamen at Southampton should also be instructed to report the names of the seamen paid off at his office, and more particularly of the officers of the ship, if they were paid off. The "Hypatia" appears to have been transferred to the French Government almost imme-

My Lord,
Temple, August 13, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an accompanying letter from the Admiralty calling your Lordship's attention to certain points which, not being adverted to in the letter from the Foreign Office to the Admiralty and other public Departments of the 19th ultimo, of which a copy was inclosed, the Board of Admiralty considered might be made the subject of further instructions for the guidance of British naval officers.

And that he was to request that we would take this matter into our consideration, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion at our early convenience, whether the answer which your Lordship proposed to return to the Admiralty, and of which a draft was annexed, was right and proper.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the answer which your Lordship proposes to return to the first and second queries of the Admiralty are, in our opinion, right and proper. With regard to the answer proposed to be returned to the third query with reference to the sale of belligerent ships of war in British waters, we agree with your Lordship in thinking that it is unnecessary to furnish instructions at present to naval officers on this head.

On the last point we think that the question of the belligerent captor giving up foreign mails found on board captured vessels is one not to be hastily mooted without due consideration of the consequences of enemy's despatches becoming thereby protected from discovery and seizure.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from a Mr. Rayner, inquiring whether he would incur any penalty under the neutrality laws by communicating to either of the belligerents in the present war certain improvements in heavy artillery; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Mr. Rayner.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion Mr. Rayner should be told, that it may be open to question whether, if he makes such communications as he describes to either of the belligerents, he may not be held to be in the military or naval service of such belligerent; be this as it may, that Her Majesty's Government must discountenance any such communications, which, if he chooses to make them, he must make at his own peril.

Temple, August 19, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us, with reference to our recent reports respecting the steam colliers "Marie" and "Emma," and for any observations we may have to offer thereupon, the accompanying letter from the Treasury inclosing copies of further reports from the Customs respecting those two vessels. Further reports are also furnished in regard to the "Steady" and "Brisk"; but that it does not appear that any further steps are necessary in regard to these last-named vessels.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Miller may be instructed not to interfere with any collier-vessel, whether French or English owned, which is bonâ fide engaged in trade between British and French ports; but if it should appear from the papers of any collier-vessel, ostensibly engaged in such trade, on her return to Cardiff that she has not delivered her cargo at the port for which she last cleared from Cardiff, that circumstance should be at once reported.

With regard to the steam-colliers "Emma" and "Marie," there does not at present appear to be sufficient evidence of their being store ships in the French Naval Service, to justify the interference of the Government. If it appeared that they were chartered by the French Government for the purpose of supplying the French fleet with coal, the case would be different.

The Attorney-General to Earl Granville.—(Received August 20.)

My Lord,
Temple, August 20, 1870.

I AM honoured with your commands signified to me in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant addressed to Her Majesty's Law Officers, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to them an accompanying letter and its inclosures, received from the Admiralty, in which the question was raised as to the propriety of a notification of blockade being conveyed from one belligerent to another by an English man-of-war; and that he was to request that they would favour your Lordship at their early convenience with their opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the Admiralty upon that subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That in my opinion the conveyance by a British man-of-war of the notification of a blockade from one belligerent to another is highly improper. The Governor of Heligoland appears to me to have been altogether in error in supposing that his refusal of a pilot to the French Admiral imposed upon him the duty of acting as agent of the French Admiral, or instructing a British officer to act as such agent in the notification of blockade.

It is true that Lieutenant Martin is directed by the Governor to deliver the notice to the British Vice-Consul at Cuxhaven, but this is to be done on behalf of the French Admiral, and in compliance with his request as stated in the first paragraph of the letter of the Governor of the 12th of August, that "he would communicate the approaching blockade of the Eider, Elbe, Weser, Jahde, to the North German authorities." I think therefore that the notice conveyed was from the one belligerent to the other, and cannot be regarded as a mere warning to English vessels of a blockade already existing and duly notified.

(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.

---

Separate Report of the Queen's Advocate.

I am of opinion that the application of the French Admiral to be furnished with a pilot for the purpose of sending in a flag of truce to Cuxhaven to give notice to the local authorities of the intended blockade of the River Elbe was properly refused by the Governor of Heligoland. Such a communication on the part of the Commander of a belligerent fleet to the authorities of an enemy's port which he intends to blockade is most unusual. There is no obligation upon a belligerent Commander as regards an enemy to notify his intention to blockade a port, but as regards neutrals such a notification, although not a duty, would be an act of humanity. In the present case the notification of the intended blockade, and of "the days of grace" intended to be allowed to neutral vessels, was for the benefit of such neutral vessels as might be lading cargoes in the ports on the Elbe. I am of opinion that it was perfectly consistent with the neutrality avowed by Her Majesty's Government for a British man-of-war to be the bearer of a letter from the Governor of Heligoland to Her Majesty's Consul at Cuxhaven, announcing the intention of the French Admiral, as notified to the Governor, and requesting him to make public such notification.

What would have been the binding effect of the notification of the French Admiral in the present case it will be unnecessary for your Lordship to consider, as a diplomatic notification from the French Government has been formally communicated to your Lordship of a date subsequent to the 15th August, but I may observe that the notification of the French Admiral being dated on the 12th August could not have been accepted as a notification of the fact of a blockade being established on the 15th instant.

My Lord, Temple, August 20, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith, with reference to the closing remarks in my report of the 18th instant, a letter from the Colonial Office, with which I should find the letter from the French Admiral to the Governor of Heligoland, inclosing the notice of blockade. That this notice and the letter, as I should see, do not bear out the construction put upon that measure in the Governor's communication to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin and Consul at Hamburgh, on which my report of the 15th instant was founded, nor on his own telegram inclosed in the Colonial Office letter of the same day, but they are consistent with the notification published at Paris, to which my further report of the 18th instant applied, and which has again been received from Lord Lyons, as officially communicated to him by the French Minister for Foreign Affairs.

That your Lordship has suggested to Lord Kimberley to call on the Governor to explain this discrepancy; but in the meanwhile, as I should see by the inclosed telegrams that day received from Lord Augustus Loftus and Mr. Annesley, it has attracted the attention of Her Majesty's Ambassador and Consul, and your Lordship has thought it right at once to publish in the daily papers the telegram received from the Consul on the subject.

That your Lordship directed him, in placing the inclosed papers before me, to request my opinion whether the circumstances therein set forth require any further notice on your Lordship's part.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that no further notice is required upon the part of your Lordship, as regards the error in the communication made by the Governor of Heligoland to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin and Consul at Hamburgh. The later communication on the part of the Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne to Lord Lyons must be taken to be the diplomatic notification of the blockade, made in due form to Her Majesty's Government, which it was the duty of Her Majesty's Government to make known forthwith to Her Majesty's subjects. (The "Neptunus," 2 Christopher Robinson, p. 113.) That duty having been duly performed by your Lordship, there is nothing further, in my opinion, to be done on your Lordship's part.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that, with reference to our report of the 10th instant, he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Treasury and its inclosures, containing further information respecting the steam colliers "Norseman" and "Sweden," and to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion whether any, and if so, what further steps should be taken with regard to these vessels.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That under the circumstances of this case, as the "Norseman" left England before the Neutrality Act of 1870 came into operation, we are of opinion that no proceedings can be taken against her former owner or master under that statute for despatching her from England, and as the facts stated do not show that she was in any way equipped or fitted out before she left England for the purpose of a transport or storeship, we do not think, as at present informed, that they bring her within section 7 of the Foreign Enlistment Act.

With regard to the "Sweden," which has returned to Hartlepool, and is about to proceed to Gottenburg, we have advised in a report already before your Lordship.

The previous papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That for reasons stated in our previous reports we think the detention of the "Sweden" was a proper precaution, but as after due inquiry there seems a fair probability that her real destination is Gottenburg, we are of opinion that she may be allowed to sail; but it may be explained to the shippers that information reached the Government of her intended sale to the French Government, upon which information she was detained while inquiries could be made into the matter. Her Majesty's Consul at Gottenburg should be instructed meanwhile to report her arrival, if she arrives, or her non-arrival, if she does not reach Gottenburg within the time when she would be reasonably due.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 13th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Treasury forwarding reports from the Board of Customs with regard to the "Hypatia," and he was to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That as it appears that the whole transaction connected with the dispatch of the "Hypatia" from England was completed before the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870, came into operation, we are of opinion that no proceedings can be successfully instituted against the owners of that vessel for a breach of that Statute, and that the facts before us are not sufficient to bring the parties within the penalties of the old Foreign Enlistment Act.

My Lord, Temple, August 26, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th instant, stating that, with reference to the reports which we have furnished to your Lordship on the question of the supply of coal by British vessels to the French fleet, he was directed to inclose a letter from the Treasury, inclosing a return of the vessels that have returned to Cardiff from French ports, and have again cleared with cargoes of coal, and to request that we would inform your Lordship whether we are of opinion that any further steps need be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it seems to us that for the present, at any rate, the reports had better be continued. Care should be taken also to make sure, if possible, that the shipments of coal have been bonâ fide made to French ports, and that the ships have not been again rechartered to the Baltic from the French port of destination. Such a proceeding would, in our opinion, be an evasion of the Act.

We would further suggest that it might be well to desire our Consuls in the particular French ports to which coals have been consigned to report home as to how these coals were forwarded from the French ports to the Baltic.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received August 26.)

My Lord, Temple, August 26, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter from Messrs. Russell and Co. inquiring whether the blockade of the coast of Sleswig is considered by Her Majesty's Government to be effective, and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer that should be returned to this letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Russell and Co. may be informed that it is for the Prize Courts of the belligerent imposing the blockade to construe the notification of the French Admiral, but that the validity of any asserted blockade of the River Hever will depend not upon the proper interpretation to be given to that notification, but upon the fact that an effective blockade of the mouth of that river is maintained by the French fleet in conformity with the 4th Article of the Declaration of Paris of April 16, 1856. That Messrs. Russell may be further informed that it is competent for any belligerent Power to blockake so much, and so much only, of an enemy's coast as may suit its purpose, and that the fact of part only of the seaboard of Sleswig being blockaded at present by the French fleet would not, in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, justify any intervention on its part for either of the purposes suggested in Messrs. Russell's letter.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a notification of blockade of the Baltic German ports received from Her Majesty's Ambassador, and to request that, if the same is sufficient, I would prepare a notice for insertion in the "London Gazette."

I am also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, transmitting two further despatches from Lord Lyons respecting the Baltic blockade, and also a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Copenhagen, another from Her Majesty's Consul at Stettin, and a telegram from Her Majesty's Consul at Königsberg; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, with reference to the previous papers on this subject, and prepare such notice as may be required for insertion in the supplement to the "London Gazette" of yesterday.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

Notification.

Foreign Office, August , 1870.

IT is hereby notified that the Right Honourable Earl Granville, K.G., Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has received from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris an official copy of the Notification of the blockade of the coasts of the Confederation of North Germany in the Baltic, transmitted to him from the Imperial Ministry of Foreign Affairs, which is as follows:—

"We, the Undersigned, Vice-Admiral, Senator, commanding-in-chief the naval forces of His Majesty the Emperor of the French in the Baltic Sea, having regard to the state of war existing between France and Prussia, as well as the States of the Confederation of North Germany, acting in virtue of the Powers which appertain to us, declare:—

"That, from the 15th August, 1870, the ports, harbours, roads, creeks, &c., comprised between 53° 25′ and 55° 53′ of north latitude, 7° 6′ and 18° 55′ of east longitude by the meridian of Paris, will be kept in a state of effective blockade by the naval forces placed under our command, and that friendly and neutral vessels will have a delay of ten days to complete their lading and quit the blockaded places.

"Every vessel which shall attempt to violate the said blockade will be proceeded against in conformity with the law of nations and the Treaties in force with neutral Powers.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th August instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, relative to the detention at Hamburgh of a number of emigrants engaged by the Agent of the Queensland Government to proceed to that Colony, and to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion whether any application can properly be made to the French Government to allow the departure of these emigrants, notwithstanding the blockade.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose a draft despatch which, if we saw no objection, your Lordship proposed to address to Lord Lyons on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no objection to your Lordship's despatch, a draft of which is before us, being sent to Lord Lyons.

The sailing of these emigrants is a matter entirely apart from the war, and can have scarcely the remotest bearing upon it. And although the French Government, as things now stand, may perhaps refuse the permission asked, we can see no reason why, in the courteous terms suggested by your Lordship, it should not be asked for.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.

Report—

That the application which your Lordship is solicited to make in this case is not simply that the emigrants may be allowed to depart from a blockaded port, but that they may depart in an enemy's ship. Had it been proposed that they should embark in a neutral vessel, I think that the application for a license for the vessel to pass the blockading squadron might have been reasonably entertained by the French Government, and, therefore, properly preferred by a neutral Government; but in the present case, as the vessel in which the passengers are to embark is an enemy's vessel, it will be necessary that your Lordship should solicit from the French Government a safe-conduct, which will enable the vessel, not merely to pass the blockading squadron in safety, but which will exempt her from capture as enemy's property, if she should anywhere fall in the way of a French cruizer on the high seas.

I hardly think the circumstance of the passengers being emigrants on their way to a British Colony is a sufficient ground for your Lordship to solicit the favour of such a safe-conduct for an enemy's ship.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me therewith a copy of a telegram from Lord Lyons, stating that he had been officially informed by the French Minister for Foreign Affairs that the beginning of the Baltic blockade is the 19th instant. I am to add that if you should think it desirable to make a further notification in this evening's "Gazette," the substance of the telegram, and not a copy of it, should alone be given, as the telegram came in cypher.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That as the rectification of the notice issued by the Commander of the French fleet in the Baltic is now without practical importance as regards neutral vessels which are within the blockaded ports, by reason of the days of grace having expired, I think it would be advisable to wait for the transmission of the official notification of the correction of the error, which I presume will be communicated to Lord Lyons by the French Foreign Office. It will be advisable, upon the arrival of the French official notification, for your Lordship to direct a corresponding notification to be inserted in the "London Gazette," so that it may be matter of public record.

My Lord,

AS I was about to forward my report, which your Lordship will have received, on the subject of the first telegram from Lord Lyons, a copy of a second telegram of this day's date, from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, was communicated to me by Mr. Hammond, containing an extract from the "Journal Officiel" of this morning's date, noting an error in the previous official notification of the French Government, published in the "Journal Officiel" of 25th instant, with regard to the date of the commencement of the blockade of the German ports in the Baltic. Under all the circumstances I think it would be advisable for your Lordship to direct that no official recognition should be made of the correction of the error, by notifying it in the "London Gazette," until the arrival of the official document, which I presume will be transmitted in due course from the French Foreign Office to Her Majesty's Ambassador. I may observe that the notification of the 25th instant announced that a blockade would be established on the 15th instant. The present notification would appear to be that a blockade was only effectually established on the 19th instant.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's directions signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th instant, stating that your Lordship had received our report of the 27th instant, approving the draft which your Lordship proposed to address to Lord Lyons with regard to the detention at Hamburgh of a number of German emigrants engaged to proceed to Queensland. The Queen's Advocate had appended to our report some observations as to the proposed departure of the emigrants in an enemy's ship, which he considered likely to raise difficulties, and that your Lordship would be glad to be informed whether we had seen those observations, and what our opinion is on the point raised by the Queen's Advocate.

Our report, together with the Colonial Office letter, was returned herewith for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's directions we have taken these observations into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we had the advantage of seeing the report of the Queen's Advocate before we wrote our own, and with great respect for him we found ourselves unable to agree with it. We could not, and are still unable to see why your Lordship should not ask for a safe passage for this vessel or vessels, if more than one.* Nothing is leaving Germany which it can be the interest of France to retain there, and all the arrangements having probably been made before the war broke out, and the ship and her passengers being bound direct to a British colony, in pursuance of arrangements made without any reference to the war, we think that your Lordship may quite reasonably ask of a friendly Government the safe passage which is necessary. We do not apprehend any difficulty or complication as likely to arise in the event of the French Government acceding to the request.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. A. Walker, complaining of the detention of the steam-ship "Steady" belonging to him by the Customs authorities at Birkenhead, and that the accompanying reports addressed to the Treasury contained particulars respecting that vessel, and he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Mr. Walker.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That there are circumstances connected with the purchase of this vessel by Mr. Walker which are not altogether satisfactory as regards her destination, nor does the letter of Mr. Walker announcing that she is now "for sale" remove the suspicions attaching to the vessel. If she be for sale we do not see how Mr. Walker would suffer if she remained at Birkenhead until he had found a purchaser for her. If a trial of her engines be all that is desired, that might be allowed if proper precautions were taken to prevent her escape. We cannot forget that a "trial of their engines" was desired for the steam-rams, and abandoned when precautions were taken to prevent its being made a means of escape. We cannot advise the vessel being released until it appears to whom she is sold, and for what purpose. Though Mr. Walker speaks of her as his property, we not understand him to be the registered owner.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That under the circumstances of the French squadron, to which the corvette was attached, being engaged in maintaining a blockade of the Elbe, the Governor of Heligoland was justified in objecting to the corvette leaving her station, and anchoring within British waters for the purpose of taking on board a supply of coals.

My dear Sir, Temple, September 18, 1870

I SEND you a rough draft of an opinion which I will send in to the Foreign Office to-morrow morning in proper form. You had better telegraph to the Custom-house at Liverpool not to allow the "Steady" to have a trial-trip except with a guard on board her to secure her return to the float or river.

I think it was proposed in the case of the steam-rams to place some marines on board them. Whether any such force is disposable at Liverpool at present I know not, but it would be easy for the Germans to board her off the Ormeshead and land any river police in their boat.

You have omitted to inclose to me the report of the Law Officers of 17th instant, as you announce in the covering letter. If you will send it to the Temple to-morrow, I will communicate with my colleagues forthwith for their approval of my opinion and any comments which they may be disposed to make upon it.

Yours faithfully,

THAT the circumstances under which the late brig of war "Steady" is announced by Mr. Walker to be for sale again, coupled with the facts communicated in the letter of the French Consul to the Customs authorities at Liverpool, give rise to so much suspicion as to the uses to which that vessel may be applied in contravention of the "Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870," that the Customs authorities at Liverpool may, in my opinion, be properly instructed not to allow her to leave the Birkenhead float on a trial-trip without an adequate guard being placed on board her, as was proposed in the case of the steam-rams, so as to secure that she shall not be dispatched from this country in contravention of the Statute.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter from the Admiralty inclosing one from the India Office, in which the question is asked whether the prohibition to belligerent ships of war to bring prizes into British ports extends to prizes manned by a prize crew, though not accompanied by an armed ship, and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be given to this inquiry.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the prohibition may of right be extended to prizes of war entering Her Majesty's ports in charge of a prize-master and crew, equally as to prizes carried by ships of war.

The language of the Circular is somewhat ambiguous, and would primâ facie appear only to interdict ships of war entering Her Majesty's ports accompanied with their prizes.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the circumstance that no French cruizer had been seen from Stettin or Danzic or Memel would not alone be conclusive that the approaches to those ports are not, in fact, effectively watched by a French cruizer; but if merchant-vessels have entered those ports on several successive days without interruption by any French cruizer, that circumstance would be inconsistent with the test of a binding blockade, as adopted by France and Great Britain under the Declaration of Paris of 1856. Your Lordship would not, however, in my opinion, be justified in taking action in this matter without more accurate information on the question of fact. I may observe that the notice issued by the French Admiral of 15th August, 1870, was only an announcement of his intention to establish a blockade of the North German ports in the Baltic. I am not aware whether Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris has received any communication from the French Government that a blockade of those ports has been, in fact, established by the French naval forces.

2. That the former papers, including the Queen's Advocate's report of the 19th instant, were returned to us for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That the force on board the "Steady" during her trial trip should be of such a nature as to afford an absolute security for her safe return. At such a time as this we venture to suggest that there ought to be Marines in some force in or near Liverpool, or at all events some force capable of taking armed possession of any ship in herself suspicious or while engaged in suspicious acts. We cannot advise that a trial trip should be permitted to the "Steady" without such a force of some kind being on board of her as to be capable of overpowering resistance in case she should make any attempt to escape.

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the War Office, applying for information as to the instructions that should be given to the officer commanding the western district for his guidance in the event of a belligerent ship of war refusing to comply with the requirements of Her Majesty's Proclamation of Neutrality; and he was to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to the War Office.

2. That a short memorandum, which had been drawn up in the Foreign Office, of some precedents bearing on the subject, was inclosed for our information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That upon a ship of war belonging to either of the belligerent Powers having notice to depart from any of Her Majesty's ports, in pursuance of the instructions contained in Earl Granville's Circular letter of the 19th July, and failing to comply with the same, it will be lawful for Her Majesty's officers to use force to compel her to put to sea. In what way force should be applied must depend upon the available means, whether the guns of a battery on shore can be directed against the vessel, or whether it may be necessary for one of Her Majesty's ships to intervene. In either case, we think that a formal warning of twenty-four hours should be given to the belligerent vessel of the intention of Her Majesty to inforce her right as a neutral to prohibit a belligerent cruizer making use of British waters for any purposes other than those of the necessary subsistence of her crew or the necessary repairs of the vessel itself. We would observe that Her Majesty's Proclamation would not touch this question, which is embraced in the circular of Earl Granville, unless some attempt were made to increase or augment the warlike power of the belligerent vessel.

The previous correspondence was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day, stating that, with reference to our report of the 8th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. Hilbery, Solicitor to Mr. Walker, applying for information as to the grounds of the detention of the "Steady," and to request that we would take that letter into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the said letter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That in our opinion Mr. Hilbery may be informed that among the circumstances (all of which they do not feel bound to disclose) which have induced Her Majesty's Government to detain the vessel, is the fact of her being still unregistered, and the absence of all explanation why, if Mr. Walker is her owner, he does not register himself as such. Mr. Hilbery may be reminded of Mr. Walker's request for a trial trip, in order that her engines might be tested with a view to her sale; that this request has been complied with, subject to security for her return, and Mr. Hilbery should be requested to state whether or not this offer is accepted.

If it be refused, as it was in the case of the steam rams, some presumption may arise that the request was not bonâ fide made.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed to request that I would furnish your Lordship, at my earliest convenience, with my opinion as to whether the formation of an Ambulance Corps in this country, for the exclusive service of one of the belligerents in the war between France and Germany, would amount to a breach of neutrality.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report—

That the formation of an Ambulance Corps in this country for the exclusive service of one of the belligerents would not, in my opinion, amount to a breach of neutrality, if by "exclusive service" is meant that the ambulances are to attend the movements of the troops of one belligerent exclusively; but if it is intended that the staff of the ambulances, when in the field, shall not entertain and take care of sick or wounded soldiers, "to whatever nation they may belong," if they are brought in for succour, I should be of opinion that the corps would not be entitled to participate in the benefit of neutrality under the Convention of Geneva (August 22, 1864).

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us for our opinion, a letter which had been received from the Treasury containing correspondence respecting a vessel called the "Sharpshooter," formerly a gunboat, and now lying at Liverpool, whose destination is ostensibly set forth as Singapore; and he was to request that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship with as little delay as possible what course should in our opinion be adopted as regards this vessel.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th October instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us for our consideration a letter which had been received from the Treasury containing a report from the Customs respecting the proceedings of the collier "Marie" in carrying coal from Cardiff to the French fleet; and to request that we would be good enough to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what steps should be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That as the "Marie" appears to be a French steamer, regularly employed in the coal trade, and originally despatched from a French port to load coal at Cardiff, we consider that she is not within the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, which prohibits vessels being despatched by persons within Her Majesty's dominions with the intent that they shall be employed in the service of a belligerent.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that, with reference to our report of the 12th instant respecting the case of the "Steady," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith further letters received from Mr. Hilbery on behalf of Mr. Walker, and he was to request that we would take the same into consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to any further steps which should now be taken by your Lordship in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we observe that Mr. Hilbery, in his letter of the 14th, complains that the Liverpool officials have had no information of the trial trip; we conclude that since then the necessary directions have been given, and if so, we infer from Mr. Hilbery's letter of the 19th that the trial trip is no longer desired.

Assuming the supposition to be correct, we would suggest that a letter be written to Mr. Hilbery, stating that the proper arrangements have been made for a trial trip, and requesting a definite answer whether it is desired or not.

It appears from Mr. Hilbery's statement, the correctness of which has been probably tested by this time, that Mr. Walker is now registered as the owner, and one ground of suspicion is thereby removed; but still some mystery seems to attach to the ship. Mr. Walker does not, it appears, intend to send her on any commercial voyage, but wishes to sell her; if so, we do not see why he should not sell her where she is; but he represented that, before he could find a purchaser, he must have an opportunity of testing her engines, this opportunity is given, and, as we assume, declined, and he wishes to send the vessel on no commercial adventure to some destination, which he does not disclose, ostensibly for the purpose of selling her.

We suggest that Mr. Hilbery be requested to state, on behalf of Mr. Walker:—What is the vessel's destination if she is allowed to leave Liverpool? Whether she is to go on a commercial voyage? If not, why this immediate necessity for leaving Liverpool? And why the trial trip, which was desired some time ago, is now deemed insufficient to test her engines with a view to her sale? If these questions be answered satisfactorily there may be no further reason for detaining the vessel.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Admiralty, respecting the presence at Lowestoft of a German vessel in possession of a French prize crew, and communicating a protest from the Vice-Consul of the North German Confederation against the vessel being removed from the limits of the port, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this matter into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course which should be pursued.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report—

That assuming the vessel in question to be, as represented, a prize of war in charge of an officer having a commission from the French Government, he had a right, in the absence of any Proclamation of Her Majesty to the contrary, to enter Lowestoft Roads with her, and to bring her to anchor there for any purpose compatible with the neutrality of British waters, and it is not the duty of Her Majesty's Government, nor would it be justified in disturbing his possession of the prize. It would be in fact inconsistent with neutrality for Her Majesty's Government to exercise any coercion over the prize. (Marten's "Droit des Gens," section 312.)

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that, with reference to my report of yesterday stating my opinion that the German vessel at Lowestoft in possession of a French prize crew could not properly be interfered with to the extent of releasing her from duresse, he was directed to request my opinion, at my earliest convenience, as to what course should be adopted as regards that vessel with reference to the concluding paragraph of your Lordship's letter to the Admiralty and other Departments of the 19th July last.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the French prize should not be allowed to remain for a longer time in Lowestoft Roads than may be requisite for her to procure the provisions of which she may be in need, or any necessary repairs, providing always that there is no stress of weather to prevent her going to sea.

With regard to the concluding paragraph of your Lordship's letter, I would observe that no public notification has been issued by Her Majesty forbidding belligerent vessels of war with their prizes, or belligerent vessels in charge of prize crews, from entering the waters of the United Kingdom, and that in the absence of such a notification, either belligerent has a right to assume that its prizes will not be denied the customary privilege of asylum in those waters for lawful purposes.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That as it appears from the report from the Liverpool Board of Customs that the "Steady" has re-entered the dock, and it is intended to enlarge her boilers, it will be sufficient for the present if instructions are given to the Board of Customs at Liverpool that she is not to be allowed another trial trip without a renewed application and special permission to leave the dock for such purpose.

Temple, October 29, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th instant, addressed to the Law Officers, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit an accompanying letter from the Admiralty, respecting the presence at Lowestoft of a German vessel in possession of a French prize crew, and communicating a protest from the Vice-Consul of the North German Confederation against the vessel being removed from the limits of the port; and, further, stating that he was to request that the Law Officers would take the matter into their immediate consideration, and favour your Lordship with their opinion as to the course which should be pursued.

I am also favoured with Mr. Hammond's further letter of the same date, stating that by your Lordship's directions he inclosed a previous letter from the Admiralty, and one from the Treasury, accompanied by further documents respecting the arrival and detention at Lowestoft of the said vessel, and that he was to request that the Law Officers would take the said papers into their immediate consideration, with those referred to in the first-mentioned letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this matter into my consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it could not be proper, except under the pressure of some necessity for either of the belligerents to bring into and anchor prizes in British waters. Unless, therefore, there be some reason of necessity for the French crew coming into Lowestoft Roads, the terms of the Circular letter of the 19th July last, which appears to me in substance applicable to this case, should be immediately put in force against her.

That letter, however, has been misunderstood. It does not authorize the detention of prizes brought into our ports, but requires that they shall be immediately ordered to quit, and, if necessary, compelled to do so by force. I advise, therefore, that the prize be released, and required instantly to depart, unless there is absolute necessity for provisions; if so, such provisioning only should be allowed as will prevent the crew from starving before they reach the nearest French port.

My Lord, Temple, October 31, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th instant, stating that, with reference to my report of the 30th August, respecting the wish of the British owners of cargoes on board German vessels captured by French cruizers, that Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris should be instructed to apply to the French Government, with the view of obtaining their speedy release, and to the instructions to Lord Lyons founded on my report also inclosed, he was directed to transmit to me therewith two letters from the Committee at Lloyds, and from the Association for the Protection of Commercial Interests as respects wrecked and damaged property, representing the inconvenience to which the interests of owners of captured neutral cargoes are exposed by the suspension of the action of the French Prize Courts; and to request that I would take the same into my immediate consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion whether, under the peculiar circumstances of the cases, there would be any objection to Her Majesty's Ambassador being instructed to represent the matter to the French Government, and to request that measures may be taken to relieve British parties from the inconvenience to which they are now exposed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report—

That there is no objection, in my opinion, to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris being instructed to represent to the Provisional Government of Defence at Tours the inconvenience to which British owners of cargoes captured on board German vessels are exposed by the suspension of the action of the French Prize Courts, and to suggest that the officers of Customs in the ports to which such vessels may be sent in for adjudication may be authorized to permit the unlivery of the cargoes, when the documents establish a primâ facie case that the cargoes are British owned, and the claimants are willing to give security to abide the result of the final decision of the Cour des Prises. I do not think, however, that Her Majesty's Ambassador can properly ask for the release of the cargoes in the manner suggested by the Secretary of the Association for the Protection of Commercial Interests, namely, by the provisional decree of a Special Court established ad hoc.

It appears to me that, pending the abeyance of the sovereign power in France, the intervention of Her Majesty's Ambassador in any matter of maritime prize should be limited to administrative matters, as distinguished from judicial proceedings, and that he will not overstep those limits by suggesting, under the exceptional circumstances by which the action of the French Prize Courts have been arrested, that British cargoes on board of captured vessels should be released on reasonable security being given to abide the ultimate decision of the Cour des Prises as regards the cargo and freight.

With regard to the application from the Committee of Lloyds, your Lordship cannot, in my opinion, properly accede to Mr. Stephenson's request, if I do not misunderstand it, that Her Majesty's Government should endeavour to make some arrangement with the French Government for the immediate release of British owned cargoes without any security. If, however, Mr. Stephenson means to move your Lordship to procure the release of British owned cargoes on some conditions less onerous than a deposit equal to the value of the cargo in each case, he may be informed that your Lordship will instruct Her Majesty's Ambassador to represent to the Provisional Government of Defence the inconvenience to which British owners of captured cargoes are at present exposed, and will endeavour to bring about an arrangement for the release of such cargoes upon reasonable security being given by the claimants in each case.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th instant, stating that, with reference to the case of the "Steady," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mr. F. N. Hilbery, requesting to be furnished with a copy of the warrant under which that vessel may have been arrested, and to be informed whether she would be released on security being given that she would in future be used only in a legal manner.

And he was pleased to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned on these two points.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think that the proper course would be to make out a warrant under the Foreign Enlistment Act, which will have the effect of ratifying what has been done by the local authorities. When the warrant is prepared a copy of it may be forwarded to Mr. Hilbery. We think that the vessel may be released on security being given to the full value. The best form of security which occurs to us is a recognizance to the Crown. We think that the amount should be the full value of the vessel.

No. 147.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received November 4.)

Temple, November 3, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed to acknowledge the receipt of my report of the 28th ultimo, respecting the case of the German vessel "Heinrich," brought into Lowestoft roads in charge of a French prize crew.

That in the concluding portion of my report I observed "that no public notification has been issued by Her Majesty forbidding belligerent vessels of war with their prizes, or belligerent vessels in charge of prize crews, from entering the waters of the United Kingdom, and that, in the absence of such a notification, either belligerent has a right to assume that its prizes will not be denied the customary privileges of asylum in those waters for lawful purposes."

That your Lordship directed him to call my attention to the fact that the letter from the Foreign Office to the Admiralty and other public offices of the 19th July last, and which contains in the last paragraph this provision, "armed ships of war of either party are interdicted from carrying prizes made by them into the ports, harbours, roadsteads, or waters of the United Kingdom or any of Her Majesty's colonies or possessions abroad," was published in the "London Gazette" of the same day. That on a previous occasion, namely, during the civil war in North America, a letter was addressed to the same departments from the Foreign Office of a corresponding tenour, which was laid before Parliament, and in like manner during the war between Austria, Prussia, Italy, and Germany, in 1866, a similar letter with a corresponding restriction was addressed to the same departments on the 26th June of that year, which was published in the "London Gazette" of the following day.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship's Circular letter to the Departments of State, notwithstanding it has been published in the "London Gazette," is not, in my opinion, such a notice as the comity of nations requires when a neutral Power has resolved to refuse all hospitality to the prizes of belligerent Powers with which she maintains relations of amity.

The occasions on which Great Britain has been called upon to discharge the duties of a neutral Power have been comparatively rare, so that the International rule of conduct in such matters is rather to be gathered from the practice of other nations when Great Britain has been a belligerent. Your Lordship will find that on the last occasion when Great Britain was a belligerent, the various neutral Powers issued edicts or ordinances, which were communicated to the Court of St. James'.

They may be conveniently referred to in Pistoye and Duverdy's "Traité des Prises Maritimes," vol. ii., annex ii., p. 476. Such also appears to have been the practice of the neutral Powers at the end of the last century, and a variety of such edicts, issued in 1799, will be found in Marten's "Traités," t. iii. These Ordinances, it may be observed, had a twofold character: they were declarations of the Sovereign Power itself, and as such the most formal notification, when communicated to the belligerents, and they constituted the law of each country pending the war, warranting the subjects of the neutral country in acting upon instructions from the executive Power which were in accordance with them. But I feel some difficulty in advising your Lordship that your Lordship's Circular letter would be a legal warrant to the officers of Her Majesty's Admiralty or Her Majesty's Customs to seize and detain the prizes of either belligerent, if they should come peaceably within British waters.

In the case of the "Heinrich," which was, I believe, seized and detained by Her Majesty's officers, if the crew had attempted to get her under weigh and a contest had ensued attended with loss of life, I fear that Her Majesty's officers would have had no justification of law for seizing and detaining her. On the other hand, if I am correct in assuming that no formal declaration of Her Majesty's intention to deny all hospitality to their prizes has been communicated to the belligerent Powers, and in consequence of the detention of the "Heinrich," a North German cruizer had been enabled to take up her station outside British waters and recapture the prize on her release from duresse, France would have had good reason to complain of the detention of the "Heinrich," as inconsistent with the neutrality avowed on the part of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Hammond has referred to a period of an exceptional character as the occasion on which a Circular letter in the present form was adopted by Her Majesty's Government, but there may have been peculiar reasons on that occasion for departing from the customary practice, inasmuch as the British Crown had no diplomatic relations with the so-called Confederate States, and had not recognized them as a Sovereign Power.

I may observe also that the views of the United States as a neutral Power, as expressed in 1855, were conformable to the ancient practice, being to this effect:—

"That when a neutral State has not signified its determination to refuse the privilege of asylum to belligerent ships of war, privateers, or their prizes, either belligerent has a right to assume its existence, and enter upon its engagement subject to such regulations and limitations as the neutral State may please to prescribe for its own security."

The issuing of a Circular letter by your Lordship was, in my opinion, a most proper proceeding for the purpose of giving instructions to Her Majesty's officers, but, as I am informed at present, no formal steps were taken to communicate Her Majesty's determination to the belligerent Powers. I ought perhaps not to omit to observe that the concluding Article of the Circular letter carries the refusal of hospitality beyond the limits of the precedents set by other Powers, as it applies to open roadsteads and to the open sea within three miles of any part of Her Majesty's dominions, whereas the neutral Powers in the last century were accustomed only to exclude belligerent prizes from their ports and havens, such being also the course pursued by the neutral Powers in 1854 towards Great Britain as a belligerent.

I am not certain that it is not ultra vires for Her Majesty to claim to exclude belligerent vessels absolutely from open roadsteads and the open sea, both of which are communis juris. Her Majesty may forbid any act of hostility to be attempted by any belligerent in open waters within three miles of her coasts, but her jurisdiction is not exclusive over such waters so as to authorize her to forbid belligerent vessels to enter them peaceably. Her Majesty may, indeed, refuse absolutely, as a matter of right, the use of her ports and havens to either belligerent, but an absolute denial of all hospitality cannot in practice be carried into execution.

The terms of your Lordship's letter may so far be a stumbling-block to Her Majesty's officers if a prize should come in which is in proved distress, whilst they may cause some embarrassment to Her Majesty's Government itself if the adverse belligerent should complain that your Lordship's instructions have not been truly and impartially enforced in all cases.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Arthur Otway's letter of the 15th instant, stating—

1870

1st. That with reference to our recent reports respecting the cases of the "Steady" and "Sharpshooter," both of which vessels are still under detention at Liverpool, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an accompanying letter from M. Tissot, the French Chargé d'Affaires at this Court, calling attention to the suspicious character of the proceedings of both vessels, and urging that corresponding measures of precaution might be taken in the case of the latter vessel as had been observed with regard to the "Steady."

2ndly. That he was to request that we would take M. Tissot's note into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, whether it in any way alters our opinion in regard to the course which had been, and should be, pursued in regard to those vessels.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we observe in the letter of M. Tissot a statement that the owner of the "Sharpshooter" was the same person who armed the "Alabama." If it be true that Mr. Bates was concerned in the equipment or escape of the "Alabama," the suspicions attaching to the "Sharpshooter" become, in our judgment, very much stronger, and we think the silence which has been observed as to this fact by the Liverpool officials, who must have known it and known of its importance, requires explanation. We suggest that immediate inquiry should be made into the truth of the allegation, and we deem the answer to it so important that we desire to reserve our final opinion upon the case of the "Sharpshooter" until we have been informed of the result of the inquiry. If there be good reason to suppose that the "Sharpshooter" is really destined for the Prussian service, the probability may be increased that the "Steady" is also so destined. On the whole, therefore, we advise that the ships be detained, and nothing further done beyond the signature of the warrants (which in each case we advise) until the inquiry we have suggested be answered.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating that, with reference to Mr. Otway's letter of the 15th instant, including a letter from M. Tissot, the French Chargé d'Affaires at that Court, calling attention to the case of the "Sharpshooter," and in which our opinion was requested as to whether the contents of the letter in any way altered our opinion as to the course which had been adopted by Her Majesty's Government in the case, and that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Treasury, inclosing copies of a correspondence which had passed between the Customs authorities and the French Consul at Liverpool, and in which the latter protested against the release of the "Sharpshooter," and that he was to request that we would take those further papers in like manner into consideration, together with those then before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have taken all the papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That as it would appear from the letter of November 14th from the French Consul that the "Sharpshooter" has sailed, we have no further advice to offer as regards the propriety of detaining her. If it should prove that Mr. Bates has acted in bad faith towards Her Majesty's Government, we should advise proceedings to be instituted against him under section 8 of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating—

1st. That with reference to the case of the "Sharpshooter," the papers respecting which are now before us, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter and its inclosures, received from the Treasury, respecting a claim advanced by the owner of that vessel for compensation for alleged loss sustained by him in consequence of her detention for seven days at Liverpool, and which he estimates at 105*l*.

2nd. That Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take this matter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship at our early convenience with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to that application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That until we are informed whether Mr. Bates, the owner of the "Sharpshooter," was concerned in fitting out or dispatching the "Alabama," we are unable to advise your Lordship what course should be taken with regard to his demand for demurrage.

Meanwhile, however, further inquiries might be properly made of the French Consul at Liverpool, as to the precise nature of the information on which he had requested her to be detained.

Temple, November 19, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Admiralty, stating that questions have arisen as to the propriety of a neutral State supplying coals from Government stores to ships of war belonging to belligerents, and requesting to be furnished with your Lordship's views on this subject, and also as to whether coals should be supplied from Government stores when procurable from private sources, and also in the event of their not being so procurable; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this matter into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the Admiralty thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the proper answer to be given to the questions of the Admiralty may depend very much upon the terms of the agreement between the two countries, referred to in the Admiralty letter, respecting which I have no information. I have referred to the Treaty of Commerce of January 23, 1860, but the Article of that Treaty applicable to the exportation of coals does not meet the difficulty which has suggested itself to the Admiralty. In the absence of any special agreement I consider that coals are under certain circumstances necessary supplies for steam-vessels, and if a belligerent steam-vessel should come into a neutral port in distress for fuel, it may fairly be regarded as an obligation of neutral hospitality to allow a reasonable supply of coals to be furnished to her. What that supply should be must depend upon the distance of the neutral port from the nearest belligerent port, for that distance would be a proper measure of the necessary supply. When such a supply can be procured in the ordinary way of commerce, I am of opinion that it would not be proper for the officers of Her Majesty's Government to furnish the coals, unless indeed there should be some agreement to that effect between the two countries, of which, as I have already observed, I am not aware. When no sufficient supply can be procured from private stores, Her Majesty's officers may, in my opinion, properly supply the coals, if they do so consistently with due provision for the wants of Her Majesty's service precisely as they might properly supply a spar, or an anchor, if it could not be otherwise procured by the belligerent vessel.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received November 21.)

My Lord,
Temple, November 21, 1870.

WE are honoured with your commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he inclosed a correspondence respecting the case of the German vessel "Frei," captured on the 28th ultimo by the French vessel of war "Dessaix," as was alleged, in British waters; and further stating that we would perceive that, upon the recommendation of the Queen's Advocate, Lord Lyons had been instructed to direct a claim to be given in before the Prize Court at Tours for the restitution of the "Frei" and her cargo, as having been captured within neutral waters; and, further, that he considered the case one in which costs and damages should be awarded.

Mr. Hammond was further pleased to state that, in consequence of Lord Lyons' telegram of the 12th instant, a further draft of a despatch to Lord Lyons, directing him to call the attention of the French Government, officially, to this case, had been prepared and submitted to the Queen's Advocate, who, however, had expressed his opinion that such a representation would be premature, but considered that a less official notification of the proceedings to be instituted in the Prize Court might properly be made by Her Majesty's to that Government.

Mr. Hammond was further pleased to add that your Lordship requested that we would take this matter into consideration, and that we would inform your Lordship whether, after communicating with him, we agreed in the view of the Queen's Advocate on this case, or, if not, what course we would recommend should be pursued.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and communicated with the Queen's Advocate, as requested, and have the honour to report—

That the affidavit of the pilot is not before us, and we advise on the assumption that he is a credible person, and that he has sworn that he warned the French officer that he was in British waters, and gave him proof that the warning was correct. On this assumption we think that the official and diplomatic intervention of the English Ambassador would be perfectly proper; and that your Lordship may well forward to Lord Lyons the despatch which your Lordship has sent us in draft.

My Lord,
Temple, November 25, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an accompanying letter and its inclosures, received from the Treasury, respecting an application which had been made to the Collector of Customs at Plymouth for permission to tranship to a British steamer, for conveyance to Havre, a cargo of arms and ammunition expected to arrive in the steam-ship "Avon," from New York, and for which transhipment certain exceptional facilities had been requested. Mr. Hammond was pleased further to state that the Board of Customs, as we would perceive, had declined to accede to the said request, and that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion upon the question thus raised.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have considered this matter, and have the honour to report—

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received November 30.)

My Lord,
Temple, November 29, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating that, with reference to our report of the 21st instant, in which we concur in the propriety of sending to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Tours the further despatch, of which a draft had been submitted to us, respecting the capture of the German vessel "Frei" by a French vessel of war in British waters, he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying despatch, and its inclosures, received from Lord Lyons, from which we should perceive that the French Advocate whom his Excellency had instructed to enter a claim in this case before the Prize Court has distinctly advised Lord Lyons that it is not within the province of the British Embassy to intervene in a matter in which only the private parties interested have a locus standi before the Prize Court, and that Her Majesty's Government can only properly address the French Government diplomatically in the matter if they should desire to do so. And Mr. Hammond was pleased, accordingly, to request that we would again take this matter into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion upon the general question now raised, of the competence of a British Embassy to intervene in such cases, and also in regard to the instructions which should be given to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Tours upon this subject; and he was pleased to add that the further draft approved in our letter above referred to has in the meantime been suspended.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears from the report of the French Advocate that the practice of the French Prize Court differs from the practice of the British and the American Prize Courts in respect of the parties who are competent to make "a claim of territory" in the Prize Court. Lord Stowell has laid it down that the claim of territory is the privilege, not of the enemy, but of the neutral country, which has a right to see that no act of violence is committed within its jurisdiction (the "Eliza Anne," 1 Dodson, p. 244); whilst Mr. Justice Story has ruled that a capture made within neutral waters is, as between enemies, deemed to all intents and purposes rightful; it is only by the neutral Sovereign that its legal validity can be called in question, and as to him, and him only, is it to be considered void. The enemy has no rights whatever, and if the neutral Sovereign omits or declines to interpose a claim, the property is condemnable jure belli to the captors (the "Anne," 3 Wheaton, p. 446). It does not, however, follow from this rule of the British and American Courts, that the French Courts are not justified in following another rule, more especially if it is of a less rigid character as regards the captured enemy, namely, by allowing him to allege personally that the capture has been made within neutral waters. It may be observed that the practice of the French Prize Courts is not novel, as it was the practice of the Conseil des Prises in the days of the first French Republic (Pistoye and Duverdy, "Traité des Prises Maritimes," tom. i, p. 102). Under these circumstances, the question for your Lordship's consideration would seem to be whether your Lordship should authorize Lord Lyons to intervene diplomatically with the French Government, or should inform the owners of the "Frei" that they must assert a claim of territory in the Prize Court, and that they shall have the officious support of Her Majesty's Government, as suggested by the French Advocate. Looking to the fact stated in the report of the French Advocate, that the Captain of the cruizer has taken the bearings of the place of capture, and contends that the capture took place out of the limits of British jurisdiction, I am of opinion that the preferable course for your Lordship to adopt will be to inform the Prussian Ambassador that your Lordship has ascertained that, according to the practice of the French Prize Court, it will be proper for the master of the "Frei" to make a claim of territory in the French Prize Court, and that he shall there receive all such support from Her Majesty's Government as the practice of the Court will allow a neutral State to afford to him. Further, it appears to be a rule of the French Prize Court not to award damages in a claim of territory unless the captor is proved to have acted in bad faith in making the capture (Pistoye and Duverdy, tom. i, p. 104). This fact may be put in issue more conveniently in the Prize Court than in a correspondence between the two Governments, and with less risk of disturbing the friendly relations between them; and, as the Court of the captor is open to hear the claim for damages, the French Government may properly insist, in my opinion, on the question being submitted to a judicial inquiry before the Court of the captor.

We (the Attorney and Solicitor-General) advise that a communication should be made to the owner of the "Frei" to the effect suggested by the Queen's Advocate in his report and we concur generally in the reasons given by him for that advice. But we are still of opinion that Her Majesty's Government would be justified on the statement of the pilot in calling the attention of the French Government diplomatically to the violation of the neutrality of this country. Indeed, if the statement of the French Advocate as to French prize law be correct, no other mode of asserting its territorial rights and complaining of their violation is open in France to a neutral country.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received November 30.)

Temple, November 30, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th instant, stating that, in our report of the 16th instant, with reference to the cases of the "Steady" and "Sharpshooter," we advised, in consequence of a statement made by M. Tissot, the French Chargé d'Affaires at the English Court, that the owner of the "Sharpshooter" was the same person who had equipped the "Alabama," that immediate information on that subject should be furnished by the Customs authorities at Liverpool; and we further expressed our opinion that that point was so important that, whilst reserving our decision in regard to that vessel, the result, if unfavourable, might increase the probability that the "Steady" was also intended for the Prussian service; and we recommended that both ships should be detained and nothing further done beyond the signature of the warrants until the inquiry should be answered.

That we would see by the inclosed correspondence that the "Sharpshooter" had put to sea before her detention could be made good; but that the "Steady" was still under restraint.

That Mr. Hilbery, as we would further see, had been answered in accordance with our opinion that your Lordship, as then advised, did not feel at liberty to comply with his request for a copy of the warrant under which the "Steady" had been detained, whilst the main question of her release had stood over pending the result of the inquiry to be made of the Customs at Liverpool.

That the claim of the owner of the "Sharpshooter" for damages, on account of the detention of his vessel, amounting to 105*l*., had also remained in abeyance for the same reason.

That he was to transmit to us a letter from the Treasury, containing the report of the Customs officials on the subject, together with a further letter from Mr. Hilbery, offering to furnish any proofs required as to the legal nature of the transactions in the case of the "Steady."

That the tendency of the information furnished by the Customs was to show that there was no evidence of the alleged connection of Mr. Bates, the owner of the "Sharpshooter," with the "Alabama," whilst the French Consul at Liverpool had also failed to produce any evidence in that direction.

And that he was to request that we would take the further papers into consideration (together with the previous ones) and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the points standing over for decision, namely, whether and on what conditions of security the "Steady" might now be released, and what answer should be returned to Mr. Bates' claim for compensation on account of the detention of the "Sharpshooter."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the whole of the papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That, with respect to the "Sharpshooter," we think that, as the vessel was released without requiring her to make an application to the Court of Admiralty, Her Majesty's Government may fairly admit the principle that some damage should be paid for her detention, and that the claim of Mr. Bates may be paid, subject to their being satisfied of the reasonableness of its amount.

On further consideration of the case of the "Steady," we think that, on the whole, it would be safer to leave with the Court of Admiralty the responsibility of deciding upon what security she should be released, if she is to be released, and that her owner should be referred to that Court.

No. 158.

The Solicitor- and Attorney-General to Earl Granville.—(Received November 30.)

Temple, November 30, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us accompanying reports which your Lordship had received from Her Majesty's Advocate-General in connection with the arrival in Yarmouth Roads of the North German vessel "Heinrich" in charge of a French prize crew, and the instructions which had in consequence been issued to the officers of Her Majesty's Customs in regard to the conditions and duration of the stay which that prize was to be allowed to make in British waters.

2. That it was not with reference to the proceedings in that particular case that he was now to ask our opinion; but we would see that a question had been raised by the Queen's Advocate upon two points: first, whether the channel through which the notifications which had been issued by Her Majesty's Government forbidding belligerent vessels of war with their prizes, or belligerent vessels in charge of prize crews, from entering the waters of the United Kingdom is such as, in order to render it valid, the comity of nations requires when a neutral Power has resolved to refuse all hospitality to the prizes of belligerent Powers with which she is at amity; and, secondly, whether it is not ultra vires for Her Majesty to claim to exclude belligerent ships from open roadsteads and the open sea, both of which the Queen's Advocate observes are communis juris when no act of hostility is attempted, or whether such power of exclusion is not rather limited to the actual ports and havens of the United Kingdom or of Her Majesty's Colonies abroad.

3. That he also inclosed a copy of a letter from the Foreign Office to the Admiralty and other public Departments of the 19th July last, the concluding paragraph of which had given rise to the questions to which the Queen's Advocate had now called attention, and the draft of which, as we would remember, received our approval, as well as that of the Queen's Advocate, before being sent off.

4. That the questions raised being of much importance your Lordship would be glad if we would take them into our consideration in communication with the Queen's Advocate, and favour your Lordship with our opinion collectively on the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these questions into our consideration in communication with the Queen's Advocate, and have the honour to report—

That there appear to be two distinct subjects discussed in the papers of the Queen's Advocate, and on which we beg to offer the following observations:—

First. As to the question whether there has been a sufficient notification to the belligerents of the intention of Her Majesty to deny to their prizes an asylum in British waters. Although the strict right to deny such asylum with or without such notification is undeniable, still international comity prescribes that some means shall be taken to make known its denial to the belligerents. On the whole we think that the publication of the Circular letter in the "London Gazette" may be considered as reasonably sufficient to make known to them a step which, to say the least, is not an unusual one. At the same time if we had been consulted on this point we should have advised that it would have been better out of abundant caution to address a formal notification to each belligerent. What has been done with respect to the "Heinrich," and the correspondence thereon, seem to afford all notification that can be necessary for the future. Whether it be desirable pointedly to call the attention of the French Government to the infraction of a provision which they do not appear sufficiently to have borne in mind is a question for the consideration of Her Majesty's Government.

We have next to observe that we do not share the doubt intimated by the Queen's Advocate that a portion of the concluding paragraph of the Circular letter is ultra vires. We are of opinion that that paragraph (the draft of which was, as Mr. Hammond observes, submitted to us for our approval) is quite correct. We are prepared to maintain the doctrine laid down by Wheaton* that "by the generally approved usage of nations which forms the basis of international law the maritime territory of every State extends not only to the ports, harbours, bays, mouths of rivers, and adjacent parts of the sea enclosed by headlands belonging to it, but to the distance of a marine league along all its coasts," finitur terra dominium ubi finitur armorum vis. It is true that certain comities may attach to roadsteads and to the deep passages of territorial seas, especially where they lead to other seas otherwise inaccessible. Some questions may be raised as to the municipal jurisdiction of a country over its own subjects or ships on the one hand, or over pirates as belonging to no civilized community on the other, within three miles of the shore of another country. Waters within the three-mile line may sometimes by statutes be treated as part of the high seas for judicial purposes, nevertheless the right of the Sovereign of the country to prohibit the entrance of vessels of foreign belligerents into such waters we hold to be indisputable. It is possible that the Queen's Advocate meant nothing inconsistent with what we have now said; but we think that to speak of Proclamations in respect to roadsteads being ultra vires of the Sovereign of this country is to use language capable at least of misleading, and not likely, without explanation, to mislead.

We have only to add that we construe Article 4 of the Circular letter as subject to those implied exceptions to this and other regulations which are dictated by common humanity, and not as excluding vessels driven to our shores by stress of weather, or other temporary necessity.

We have, &c.

Inclosure in No. 158.

Case of the "Heinrich."

Separate Report by the Queen's Advocate.

THAT I have had the advantage of meeting the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General in consultation, and of reading their report addressed to your Lordship, to which I was unable yesterday from pressure of business to subjoin any observations.

In regard to the first point, I concur with the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General so far, that I consider that the denial of asylum by Her Majesty's Government may be taken at this stage of the war to have acquired a notoriety de facto, which dispenses with the necessity of notifying formally to the belligerent Powers, in accordance with international comity, the intention of Her Majesty to exclude the prizes of either belligerent from British waters. As the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General state their opinion, that Article 4 of the Circular must be construed subject to the customary exceptions, I have no further observations to offer on that Article. The point upon which I still feel some difficulty is as to the right of a neutral Power to exclude a merchant-vessel because it is in possession of a belligerent prize crew, from the use of an open roadstead, so long as such vessel uses it only for the purposes of peaceful navigation. I allude to a roadstead which is constantly used by the ships of all nations in their passage along the open sea. But, as the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General have stated their opinion, that what they consider to be the exclusive right of a neutral nation as regards its territorial waters is to be exercised with due regard to the customary comities, the difference between us resolves itself rather into a question of abstract right than of practical use. But I may remark that Mr. Wheaton, after laying down the limits of what he terms the maritime territory of a State in the passage cited in the report of the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General, and after asserting an exclusive right of property on the part of every State, as regards its ports, harbours, bays, and rivers, goes on to say: "It may, perhaps, be thought that these considerations do not apply with the same force to those portions of the sea which wash the coasts of any particular State within the distance of a marine league, or as far as cannon-shot will reach from the shore. The physical power of exercising an exclusive property and jurisdiction, and of excluding the action of other nations within these limits, exists to a certain degree, but the moral power may perhaps seem to extend no further than to exclude the action of other nations to the injury of the State by which the right is claimed. It is upon this ground that is founded the acknowledged immunity of a neutral State from the exercise of acts of hostility by one belligerent Power against the other within those limits." (Elements, p. 343.)

In the same spirit Lord Stowell observes (the "Twae Gebroeders," 3 Robinson, p. 352):—"It is an observation of law that the passage of ships over territorial portions of the sea or external waters is a thing less guarded than the passage of armies overland, and for obvious reasons: an army in the strictest state of discipline can hardly pass into a country without great inconvenience to the inhabitants; roads are broken up; the price of provisions is raised; the sick are quartered on individuals, and a general uneasiness and terror is excited; but the passage of two or three vessels or a fleet over external waters may be neither felt nor perceived. For this reason the act of inoffensively passing over such portions of water without any violence committed there is not considered as any violation of territory belonging to a neutral State; permission is not usually required; such waters are considered as the common thoroughfare of nations, though they may be so far territory that any actual exercise of hostility is prohibited therein."

In the same sense Ortolan ("Diplomatie de la Mer," l. iii, ch. viii), in commenting on the "Droit d'Asile," writes:—"Ainsi que nous l'avons dit en traitant de la mer territoriale, une nation ne possède un droit exclusif de propriété que sur ses ports et sur ses rades fermées ou foraines, et sur ses golfes et baies qui peuvent être assimilées à ces dernières: elle n'a sur l'espace ouvert des eaux mesuré à partir de ses côtes par la portée du canon, qu'un droit d'empire; qu'un pouvoir de législation, de surveillance, et de jurisdiction, en vertu desquels, si elle est maîtresse de surveiller les navires étrangers qui y passent, et d'empêcher qu'ils ne s'y établissent d'une manière permanente et nuisible, elle ne peut s'opposer à un transit inoffensif qui n'est que l'usage légitime d'un élément commun à tous."

Other European authorities of eminence might be cited who adopt the same distinction between the internal waters (intra fauces terræ) and the external waters of a neutral State, as regards the innocent use of the latter by belligerents. It will be sufficient for my purpose to have called your Lordship's attention to the distinction so made by the above-mentioned authorities as the warrant for my suggestion that it might be open to doubt whether the absolute prohibition by Great Britain of the use of its open roadsteads by the vessels of either belligerent was not ultra vires,

The Lord Chancellor to Earl Granville.—(Received December 2.)

31, Great George Street, S.W., December 1, 1870.

Dear Lord Granville,

THERE can be no doubt of the right of the neutral Power whose territory has been violated demanding (diplomatically) redress. This, indeed, is with us, and I think with most countries, the only mode of obtaining satisfaction for the injured belligerent—for the belligerent ship is lawfully captured as between him and his enemy.

---

The French law, then, in allowing the belligerent himself to sue for redress, appears rather to soften the asperity of the rights of war as between the French and their enemy, but at the same time to render it impossible for the neutral to obtain direct redress by any action except that of diplomatic remonstrance.

I think where the offence is not wilful, we may reasonably defer asking for reparation till after the trial between the other parties is over, which trial may throw light upon the facts, but, at the same time, as we cannot be parties to the trial, we cannot submit to be bound by its result.

I suggest as the reasonable course (where the injury is not under any claim of right on the part of the French captain to invade our limits, but simply on a question of doubt raised by him as to the distance at which the capture took place), would be as follows:—

Lord Lyons to state that, as the question of distance is in dispute, and evidence may be given in the action which may throw light upon the subject, Her Majesty's Government do not desire to press the question upon the French Government till after the action (if any) shall have been tried, but that, in case of no action being brought, or in the event of the point not being made clear to the satisfaction of Her Majesty's Government whether a territorial wrong has been committed or not, Her Majesty's Government reserves full right to bring the matter before the French Government for explanation.

To Bismarck the offer may be made of rendering any assistance that may be consistent with the French law for the fair trial of the case.

Yours very sincerely,
(Signed) HATHERLEY.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a copy of a despatch from Sir Henry Ord, the Governor of Singapore, forwarding a correspondence between the French Consul in that colony and himself, respecting the Governor's refusal to permit the French corvette "d'Assas" to take in a supply of coals at that port on her journey to Pondicherry from Saigon; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether the construction put by the Governor upon the third rule laid down in the letter to the Admiralty and other departments of the 19th July last, was correct, and whether his conduct in this matter may properly be approved.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report:—

That the answer given by the Governor of Singapore to the question submitted to him by the French Consul at that port may be properly approved by your Lordship. At the same time the Governor should be informed that, although your Lordship approves the discouragement which he gave to a contingent abuse of the privilege of coaling allowed to belligerent vessels by your Lordship's Circular, it is not your intention that a supply of coals under the limitation prescribed by that Circular should be denied to belligerent vessels which may come into the port of Singapore bonâ fide in want of coals to enable them to keep the sea.

The Lord Chancellor to Earl Granville.—(Received December 9.)

31, Great George Street, December 7, 1870.

THE Lord Chancellor presents his compliments to Earl Granville, and with reference to the reports of the Law Officers submitted to his consideration by Earl Granville's note of the 5th instant, begs to state:—

1st. That he agrees with the Attorney- and Solicitor-General in the opinion that the Circular of the 19th of July last does not go beyond a legitimate exercise of the rights possessed by every neutral to protect its territory; and he further agrees with them in thinking that the notification in the "Gazette" was a sufficient notification, though a formal communication to the belligerents of the provisions of the Circular would have been advisable, for the sake of avoiding a plea of ignorance on the part of the commander of any arrested vessel.

2nd. No point of difference appears to arise between the Law Officers except that which relates to the 4th provision of the Circular. The Lord Chancellor on this point also agrees with the Attorney- and Solicitor-General. The authorities cited by the Queen's Advocate, viz., Wheaton and Ortolan, both admit the territorial jurisdiction within the recognized distance from the shore, but both assert that such jurisdiction ought not to interfere with the ordinary right of passage over the ordinary track for the purpose of navigation. Wheaton, however, says that the neutral "may exclude the action of other nations to the injury of the State by which the right is claimed;" but Ortolan says, the neutral "est maîtresse de surveiller les navires étrangers qui y passent, et d'empêcher qu'ils ne s'y établissent d'une manière permanente et nuisible." Lord Stowell, in the case cited by the Queen's Advocate, also alludes to "vessels inoffensively passing over such portions of water." Now, the Circular is issued "to prevent the use of the harbours, &c., in aid of the warlike purposes of either belligerent."

This appears to me a perfectly legitimate purpose, and the forbidding the use of a roadstead for the safer conveyance by one belligerent of his prize is a prohibition which does not transgress the rule laid down by the great authorities above cited in favour of innocent navigation of the waters in question. If such transit with a prize were permitted, the belligerent might immediately run with its prize within the territorial jurisdiction of a neutral, and avail himself of the neutral's protection for the whole length of the neutral territory's sea-board.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received December 9.)

Temple, December 8, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Tours, inclosing a copy of his correspondence with Mr. J. M. Hamilton, of Manchester, respecting a claim which he has made upon the French Government on account of his expenses incurred in recovering possession of the cargo of the German brig "Lucie," which is stated to have been captured by the French gunboat "Hamelin" and taken into Rio de Janeiro, when the cargo was made over, as neutral property, to Mr. Hamilton's agent by the French Consul. Three reports, which have been received from Mr. Cobbold, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio, respecting the captures made by the "Hamelin," and the correspondence which has arisen between the Brazilian, German, and French Ministers, consequent upon these occurrences, were also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Lord Lyons in the case of the "Lucie."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Lord Lyons may be properly instructed by your Lordship to obtain from all interference in this case.

Lord Stowell has laid it down, with regard to neutral cargoes captured on board of enemy's ships, that "it cannot be expected that the merchant in time of war should obtain possession of his goods seized with exactly the same convenience as he would have done under the original consignment in time of peace, and when none of the accidents of war had intervened to interrupt the delivery" (the "Diana," 5 Rob., p. 73).

I may add that, according to the practice observed in British Prize Courts, the French captor would be entitled in this case to claim the payment of freight from the neutral owner of the cargo, as his cargo was carried to its port of destination; whilst, from the silence of the owners on this subject, it may be inferred that the captor has waived all such claim by allowing the cargo to be forthwith landed at Rio de Janeiro without requiring the owner to obtain possession of it under the process of a French Prize Court.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received December 12.)

My Lord, Temple, December 10, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed to acknowledge the receipt of my letter of the 5th instant, which, whilst stating my opinion that the Governor of Singapore may be approved in regard to the answer given by him to the French Consul on the question of supplying coals to the corvette "D'Assas," I recommended that the Governor should at the same time be informed that it is not the intention that a supply of coals under the limitation prescribed by the Circular of the 19th of July last should be denied to belligerent vessels which might come into the port of Singapore bonâ fide in want of coals to enable them to keep the sea. That as such a privilege would appear to be in direct opposition to the restriction intended to be enforced under paragraph 3 of the Circular referred to, Mr. Hammond was pleased to state that your Lordship would be glad to know how, in my opinion, the two principles can be reconciled.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That my report was intended to be in harmony with, and in no way to be in contradiction to, paragraph (3) of your Lordship's Circular. The case suggested by the French Consul was, as I understood it, that the corvette "D'Assas" should by design leave Saigon, where there were supplies of coal ample for her use, with only sufficient coal on board to carry her to Singapore, and with the intention of making good her supply at Singapore to carry her onward to her port of destination, Pondicherry.

The Governor of Singapore very properly in my opinion discountenanced the suggestion as being in abuse of the permission accorded by your Lordship's Circular, which I presume to have been intended to meet the accidental wants of belligerent vessels, and not to make good any deficiency of coal, which should be the result of design. I thought it, however, advisable that in approving the Governor's answer to the French Consul, your Lordship should for fear of any misconception on his part explain to him, that your Lordship did not intend that he should refuse all supplies to French vessels, which should come into Singapore accidentally short of coals to enable them "to keep the sea;" but in using that expression, I considered that the Governor would interpret it subject to the limitations of paragraph (3) of your Lordship's Circular, namely, until they could reach the nearest port of their own country, or some nearer destination.

I may take this opportunity of calling your Lordship's attention to the possible case of French postal vessels in the Eastern Seas, which may be ships of war, and which may call at British ports short of coal within the three months limited by your Lordship's Circular, whether any special permission may be required in their case.

My Lord, Temple, December 17, 1870.

WE are honoured with your commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to inclose to us an accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing copies of two despatches from the Governor of New South Wales, on the subject of the supply of coals and contraband of war to belligerent vessels, and to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to the Governor of New South Wales both on the question of the supply of coal, and generally in regard to contraband of war.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That we are not aware of any better instructions that can be given to the Colonial Governors, as to the manner in which belligerent ships of war should be dealt with, than those contained in your Lordship's Circular letter of the 19th July last, supplemented by Lord Kimberley's Circular of the 7th October.

We may observe that an erroneous idea seems to have become current at Sydney, possibly in consequence of the assertion of the Consul of the North German Confederation in his letter of the 6th September, 1870, that coal is under all circumstances contraband of war.

My Lord, Temple, May 11, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Charles Spring Rice's letter of the 6th instant, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that it having been ascertained, in the course of an investigation into Marriage Warrants, issued under the Act 12 & 13 Vict., cap. 68, now in force, that Her Majesty's Consul at Frankfort, though unprovided with one, had been in the habit of solemnizing and registering marriages of British subjects, he was called upon for an explanation of his proceedings in the matter.

2. That he was also to inclose to us Mr. Consul Kuchen's Report,* together with a letter from the Registrar-General stating his views with regard to the case; and he was to request that we would take that matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the validity of those marriages; and, if we consider them invalid, as to the proper course to be pursued with regard to them.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears from Mr. Consul Kuchen's Report that he has had no authorization in accordance with the provisions of section 19 of 12 & 13 Vict., cap. 68, to solemnize and register marriages. We are of opinion, therefore, that the marriages of British subjects solemnized and registered by him without any such statutory authorization derive no validity from that Statute, and we are not aware of any law which renders the marriages in question valid marriages.

We think that the proper course will be to enact that the marriages in question shall be deemed and held to be as valid in law and cognizable in like manner as if they had been solemnized and registered by and under the authority of a British Consul duly authorized under the provisions of 12 & 13 Vict., cap. 68.

We think it advisable that Lord Belmore should be informed that coal is to be regarded as an article ancipitis usûs, which may become contraband of war where it is destined to be used for purposes directly belligerent.

This question, however, is immaterial, if the opinion which we have often expressed be correct, that according to international law there is no duty on a neutral State to prevent the exportation by merchant-vessels of contraband of war to belligerents. The prevention of this trade lies with the belligerent injured by it, whose Courts adjudicate on captures, and determine what articles are, and what are not, under given circumstances, contraband of war, a question which cannot be determined beforehand by the neutral country from which they are exported. It follows that we think the view taken by the Colonial Attorney-General erroneous, and that we regard the introduction of the Colonia Bill (which we do not understand to have yet passed) as somewhat untoward.

The Queen's Advocate to Mr. Hammond.—(Received July 5.)

Temple, July 4, 1870.

Sir,

I AM honoured with your letter of the 1st instant, stating that you were directed by the Secretary of State to transmit to me the accompanying documents* respecting an application which has been made by the General Manager of the Ionian Bank to Her Majesty's Minister at Athens for his interference with the view to the payment by the Hellenic Government of certain bonds of the late Ionian Government held by the Bank, and which are guaranteed by Treaty with Great Britain. You were also pleased to inclose for my information a Memorandum by the Librarian of the Foreign Office, showing the bearing of the Treaty of 1864 upon this matter, and to request that I would take this case into my consideration and inform you whether, under the circumstances, Her Majesty's Government would be justified in pressing for the payment of the claim of the Ionian Bank.

In obedience to your commands I have the honour to report—

That a difficulty exists as regards the right of Her Majesty's Government to insist upon the immediate payment of the claim of the Ionian Bank from the total silence of the Convention of 1864 as to any time, within which the Hellenic Government has undertaken to fulfil the engagements of the Government of the Ionian States. It may be, however, that the debt due to the Ionian Bank falls under the category of debts alluded to in the report of the Hellenic Minister of Finance of 3rd April, 1869, of which the capital became payable three months from the time the holder of the securities notified in writing to the Ionian Treasury his desire for payment. If such should be the case, then the tenour of the securities themselves will supplement the Convention, and if notice has been duly given by the Directors of the Bank to the Hellenic Government, I think that Her Majesty's Government would be justified in pressing for the immediate payment of the claim of the Bank.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 13th instant, stating that, with reference to the reports of the Law Officers of the Crown to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies of the 6th March and 30th December, 1868, on the subject of the claim of General Solomon, the Haytian Minister in this country, for compensation for his arrest and expulsion from Jamaica during the disturbances in that island in the year 1865, he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying further correspondence which has taken place on this subject, and to request that we would take the same into our consideration and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to General Solomon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That we agree with the report of the former Law Officers on this case. The Haytian Government is entitled to claim for General Solomon, who was resident in Jamaica by his own choice as a private person, the same rights as belong to British subjects there residing, namely, recourse to our Courts of Justice for the redress of any injuries sustained by them; but the Haytian Government is not entitled to claim for him a right beyond that possessed by British subjects, namely, of demanding compensation from the Government. If access to our Courts were denied to him, or if they did him manifest injustice, a claim against the Government might possibly arise, but not till then.

Temple, June 15, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that, with reference to my report of the 16th March on the subject of the claim of Mr. Maxwell Savage on account of arms supplied by him to the late Haytian Government, he was directed to transmit to me, together with the previous papers, further correspondence which has taken place respecting this case, and to request that I would take the same into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That from the report of Mr. St. John it would appear to be open to question whether the arms deposited in the Custom-house at Port-au-Prince were not the property of the late Haytian Government, although asserted by Mr. Maxwell Savage to have been there deposited on his own account. The information which Mr. St. John has received on this head derives support from the letter of the Custom-house authorities at Port-au-Prince addressed to the agents of Mr. Maxwell Savage, which Mr. Maxwell Savage has forwarded to your Lordship in his letter of 3rd June, 1870, and from which it appears that the arms in question were placed in a depôt in the Custom-house "which exists for the account of the Government." Under these circumstances, more especially as Mr. St. John states that it appears to be "a matter of account whether the arms have not been fully paid for by the late Haytian Government," I am of opinion that Mr. Maxwell Savage and Messrs. Webley and Son of Birmingham, who have lately come forward and state themselves to be joint partners with Mr. Maxwell Savage in the transaction, should be informed that, as a Commission has been appointed by the present Haytian Government to examine and report on all claims of creditors against the late Government, the proper course for them to pursue will be to prepare a statement of their claim, and to submit it with the requisite vouchers to that Commission as soon as its sittings commence.

Williams and Knowles, of Nassau, Bahamas, to compensation for the seizure, on two different occasions, of their schooner, the "Belinda W," by vessels of war in the service of the party now in possession of the Government of Hayti, and on account of the ultimate condemnation and sale of that vessel; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would take this case into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions that should be given to Mr. Byron thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Acting Consul-General at Port-au-Prince should be instructed to ascertain by what species of Tribunal, and on what grounds, the "Belinda W" was confiscated by the Haytian authorities, whether for breach of the Haytian Customs laws, or as a vessel in the service of the enemies of the captor. The claim of

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General at Naples, representing the sale and transfer of North German vessels to British subjects, and a letter from the Board of Trade suggesting, if it is the fact, that French Prize Courts do not recognize the sale of an enemy's ship to a neutral, that notice to that effect should be issued to British purchasers; and to request that I would report to your Lordship, at my earliest convenience, my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Consul at Naples may properly require from any British subject claiming to have granted to him a provisional certificate under section 54 of "The Merchant Shipping Act, 1854," for a vessel purchased by him from a North German subject, a declaration of ownership in conformity with section 38 of that Act, as a test of the purchase not being colourable. It is true that section 54 of the Merchant Shipping Act is silent as to any test of ownership, as regards vessels purchased in foreign ports; but I think it will be a reasonable precaution, under the circumstances, on the part of Her Majesty's Consul, to require a declaration to the effect above-mentioned, as being in conformity with the spirit of the Act, as regards the ownership of vessels registered as British vessels in the United Kingdom, and I see nothing in the Act which prohibits him from so doing.

P.S.—There will be no objection to Her Majesty's Consul informing any British subject who may apply to him for a provisional register, as the owner of a vessel purchased from a North German subject, that his title will be precarious if his vessel should be captured by a French cruizer.

question; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon, and as to the instructions which should now be given to Mr. Bunch with regard to the matter.

The previous papers were also sent therewith for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the statement of Mr. P. Brandon, which has been forwarded to your Lordship in Mr. Bunch's despatch of December 13, 1869, does not, in my opinion, remove the difficulties in this case which have been raised by the report of the Committee of the Colombian Senate. That Her Majesty's Government has the right, if it thinks fit, to insist upon the Colombian Government paying off the "Vales" at par, in the mode provided by the Convention of 1824, I have no doubt; but I hesitate to say that this is not a case in which your Lordship ought to exercise a discretion, and decline to press the subject further upon the attention of the Colombian Government.

If the "Vales" were still in the hands of Mr. Michelsen, I should have no hesitation in advising your Lordship to decline all further interference, and even now it is obvious that the result of your Lordship's successful intervention would be to obtain for the estate of Mr. Michelsen, a Danish subject, who evidently purchased the "Vales" at their depreciated value on speculation, a profit far in excess of any profit to be realized by fair mercantile transactions.

On the other hand, Mr. P. Brandon asserts that he will be unable to recover the balance of the debt due to his principals from the estate of Mr. Michelsen if your Lordship does not constrain the Colombian Government to pay off the "Vales" at par. I should be sorry to do injustice to Mr. P. Brandon, but I am not quite satisfied that this is an argument to which your Lordship ought to defer. I should, however, prefer that your Lordship should have the advantage of the opinion of the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General on this part of the case. That Mr. Michelsen purchased the "Vales" at their depreciated value with a full knowledge of the Decree of 1861 is clear from the recital in the purchase deed, whilst Mr. P. Brandon gives no reasons whatever for assenting to Mr. Michelsen's proposal that he should restore to him the "Vales" which he had received in deposit in 1858, and take in exchange, for the purpose of realization, the "Vales" purchased by Mr. Michelsen in 1866, and for which he now seeks to obtain full value from the Colombian Government.

Temple, March 11, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying report from Her Majesty's Advocate-General upon the subject of the claim of Mr. Percy Brandon against the Colombian Government on account of certain bonds issued by the former Government of New Granada.

2. That we would perceive that the Queen's Advocate, while he had no doubt that Her Majesty's Government had the right, if they thought fit, to insist upon the Colombian Government paying off the "Vales" at par, in the mode provided by the Convention of 1824; appeared, nevertheless, to incline to the opinion that the case was one in which your Lordship might exercise a discretion, and decline to press the matter further.

3. That as, however, the Queen's Advocate thought it advisable that your Lordship should have the benefit of our advice also, Mr. Hammond was pleased to transmit to us the correspondence that had passed upon the subject, and he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and, if necessary, confer thereon with the Queen's Advocate, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course that should be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That in our opinion the Colombian Government can be properly required by Her Majesty's Government to give the full value for the bonds to those Englishmen who originally received them from the Colombian Government on the faith of the Convention of 1824, and to any Englishmen who claim those bonds or any of them directly from their original English holders; but upon any of these bonds being sold to a Colombian subject, the Colombian Government had a right as against such subject to treat them as depreciated in value, and we are of opinion that on such depreciated bonds being purchased by an Englishman, the purchaser acquired no title against the Colombian Government to hold the bonds for a greater value than they possessed in the hands of the Colombian vendor.

We are therefore of opinion that Her Majesty's Government are not entitled to insist on payment in full of any of the bonds of Mr. Brandon, unless there be some (as to which the facts do not appear quite clear) to which he can deduce a title direct from the original holders and not through a Colombian subject.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a note from the French Embassy in this country, requesting to learn what course Her Majesty's Government propose to take in regard to a so-called "commercial contribution levied by the authorities of the State of Panama." Despatches which have been received from Mr. Bunch and from Mr. Consul Wilthew, giving the explanations which your Lordship has called for in the matter, were also inclcsed. That I should perceive from these papers that a law of the Granadian Congress in 1835 established certain exemptions from taxation; that the Government of the United States of Colombia (the present title of the Republic) holds that the creation of Sovereign States under the Federal system has deprived that law of its force, and that each State can levy for internal purposes whatever taxes it may require.

That a further point is also raised in Mr. Bunch's despatch, namely, the right of the individual States to establish such onerous duties as would practically put an end to the right of trade secured to this country by Treaty with the Republic. That it does not appear that as yet any British interests have been specially affected by the course taken by the State of Panama, but that as the points in question may eventually have an important bearing with reference to the position held by that State as regards traffic across the isthmus, Mr. Spring Rice was to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion on these points, and as to any steps which Her Majesty's Government should take for the assertion of British interests.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am not disposed to advise your Lordship that the right of Panama, as one of the Sovereign States constituting the United States of Colombia, to levy upon all foreign merchants who are resident within its territory the commercial contributions of which they complain, is controlled by the law of the Republic, formerly called New Granada, of 25th May, 1835, to which they appeal.

The main question raised by the merchants is in fact a question of constitutional law, upon which the Courts of the United States of Colombia are the competent Courts to decide, and it appears that the question has been formally brought before the Supreme Federal Court at Bogota, and that Court has decided that the State of Panama is not restricted by the constitution of the Union from imposing the contributions complained of.

Unless, therefore, this judgment should be appealed from and be reversed by some superior federal authority your Lordship would, I presume, in accordance with the usual comity in such matters, be disposed to respect it as decisive that the faculty of imposing the contribution complained of belongs, under the constitution of the Union, to the State of Panama. There is, however, another question upon which the merchants lay great stress. They say that the Republic of New Granada, by its law of 25th May, 1855, virtually engaged itself towards foreign Powers to maintain for twenty years after the opening of the railroad between the two oceans not merely the exemptions from taxes specified in Articles 1, 2, and 3 of that Law, but also the amount of contributions to be levied by the Municipal Council of Panama upon merchants in that canton selling foreign goods for consumption in the country. Assuming, for argument's sake, that the good faith of the Union is engaged by its own declaration not to exact for a given period in the Canton of Panama any of the taxes specified in Article 3 of the Law of 1835, I am of opinion that Articles 10, 11, and 12, which direct the Municipal Council of Panama to levy certain contributions on merchants selling foreign goods for consumption in the country, are not Articles which would have restricted the Union from imposing other or higher contributions on such merchants.

The question, therefore, of international obligation on this head would have failed, in my opinion, as regards the Union, and must equally fail as regards the State of Panama, which can be under no higher obligation than the Union itself.

With regard to the question raised in Mr. Bunch's despatch as to the right of Panama to impose "such onerous duties as would practically put an end to the right of trade secured to this country by Treaty with the Republic," I have not the Treaty before me so as to be able to judge of the precise bearing of its provisions on Mr. Bunch's question.

I may add that there would appear from Mr. Spring Rice's letter to be a slight misconception as to the views of the United States of Colombia. They have reserved to themselves exclusively, under the Constitutional Act of 1855, everything relating to the inter-oceanic communication, and the executive power of the Union has held subsequently to the passing of that Act that the exemptions from taxation specified in Article 3 of the Law of 1835 are within the control of the Union, and cannot be abrogated by the State of Panama. Its decision however on this point does not touch the contributions which may be levied on merchants selling foreign goods at Panama for consumption within the country, and it would appear from "the observations" made by M. Morro, the Secretary of Finance, on the letter of the North American merchants (page 26), that a law of the Granadian Republic (2nd June, 1849) declared articles destined for consumption in the isthmus to be not comprised in the exception against the faculty of the Provincial Chambers of the Isthmus to impose contributions on foreign merchandize, and that amongst the stipulations of the contract on the Panama railroad it is expressly stated that the goods and effects which are intended for consumption in the interior of the Republic shall pay the duties or imposts established, or which may be established, on the removal of the said goods from the storehouses of the company.

I consider that your Lordship cannot at present take any steps for the protection of British interests except in the way of friendly suggestion to the State of Panama that the tendency of its fiscal legislation is to prevent the natural influx of foreign capital into Panama, and so to impede the growth of the prosperity of that city, in which as one of the termini of the railroad British merchants using the railroad have an especial interest.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating:—

1. That upon the receipt of our report of the 11th March, upon Mr. Percy Brandon's claim on the Colombian Government in regard to the value of certain bonds issued to Messrs. Watts and Jones under a Convention between Great Britain and New Grenada concluded in 1854, the Earl of Clarendon addressed the accompanying instruction to Mr. Bunch, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogota; and Mr. Hammond was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the reply which had been received from Mr. Bunch, inclosing a copy of a letter from Mr. Percy Brandon calling attention to certain points in connection with this case which he conceived had not been fully understood and considered by Her Majesty's Government.

2. That the previous papers were likewise inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the case again into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether there is anything in Mr. Brandon's last letter which should induce him to alter the decision arrived at on our advice by Lord Clarendon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that there is nothing in the observations made by Mr. Percy Brandon in his last letter to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogota which should induce the Secretary of State to vary the decision of Lord Clarendon on the subject of Mr. Percy Brandon's claim against the Colombian Government.

Temple, August 31, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Mr. W. Ackers Cage, inclosing copies of correspondence which has passed between Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogota and himself with reference to a claim against the Colombian Government for 50 per cent. of the value of eight Colombian bonds of which Mr. Ackers Cage is the holder, such being the amount which, according to the Convention of 1834 between that Republic and those of Venezuela and Ecuador, the former agreed to pay of the liabilities of the old Republic of Colombia. That the quota due to Mr. Ackers Cage from Venezuela was awarded that gentleman by the Mixed Commission which recently sat at Caracas for the settlement of pending British claims. The previous papers were also transmitted, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this case into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That as far as I am able to understand the purport of Señor Cano's communication to Mr. Bunch, it is to the effect either that the State of Venezuela is liable to pay off the bonds of Mr. Ackers Cage in full, as belonging to the floating debt payable in the Custom-house of that State, or that the holder of the bonds has been guilty of lâches as regards any claim against the Republic of New Granada by not obtaining an adjustment of their payment between the three Republics under the Convention of 1834 before the expiration of the term prescribed by the Commission of Ministers. Upon the latter point I am not certain that I have before me the necessary data to form a trustworthy opinion; but from the provisions of Article XVIII of the Convention of 1834 it would appear to have been the duty of the Governments of the three Republics to submit to the Commission of Ministers within a definite period "a specific account of the floating debt assigned for payment in the Custom-houses of their respective territories," and when the amount should be known the Commission of Ministers was to adjust it between the three Republics. I am not, therefore, prepared at present to advise your Lordship to assent to the suggestion of Señor Cano that New Granada would be entitled to repudiate any claim against herself on the ground of lâches on the part of the holder of the bonds, as, if there has been any lâches in this case, it will apparently have been on the part of the State of Venezuela, in whose Custom-house at La Guaira the bonds appear to have been made payable. What would be the effect of lâches on the part of the State of Venezuela under such circumstances it may not be necessary for your Lordship to consider at present, as I gather from the latter part of Señor Cano's communication that, "in virtue of the compensations made by the Commission of Ministers, New Granada acknowledged and paid in full the floating debt credited in its Custom-houses and its Treasury debt, notwithstanding that the latter was much more considerable than that which it had to acknowledge according to the agreement, and in the same manner Venezuela and Ecuador had to acknowledge all the floating debt in their Custom-houses and their Treasury debt."

If this be a correct representation of the mutual liabilities of the three Republics in what concerns the floating debt assigned for payment in the Custom-houses of their respective territories, Venezuela would appear to be responsible for the payment in full of the eight bonds which are in the hands of Mr. Ackers Cage, and Mr. Ackers Cage would have no claim against the Republic of New Granada.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Mr. Bunch, forwarding a claim of Mr. George Fletcher on the Colombian Government for compensation for losses which he states he sustained in consequence of his being robbed of certain goods in the State of Canca by both belligerents during the Civil War which raged in that country during the years 1861 and 1862; and to request that I would take this case into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether Mr. George Fletcher's claim should be supported by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that Mr. George Fletcher's claim upon its merits ought not to be supported by Her Majesty's Government. Mr. Fletcher appears to have preferred a claim before the Tribunals of the country, which entertained it, and made their award. I see no grounds, upon the face of Mr. Bunch's report, for your Lordship's intervention to set aside that award.

Under these circumstances it becomes unnecessary to consider whether Mr. George Fletcher is entitled to the protection of Her Majesty's Government within the State of Colombia in his asserted character of a British subject.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that, with reference to my report of the 28th December, 1867, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogota, containing a full report on the claim of Messrs. Robinson and Fleming, of London, on the Government of Colombia for a balance alleged to be due to them on account of a steamer called the "Cuaspad," which they purchased in 1866, in pursuance of a contract made with General Mosquera, then the Colombian Envoy in London; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the case into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose the previous correspondence relating to Messrs. Robinson and Fleming's claims on the Colombian Government, from which I should perceive that, with the exception of the present one, all their claims have been settled since the date of my report above alluded to.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that the claim of Messrs. Robinson and Fleming against the Colombian Government is a just claim, on the assumption that, for the reasons stated, they found it impossible to effect an insurance upon the "Cuaspad" for a greater amount than 16,000*l*.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from the Acting British Consul in the Fiji Islands, asking to be furnished with instructions as to the position of British subjects who, under the circumstances therein set forth, enter the service of the Chiefs of those Islands; and to request that I would take this matter into consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon.

Mr. Spring Rice was also pleased to inclose, as somewhat connected with this matter, for my concurrence, the draft of an instruction, together with the despatch on the subject, which your Lordship proposes to address to Mr. March with respect to British subjects engaged in trading operations in the interior of the Fiji Islands.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the draft of instructions proposed to be addressed to Her Majesty's Acting Consul in Fiji may be properly approved by your Lordship. With regard to the general question raised in the despatch of Mr. Acting Consul Thurston of August 23, 1869, I am not sufficiently informed as to the precise relations which exist, if any, between Her Majesty the Queen and the Chiefs of Fiji, so as to be able to advise your Lordship as to the general instructions which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Acting Consul in reference to British subjects who may enter into contracts of service, or otherwise, with any of those Chiefs.

I am disposed, as at present informed, from papers submitted to me on previous occasions, to advise your Lordship that such contracts should not be regarded as contracts between a British subject and a foreign Sovereign, as the Acting Consul seems disposed to consider them, but rather as contracts between private individuals in a foreign country,—one of the parties to the contracts being a British subject, and the other a citizen of the foreign country; and that a British subject would not be entitled to claim the intervention of Her Majesty's Acting Consul to enforce the fulfilment of any such contracts by the citizen of the foreign country.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office and the papers therein inclosed, relative to the case of a British subject named Jonathan Morgan; that it appears from these papers that this individual proceeded to the Fiji Islands in search of employment; that while there he committed a breach of the peace, the particulars of which are fully set forth, and that in consequence Mr. Thurston, the Acting British Consul, deported him under close confinement during the voyage to Sydney, in order that proceedings might be taken against him on his arrival at that place; that the Police Magistrate at Sydney, however, after inquiry, discharged Morgan from custody; that in our report of the 15th March last we expressed our opinion on the instructions about to be addressed to Her Majesty's Consul in the Fiji Islands as to his position in regard to jurisdiction; that the drafts of these instructions and of a previous despatch on the subject were also inclosed, because, although addressed to Mr. Consul March, they indicate the course which Her Majesty's Government are desirous that their Agent in these islands should pursue in such matters; and Mr. Spring Rice was pleased to request that we would take this case into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with such observations as we may have to offer thereupon.

We are also honoured with Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 21st instant, transmitting a further letter and its inclosure from the Colonial Office, relating to this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That this case seems an illustration of the extreme inconvenience of the present relations (if they may be called such) of Her Majesty's Government with the Fiji Islands. The British Acting Consul, though he may have had a natural right for the protection of human life to place Captain Morgan under control, had no right whatever to deport him in irons to Sydney. Whatever may be the merits of the case in other respects, this much appears clear, that the Consul might, we think, properly be so informed. It is difficult to form an opinion of the merits on widely conflicting ex parte statements made by the respective parties, but we are not disposed to think, as far as we can judge, that the Consul will be proved deserving of any other censure than that above suggested. Should Captain Morgan apply further for compensation, he may, we think, fitly be told to take such steps as he may be advised, and that Her Majesty's Government must decline to interfere.

Temple, March 12, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Charles Spring Rice's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating—

1. That Earl Granville had communicated to your Lordship our report of the 11th January, regarding the steps which it might be desirable to take in view of the kidnapping operations in the Pacific Islands.

2. That we would learn from the draft of a letter to the Colonial Office, therewith inclosed, the view which your Lordship had taken of our suggestions, and that it was proposed that the Government Draftsman should receive from the Foreign Office and Colonial Office simultaneously instructions to draw the draft of a Bill to be presented to Parliament, each Department confining itself to the points where it is specially concerned.

3. That, so far as the Foreign Office is concerned, those points are the powers proposed to be vested in Her Majesty's Consular Officers; and on that point your Lordship observed that we were of opinion that the difficulties which had hitherto interfered with the extension, in the case of the Fiji Islands, of the provisions of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act remained undiminished; but that we considered that advantage might be taken of the proposed Imperial legislation to enable Her Majesty's Consul to make regulations from time to time touching the receiving, exporting, or carrying by sea any natives of the islands, breach of such regulations to be punished as a misdemeanour.

4. That it would, however, appear necessary, in order to enable the Consul to enforce those regulations, that he should legally be empowered to issue warrants for the apprehension of persons charged with the offence of kidnapping, and that he should be enabled to send such persons for trial before the Australian Courts; and your Lordship requested that we would report to you our suggestions as to the instructions which should be addressed to the Government Draftsman on those points.

5. That Mr. Rice was pleased to add that, considering the peculiar circumstances of the British community at Fiji with which Her Majesty's Consul would have to deal, it would be a great advantage if the proposed enactment could strengthen his hands generally in enforcing discipline over British settlers; and that, in view of the possible necessity of appointing British Consular Agents in other neighbouring quarters, it might be also desirable that Her Majesty's Government should be in a position to extend similar powers to such Agents in case of need.

6. That this last point required attention with reference to immigration of British coolies to the French Colony of New Caledonia, where your Lordship had lately appointed a gentleman to act as British Vice-Consul.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we beg leave to refer to the concluding paragraph of our former report, and to suggest that, before a Bill is prepared, it would be desirable to ascertain whether the consent of France and America can be obtained to the giving our Consul jurisdiction over their subjects to any and what extent. It further occurs to us that, before providing by Imperial legislation for the Colonial Courts dealing with offences in Fiji, and for the Consul at Fiji directing the deportation of offenders to the Colony, it may be well to ascertain whether the Colony is willing to accept any and what jurisdiction upon the subject. Until these matters are ascertained, we scarcely feel in a position to advise more definitely on the subject of the provisions of a Bill than we have done in our former report.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers respecting the proceedings of the master of a British vessel, the "Atlantic," who was charged with having decoyed natives in the Pacific Islands under false pretences, for the purpose of conveying them practically as slaves to the Fiji Islands.

That the correspondence included a report from the Legal Adviser to the Treasury on Slave Trade matters, who, as we would perceive, suggested that certain existing Acts of Parliament might extend to the case, and he was to request that we would favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion whether Mr. Rothery's views were correct; and, if so, whether legal proceedings could be taken against the vessel under the Acts of Parliament to which he (Mr. Rothery) referred; whether the captain of the vessel could not be legally taken into custody on his arrival in British territory, and sent for trial before a British Court of Law, and whether the Consul was justified in detaining the vessel, and sending her for trial to Sydney.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That we concur generally in the views expressed by Mr. Rothery. We are of opinion that the Acts to which he refers are wide enough to embrace this case; that legal proceedings such as he recommends may be taken against the vessel; that Captain Hayes may be legally taken into custody on his arrival in British territory, and sent for trial before a British Court of Law, and that the Consul is justified in detaining the vessel and sending her for trial to Sydney.

Annex.

Report by Mr. Rothery to the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury upon the case of the "Atlantic."

In obedience to your Lordships' commands I have perused and considered the documents herewith returned, consisting of a letter from the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, bearing date the 19th ultimo, with its inclosures, relative to the case of a British vessel called the "Atlantic," which had been detained by the British Consul in the Navigator Islands, on a charge of kidnapping the natives; and the Under-Secretary states that Lord Granville would be glad to have my opinion upon the whole case, upon the proceedings of the Consul, and as to the proper course to pursue in the matter.

The present is one of those unhappy cases to which your Lordships' attention was called in the early part of the present year in connection with a Bill which it was proposed to bring in, and which formed the subject of my report to your Lordships of the 8th of June last. The circumstances of the present case are as follows:—

In the month of September 1869, a captain, W. W. Hayes, whose character seems to have been well known in those seas, was at Apia in Upola, one of the group of the Samoa or Navigator Islands, when he was applied to by a person called Frederick Henry Severight, who had then recently arrived from the Fiji Islands, with orders from several planters there to procure labourers for them. Captain Hayes was at that time without a vessel, having lost the ship which he had owned, but he soon afterwards obtained from Messrs. Betham and Moore, an English firm established at Apia, the command of the schooner "Atlantic," in which he sailed on the 12th October following, with Mr. Severight on board. After touching at various places, they, on the 20th of the following month of November, sighted Manikiki, or Humphrey's Island, another of the Samoan group; and there Captain Hayes, a woman who lived with him on board his vessel named Mary Jordan, her brother Joseph Jordan, who acted as interpreter, and Mr. Severight, landed.

The same night the "Atlantic" drifted out to sea, and it was eight or ten days before she again fetched the land.

In the meantime Hayes, the Jordans, and Mr. Severight were lodged on shore in the native missionary's house, and having learnt that the islanders were desirous of going to a neighbouring island called Rakahana, or Revison's Island, to carry a quantity of cocoa-nuts, and some hats and mats as presents to the islanders, Captain Hayes proposed to take them over without charge, and to return with them after they had seen their friends. He proposed, too, that the whole settlement should go—men, women, and children. Before, however, the return of the "Atlantic," Captain Hayes had begun to excite the suspicions of the islanders by his having deflowered a child of tender years, and by his evident anxiety to get the whole of the female portion of the settlement on board; but it was proposed by the elders that the women and girls should remain behind, and that only the males should go. To this arrangement, however, Captain Hayes strongly objected, telling them that it would not look well to pay their visit unaccompanied by their women; but all his efforts to persuade the female portion of the settlement to go on board failed. At length, however, when he had got on board some 20,000 cocoa-nuts and a quantity of mats and hats, Captain Hayes seems to have made a last effort to induce the natives to come on board; and, with that view, he sent the dingy, belonging to the missionary teacher Taiti, ashore to persuade the people to come and receive payment for their goods. In about an hour or two the dingy returned, accompanied by a native boat, in which there were two little girls, eight boys, one middle-aged woman, and several old men. When Captain Hayes found that he could not persuade any more natives to come on board, he told Joseph Jordan to take the two little girls and eight boys down into the cabin, and endeavoured to persaade the elderly natives to return to the shore in the boat. This, however, they seemed very unwilling to do without their children, but at length all the old people were got into the native boat with the exception of the old man named Moete and the woman, both of whom had children on board, and who consequently refused to leave. The vessel thereupon stood out to sea, and Captain Hayes then, for the first time, informed the natives whom he had on board that it was not his intention to go to Rakahana at all, but to the Fiji Islands.

The "Atlantic" then sailed direct for Puka-puka, or Danger Island, another of the Samoan group. But before arriving there, Captain Hayes inquired of Moete what he intended to say to any natives who might come on board, and having been told by him that he should say that they had been stolen from Manikiki, he ordered Moete and all the Manikikians to go below when they got near the island, and fastened down the hatches upon them, and this course he adopted during the whole time that they lay off Puka-puka whenever any native boat approached the ship, fearing that, if any communication should take place, he would not be able to obtain any labourers from Puka-puka.

The attempt of Captain Hayes to obtain labourers at Puka-puka did not at first meet with much success, for the natives from some cause or other seem to have entertained some suspicion of his intentions. Through the agency, however, of the native missionary, Okotai, the difficulties were to a certain extent removed, and it was ultimately arranged that a small body only of them, nineteen or thereabouts, should in the first instance go, accompanied by their chief, Pilote; the agreement was for a period of six months to pick cotton at Voilete in the Island of Upola, but the chief was to remain with them for two months, when he was to be taken back to Puka-puka, and, if satisfied with the treatment they received, Captain Hayes was promised 100 labourers.

On Pilote and the Puka-pukans coming on board the vessel was got under weigh, but it was not until she was well clear of the island that the Manikikians were allowed to come on deck. On seeing them, and hearing from Moete how they had come on board, the Puka-pukans immediately concluded that they also had been betrayed, and that Captain Hayes did not intend to carry out his engagement with them—a suspicion, I fear, which there is too much reason to believe was well founded, for although the agreement, which is to be found amongst the papers, and which purports to have been signed by all the natives, is to work for a period of only six months "on the Island of Upola or any other island of the Samoan group," to which both Puka-puka and the Manikiki belong, there is very strong evidence that the agreement which Captain Hayes induced the Puka-pukans to sign, whether with or without the connivance of the native missionary Okotai, was to labour for a period of five years at Naitamba in the Fiji Islands; for both Mr. Severight and Mr. Powell, the missionary resident at Pago-pago, in the Island of Tutnila, another of the Samoan group, to which the vessel proceeded immediately after leaving Puka-puka, speak to having seen such an agreement, and the latter states that he believes that the agreement, which is amongst the papers, was forged by Captain Hayes after his arrest by the natives, and whilst he was staying at his, the missionary's, house, as hereinafter mentioned.

The "Atlantic" then proceeded to Pago-pago, where she arrived on the evening of the 14th December, and on the following morning Captain Hayes ordered the natives, both Manikikians and Puka-pukans, to go on shore to wash their clothes, and gave strict instructions to Moete that he was not to let one of them escape. Moete, however, soon after they had landed, proceeded to inform the Chief of Pago-pago, Manga by name, that he and the rest of the Manikikians had been stolen from their homes. Accordingly, Manga accompanied him to Mr. Powell, the missionary, when Manga stated that it was the intention of himself and his people to seize the vessel and release the natives. Mr. Powell, however, warned them against the consequences of so violent a proceeding. No sooner, however, had they left him, than Mr. Severight came to Mr. Powell, and confirmed the statement that the vessel was, as it is called, a man-stealer, and that the natives on board had been kidnapped. On receiving this information, Mr. Powell suggested to the natives that they should tell the Manikikians that, if they had been stolen, they need not return to the ship, but that they had better remain on shore.

In the meantime Moete had returned with the Chief Manga to the place where he had left the Manikikians and the Puka-pukans, and found that they had all returned on board. It was then arranged that he should go back to the vessel, assemble all the natives, and advise them, on his giving a signal, all to jump into the sea at once and swim ashore. He accordingly did so, and on the signal being given they all, with the exception of about ten of the more weakly, jumped into the sea and reached the shore in safety.

The few who remained on board were immediately seized by Captain Hayes and his crew, and thrust below the deck.

At this time the ship's boat with the mate and some of the crew were on shore taking in water, and Manga, finding that some of the natives were still detained on board, seized the boat and her crew. Captain Hayes then finding that his boat and crew were detained, immediately armed himself with his revolvers, and taking a native boat, proceeded to the shore. Manga seeing the captain approach armed, and well knowing his desperate character, ordered some of his men to put off in another canoe, with directions, when they got into shallow water, to upset the captain's boat, and thus wet his powder. The stratagem succeeded perfectly, and Captain Hayes being unable to use his revolvers, was easily overpowered and disarmed.

Notwithstanding this man's previous conduct the natives seem to have treated him with the greatest kindness and consideration; they took him to Mr. Powell's house and there lodged him, and Manga immediately wrote off to Mr. Hunkin, Her Majesty's Consular Agent resident at Leone, the capital of this Island of Tutuila, and which was about fifteen miles distant, stating what he had done, and requesting his immediate attendance. Mr. Hunkin, however, at first declined to attend, as he was under the impression that the "Atlantic" was an American vessel; but on receiving other more urgent letters from Manga, and a letter from Captain Hayes himself saying that, although he was an American-born citizen, the vessel was British, and claiming his intervention, Mr. Hunkin proceeded in a native boat to Pago-pago. He arrived there early on the 18th of December, and found Captain Hayes still a prisoner, but well treated; and after various negotiations, but with which it is not necessary to trouble your Lordships, it was agreed that Captain Hayes and the vessel should be released, to enable her to proceed to Apia, there to have the matter decided by the British Consul; but as the natives refused to trust themselves within his power, it was arranged that they should remain at Pago-pago, pending a reference to the British Consul.

It was thought then that everything was arranged; but here the difficulty arose on the part of the crew of the "Atlantic," who likewise feared to remain on board with the captain, believing that once released he had not any intention of going to Apia. Under these circumstances, Mr. Hunkin determined to take upon himself the responsibility of sending the vessel under the command of the mate to Apia to receive the Consul's directions, retaining Captain Hayes with him; and, to save appearances, Captain Hayes requested that it might be given out that he remained as Mr. Hunkin's visitor. The natives also remained at Pago-pago.

The "Atlantic" arrived at Apia on the 24th December, in charge of Mr. Hussey, the mate, when Mr. Williams, the British Consul, immediately determined to take the vessel to Pago-pago, and to bring the master and natives in her to Apia.

Accordingly, on the 9th of January following, Mr. Williams returned with them all to Apia, and on the 12th of that month opened a Court of Inquiry into the circumstances. The inquiry continued from that day until the 23rd of the same month, when owing to Captain Hayes having had a fit, which confined him to his bed, it was necessarily suspended for some days. Ultimately the inquiry terminated on the 14th of February, and the conclusion to which the Consul came was, that Captain Hayes was guilty of the charges which had been preferred against him, and that the best course for him to pursue was to refer the whole case to Sydney. Knowing, however, the desperate character of the man, and having no place in which to confine him, and being fairly convinced that, as soon as he knew what the decision was, he would immediately make his escape, he delayed giving judgment, and in the meantime, and as no one could be found sufficiently bold to take charge of the "Atlantic" to Sydney with Captain Hayes on board, Mr. Williams addressed a letter to Commodore Lambert, requesting his assistance for that purpose; Captain Hayes, however, having some suspicion that it was intended to send him to Sidney, and being out on his parole, thought it best to make his escape, and on the 1st of April following he left the island in a brig called the "Pioneer," of Shanghae.

It should here be added that, after Captain Hayes' departure, the vessel seems to have remained in the Consul's hands, the owner, Mr. Betham, having refused to accept her on the conditions proposed by the Consul in a letter from him dated the 10th of March last. And by a letter from Mr. Williams, dated the 7th of March, it seems that between the 12th January and that day, no less than seven of the Puka-pukans, or more than one-third of the whole number, had died, and that others were then very ill from the change of diet—their food in their own islands consisting entirely of cocoa-nuts and fish. How many of these poor creatures still survive, and what has become of them, there is nothing in these papers to show.

Such, then, are the facts of this unhappy case; and after a very careful perusal of the whole of the evidence, which is extremely voluminous, I think there can be no doubt that the charges preferred against Captain Hayes have been fully established.

Those charges were, as regards the Manikikians, that he had taken them away against their will, with the intention of disposing of them in the Fiji Islands; and, as regards the Puka-pukans, that he had entered into an engagement with them to labour for six monts in an island of the Samoan group, and that he was carrying them also away to the Fiji Islands.

The natives, many of whom were examined by the Consul, appear to me to give a very clear and consistent account of the whole transaction.

Their evidence is supported by that of Mr. Severight, of Mr. Powell, and, in a measure, by that of some of the witnesses produced on behalf of Captain Hayes. Indeed Captain Hayes appears to me hardly to deny the charges preferred against him. He does not deny that his agreement with the Manikikians was to take them with their cocoa-nuts to Rokahana, and yet, instead of so doing, he sailed away with them to Puka-puka.

The excuse that the natives were too few to land the cocoa-nuts, and that they had only brought one boat instead of two for the purpose, is a mere pretext, for it could never justify the carrying away of these young people from their homes.

It is admitted by all the captain's witnesses that when the Manikikians came on board they were under the impression they were going to Rokahana; that Captain Hayes ordered Jordan to take all the young people down into the cabin; and that it was then, and then only, that they learnt for the first time that they were not going to Rokahana. It is impossible, therefore, to believe that these children went voluntarily in the ship, and that they were not carried off against their will.

The agreement, too, which was produced by the captain, and to which their names purport to have been signed, is, so far as the Manikikians are concerned, confessedly a forgery, for it is admitted by every one that they were not allowed to have any communication with the shore at Puka-puka, but were always sent below when any boat approached; and yet Okotai, the native missionary at Puka-puka, whom they never saw, purports to be one of the attesting witnesses to their signatures.

The statement, too, of the mate and others of the crew of the "Atlantic," that Moete had brought the two young girls on board, saying that they had been sent by the missionary Taiti, in whose house Captain Hayes had been staying during his residence at Manikiki, to do what he liked with them, if true, would no doubt seriously compromise the characters both of Moete and of the missionary; but I do not see how it would justify the carrying off those people from their homes.

On the whole, looking at the facts of the case, seeing that the object of the voyage was to obtain native labour, and that Mr. Severight, who was on board for the purpose, required that labour for the Fiji Islands; looking also at the evidence given by Mr. Powell of the existence of an agreement, which Captain Hayes had fraudulently induced the Puka-pukans to sign, to work for him at the Fiji Islands; remembering, too, the unscrupulous character of Captain Hayes, who is described by Mr. Williams, the British Consul, as being a man of desperate character, "well known throughout the Colonies, San Francisco, Sandwich Islands, and China," and whose career has "been one of roguery," so that "there are but few parts of the world where he can go without being apprehended by the law," I think that there can be little doubt that his intention was, as Mr. Williams says, to take the natives, Manikikians as well as Puka-Pukans, against their wills to the Fiji Islands, there to force them to labour; and had he succeeded in his object it may well be doubted whether any of them would ever again have returned to their homes.

If, then, the charges preferred against Hayes be established, I think there can be little doubt that he is deserving of the most severe punishment which the law allows.

The offence with which he is charged, although not what is ordinarily called the Slave Trade,—by which I mean the African Slave Trade,—is in effect slave-trading in the larger sense of the term; it is the forcible or fraudulent carrying off persons against their wills to be used and dealt with as slaves. And the question which has now to be considered is, whether the offence is one which the laws of this country can reach?

It is certainly much to be regretted that the Bill which it was proposed to bring in, and which formed the subject of my report to your Lordships of the 8th June last, has not been passed, as it was expressly designed to meet a case of this kind, and there would then have been no doubt as to the legality of the Consul's proceedings, or as to the punishment which would have awaited Captain Hayes. It may, however, be well to inquire whether there is anything in the existing Slave Trade Acts which would meet such a case as the present.

In advising upon this point I shall do so with the utmost reserve, as I doubt not that your Lordships would prefer in a case of this description to have the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown, the questions involved being of great importance.

My duty will be confined simply to calling your Lordships' attention to those provisions of some of the Slave Trade Acts which appear to me to have a bearing on the case.

The first Act then, to which I will call your Lordships' attention, is the Slave Trade Consolidation Act, the 5th Geo. IV, c. 113. Now, although there is no doubt that this Act was expressly directed against the African Slave Trade, its provisions would seem to have a more general application, and to have for their object, so far as British vessels are concerned, the entire suppression of the Slave Trade wheresoever carried on, and to whatever country the slaves, or the persons to be treated or dealt with as slaves, may belong. The 2nd section of that Act provides "That it shall not be lawful for any person to deal or trade in, purchase, sell, barter, or transfer, or contract for the dealing or trading in, purchase, sale, barter, or transfer of slaves, or persons intended to be dealt with as slaves; or to carry away or remove, or to contract for the carrying away or removing of slaves or other persons, as or in order to their being dealt with as slaves;" or to import or bring into any place whatever, or to ship or embark any such persons, &c.

The 3rd section imposes certain penalties for dealing in slaves, or exporting or importing them, or shipping them for the purpose of exportation or importation; and the 4th section declares that the ship, vessel, or boat which shall be found employed in such a trade shall, together with any property on board belonging to any owner or part owner of the vessel, be forfeited to the Crown.

And then the 9th section proceeds as follows: that if any British subject or any person resident within Her Majesty's dominions shall upon the high seas, &c., "knowingly and wilfully carry away, convey, or remove, or aid or assist in carrying away, conveying, or removing, any person or persons away as a slave or slaves, or for the purpose of his, her, or their being imported or brought as a slave or slaves into any island, colony, country, territory, or place whatsoever, or for the purpose of his, her, or their being sold, transferred, used, or dealt with as a slave or slaves;" or if any person shall "knowingly and wilfully ship, embark, receive, detain, or confine, or assist in shipping, embarking, receiving, detaining, or confining on board any ship, vessel, or boat any person or persons for the purpose of his, her, or their being imported or brought as a slave or slaves into any island, colony, country, territory, or place whatsoever, or for the purpose of his, her, or their being sold, transferred, used, or dealt with as slave or slaves," then and in every such case the person so offending shall be deemed to be guilty of piracy, and shall be punished accordingly.

The 10th section provides that any person engaging in any such trade, as well as the master supercargo, or any officer of the vessel, shall be deemed guilty of felony.

And the 11th provides that any petty officer or seaman serving on board any such vessel shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour.

Now in all these sections there are no words which limit the operation of the statute to the African Slave Trade, the provisions are perfectly general, and would seem to include any act of slave-trading by British subjects, or by persons subject to British jurisdiction, wheresoever carried on, and whatever may be the nationality of the slaves or persons used or dealt with as slaves.

There is another Act to which it may be well also to call your Lordship's attention, the 6 and 7 Vict., cap. 98, the 1st section of which extends the provisions of preceding statute to the case of British subjects resident in foreign countries; and the 2nd section declares "That all persons holden in servitude as pledges for debts, and commonly called pawns, or by whatever other name they may be called or known, shall, for the purposes of the said Consolidated Slave Trade Act, &c., be deemed and construed to be slaves or persons intended to be dealt with as slaves."

Looking at the general terms of these statutes, I am inclined to think that they would reach the present case; that the "Atlantic" if proceeded against would be forfeited, and that Captain Hayes, if arraigned before a British jury, would meet with the punishment he so richly deserves.

But whether the prosecution were successful or not I think it should be undertaken; the offence of which Captain Hayes is accused is of so heinous a nature, and the evidence against him appears to me to be so strong, that it would be a cause of much regret if he were to escape with impunity. I should add that the fact that Captain Hayes was apparently a citizen of the United States would make no difference; he was at the time master of a British vessel, sailing under the British flag, and as such would be subject to British jurisdiction; indeed, in writing to the British Consular Agent in Tutuila, he admits his status of a British subject, claims the Consul's protection as the master of a British vessel, and as being in the same position as if English born.

As regards Mr. Williams, the British Consul at Apia, respecting whom Lord Granville has asked your Lordships' opinion, it appears to me that he was right in seizing this vessel, and that he would have been fully justified in sending her as well as her master for adjudication before the Courts at Sydney. And if the vessel still remains in his custody, I would, subject to the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown, venture to suggest that proceedings should forthwith be instituted for her condemnation.

Captain Hayes, it appears, has escaped; but should he at any time again come within British jurisdiction, I venture to suggest, with the same reservation, that he should be arrested and at once placed upon his trial.

It might be well also to ascertain what part Messrs. Betham and Moore, the owners of the vessel, have had in these transactions, and whether they were in any way parties to these nefarious proceedings; if so, they ought also to be put upon their trial.

Before concluding this report it will be proper to advert to a fact which arises incidentally in the case. It will be seen that it was chiefly through the instrumentality of the native missionaries at Manikiki and Puka-puka, Taiti and Okotai by name, that the natives were induced to go on board; it was with these missionaries that Captain Hayes chiefly communicated, and he resided with his woman, Mary Jordon, in Taiti's house at Manikiki for several days; there is also a charge against this missionary of having sent two young girls to Captain Hayes by Moete.

It does not appear whether these persons are agents of the Church Missionary Society, but it might be well to suggest to Lord Granville that the attention of that Society should be called to the facts, in order that the charges may be investigated, and if well founded, that steps should be taken to prevent their recurrence.

In conclusion, I would observe that the conduct of Mr. Hunkin, the Consular Agent in Tutuila, and of Mr. Powell, the missionary at Pago-pago, are, in my opinion, deserving of commendation; they appear to have acted, under circumstances of great difficulty, with promptitude and discretion. It is, however, to Manga, the chief of Pago-pago, to whose courage and determination these poor natives entirely owe their liberty, that the greatest praise is due; the skill with which he succeeded in disarming Captain Hayes, and thus preventing bloodshed, and the consideration with which he seems to have subsequently treated him whilst still retaining him as a prisoner, are deserving of the highest commendation; the service, too, was one which was not unattended with danger, looking at the desperate character of Captain Hayes, and it seems to have been performed with great judgment and discretion.

All of which is most humbly submitted to your Lordships' wisdom.

We concur generally in the views expressed by Mr. Rothery. We are of opinion that the Acts to which he refers are wide enough to embrace this case; that legal proceedings, such as he recommends, may be taken against the vessel; that Captain Hayes may be legally taken into custody on his arrival in British territory, and sent for trial before a British Court of Law; and that the Consul is justified in detaining the vessel and sending her for trial to Sydney.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me an accompanying letter which had been received from Mr. Hector, inclosing a printed copy of a correspondence on the subject of the proceedings of certain wool-dealers at Harveyzeh. A letter with a memorandum from Sir Henry Rawlinson upon the subject was also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That I agree with Sir H. Rawlinson in his view that it would be useless to discuss this question any further at Baghdad; and Mr. Alison is in my opinion right in suggesting that the alternative course of suing the parties in Persia is the proper course. I think your Lordship may properly instruct Mr. Alison to take such steps as he thinks most advisable to bring this question to a settlement in the manner proposed by him. The mercantile features of the case hardly allow, in my opinion, of such a high-handed course being adopted at present by your Lordship, as Sir H. Rawlinson deems to be necessary in order to secure the satisfaction of Messrs. Hector's just claims.

No. 186.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 1.)

Temple, March 1, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 26th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to call our immediate attention to the correspondence of which a list was inclosed regarding the detention in Peru of two British vessels. We would observe that the case had been the subject of legal proceedings in Peru, but that the vessels were detained in consequence of proceedings taken with the cognizance of the Peruvian Government.

We would also observe that, in conformity with the request of the parties in this country concerned in the vessels, Mr. Jerningham was instructed by the last West Indian mail to propose that, if the vessels were released, the owners were ready to give bond for any sum claimed by the Peruvian Government, on the understanding, however, that the case should be referred for arbitration.

That, subsequently to the despatch of your Lordship's instructions in that sense, Mr. Jerningham's despatch No. 8 had been received at that office, as well as Messrs. Galloway's letter of February 19, from which it appeared that it had been reported in late advices from Peru that, on the eve of the departure of the mail for Europe, forcible steps had been threatened against the vessels.

That the matter would accordingly have appeared to have assumed a new footing; and, as the case was one which involved heavy losses on the British subjects concerned, your Lordship requested that we would report to your Lordship at our earliest convenience such observations as we might have to make on the case, and specially as to the extent and manner in which Her Majesty's Government were called upon to interfere in regard to it in sufficient time to enable instructions to be forwarded to Mr. Jerningham by the mail of March 1.

And that, to facilitate our labours in the matter, your Lordship had requested the Board of Trade to furnish such observations as they might have to make on the case, which involved considerations of a technical as well as legal character, and that he was to inclose the report which had, in consequence, been received from the Board of Trade.

Since the date of the before-mentioned letter we have received a further letter from Mr. Spring Rice in this matter, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 26th instant, respecting the British ships "Star of Brunswick" and "Prince Rupert," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us for our consideration the accompanying further despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lima respecting the case of those vessels.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the question in dispute between the owners of the vessels and the Peruvian Government appears mainly one of fact, viz., whether the vessels were or not overloaded to such an extent as to disentitle them to a clearance at the port of Callao. On this question the papers do not enable us to form a positive opinion, and we are not altogether satisfied that the owners were right and the Peruvian Government wrong. As we understand the case, however, this question has been determined by the Peruvian Tribunals both of the First Instance and of Appeal in favour of the Government,

Under these circumstances, if the ordinary rules of international comity between civilized nations are applicable to our relations with Peru, the matter is ended, and the decision of the Courts must be acquiesced in. If, however, there be ground for impeaching the decision of the Peruvian Tribunals on the score of gross injustice, corruption, or fraud, a case of remonstrance may arise against the Government.

Under the circumstances, we do not see what instructions can at present be given to Mr. Jerningham, further than to inquire and report whether the proceedings before the Tribunals appear to have been regular and proper, or whether there are valid grounds, and if so what, to complain of them. Until some substantial grounds are made out to impeach their conduct, and to show their decision not merely opposed to what the owners may contend to be the weight of evidence, but manifestly and flagrantly unjust, we do not think that a cause of remonstrance arises, although Mr. Jerningham may very properly use his good offices to obtain a settlement of the dispute.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence upon the subject of a claim made upon the Peruvian Government by Mr. Joseph Pickering for the sum of 318,536*l.* 1*s.* 2*d.* as compensation for the abrogation by that Government of a concession granted in 1864 to him and his associate, Don Manual Avelino Orihuela, for the construction of a railway from Iquique to La Naria; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion upon the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears to me, upon the perusal of Mr. J. Pickering's memorial, that he has shown no title of right to claim compensation from the Peruvian Government on account of the abrogation of his concession, although he may have some equitable claim on that Government to be reimbursed the expenditure on the permanent way of the railway, which he has made in a bonâ fide effort to carry out his contract.

The Peruvian Government will have had all the benefit of that expenditure in taking possession of the railway, and Mr. J. Pickering's failure to complete his contract appears from his memorial to have been mainly attributable to the depreciated credit of the Republic itself.

Under these circumstances I am of opinion that your Lordship will be justified in declining to comply with Mr. Pickering's request that Her Majesty's Minister at Lima should be instructed to present his memorial to the President of the Republic, and to support officially his claim for compensation on the grounds set forth at length in that memorial.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received August 10.)

Temple, August 9, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 20th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our report of the 27th March, relative to the case of the British ships "Prince Rupert" and "Star of Brunswick," he was directed to transmit to us a despatch from Mr. Jerningham containing a report on the points raised, in regard to which we asked for further information.

A letter from Messrs. Moore and Galloway, preferring a demand for compensation on account of the detention of these vessels, and the previous correspondence and papers subsequent to our report, were also inclosed, and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the course it would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the decisions of the Tribunals of foreign countries are generally to be respected. Her Majesty's Government cannot undertake to impugn them, because they may have been arrived at by modes of procedure different from ours, still less because the facts on which they are based are disputed by the party decided against. Such decisions can only be impugned if they appear to be in manifest and flagrant violation of the rules of natural justice, or if the Tribunals pronouncing them are proved to be corrupt or barbarous.

In this case it appears that a paper issued by the Callao Board of Surveys, "assigning the draught the ships should have," was shown to the captains and signed by them. They, indeed, alleged that they signed this paper in ignorance of its contents; but whether this allegation was true or false, and how far it was material, were questions for the decision of the Peruvian Tribunals.

It appears by the statement of the Advocate of the captains (which must be taken with some allowance) that the "Diputacion de Comercio," a Tribunal having cognizance of the question, found that the ships had been laden beyond the prescribed draught. It further appears that the captains appealed from this decision to the Judge of the Superior Tribunal, who confirmed the sentence, and ruled, moreover, that the captains were responsible for demurrage. That the captains again appealed to the Fiscal of the Supreme Court, who confirmed the sentence, except so far as it related to demurrage. It is true that the Advocate complains of irregularities in the proceedings of the Court of First Instance, on account of which he thinks that its decision ought to have been reversed by the Superior Courts, but it is obvious that the opinion of an Advocate cannot weigh against the decision of an Appellate Tribunal. The question remains, is it shown that the Peruvian Tribunals, to the highest of which the captains have appealed, are corrupt, or that their decisions are in flagrant violation of natural justice? We can find no proof whatever of either of these allegations, which are not to be established by vague and general assertions or complaints. We do not undertake to give an opinion whether the decisions were right or wrong, but we think it proper to say, that upon the statements before us, which are to a great degree ex parte, we are by no means satisfied that the decisions were wrong. It may be that the Peruvian surveyors are open to receive bribes, and that they might have been bribed to connive at a breach of the regulations, but this does not affect the question whether Her Majesty's Government are entitled to disregard the decisions of the Peruvian Tribunals, and apply to the Peruvian Government for redress. We think that no case has been made out calling upon them to do so. Your Lordship may well inquire, however, if you think fit, as Lord Clarendon was asked to do, of Admiral Hastings or any other person acquainted with the country, and enjoying your Lordship's confidence, as to the truth of these allegations concerning the corruption of the Peruvian officials, and should your Lordship's inquiries result in sustaining these allegations, your Lordship may well call the serious attention of the Peruvian Government to the subject, with an intimation that it may not always be possible, if the system of bribery is persevered in, to abstain from unpleasant intervention, should the working of the system be such as to expose British subjects to substantial, though perhaps not technical, hardship and injustice.

Temple, August 12, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that with reference to our report of the 31st of May last upon the subject of the claim of Mrs. Stevenson to certain property at Callao, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed further correspondence which had passed between the Foreign Office, Sir John Ogilvie, and Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lima.*

That we would perceive that the Peruvian Government declined to revoke the sentence of the Supreme Court, according to which Mrs. Stevenson was debarred, as an alien, from claiming the moveable property of her grand-daughter, and he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps which it might be proper for Her Majesty's Government to take in the matter.

Mr. Hammond kindly inclosed previous papers for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That our previous report of May 31, 1869, distinguishing between real and personal property, proceeded upon an interpretation of Article 635 of the Peruvian Civil Code, which, in our opinion, might reasonably be given to it; but it appears from the despatch of the Peruvian Minister of Foreign Affairs of the 14th June last, that such is not the interpretation which he puts upon it, and we assume that he speaks upon the advice of Peruvian lawyers, and that his interpretation would be adopted by the Peruvian Courts if the question could be raised before them. It appears, however, that the question cannot now be raised before those Courts, as Mrs. Stevenson, upon the advice of her Peruvian counsel in the suit, in which she has had an adverse judgment, claimed the succession to the whole estate of her grand-daughter, making no distinction between personalty and realty, and judgment has gone against her claim in all the Peruvian Courts under circumstances which would preclude her from raising separately before them any further claim to the personalty apart from the realty.

We fear therefore that Mrs. Stevenson is barred from raising any further question before the Peruvian tribunals, which, as the domicile of her grand-daughter was Peruvian, are the proper authorities to expound the law of succession applicable to her personalty. Assuming, as we have done, that Mrs. Stevenson cannot have further recourse to the Peruvian Courts, we are not prepared to say that the interpretation put upon the Peruvian Law of Succession by the Peruvian Minister is repugnant to its obvious sense, or that it would be contrary to natural justice for the Peruvian Republic to require complete reciprocity, as regards all kinds of property, as a condition of their allowing a subject of a foreign State to take any kind of property by succession in Peru.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 24.)

Temple, January 22, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 19th instant, stating that, with reference to my report of the 18th ultimo, upon the draft of a Convention with Portugal, making such modifications in the Treaty of the 3rd July, 1842, for the suppression of the Slave Trade, as are requisite in consequence of the intended suppression of the Mixed Commissions established under that Treaty, he was directed to transmit to me, for my consideration, a draft of Convention revised in accordance with the suggestions contained in my report above-mentioned, and in my report on a similar draft of Convention with the United States; and Mr. Otway was pleased to state that your Lordship would be glad to receive my opinion thereupon.

Mr. Otway also stated that the draft has been prepared upon the principle of altering the Treaty of 1842 no further than is absolutely necessary for the precise object in view, and that for this reason no attempt has been made to improve the instructions to the Commanders of ships of war. Nor has it been thought desirable expressly to cancel the Annex C to the Treaty of 1842, which contains regulations in respect to the treatment of liberated negroes. That, so far as these regulations depend upon the existence of the Mixed Commissions, they will fall to the ground with the Commissions. That in other respects (if any), there seems no harm in their remaining unrepealed, and at all events your Lordship thinks it may be left to the Portuguese Government to propose their repeal, if it thinks fit to do so. That the same doubt occurs with regard to the concluding phrase of Article IV of the Treaty of 1842, as with regard to the corresponding Article of the Treaty with the United States of 1862, referred to in Mr. Otway's letter of the 19th instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the scope of this Convention appears to be very similar to that of the Convention with the United States, as regards the alternative provision for delivering over detained vessels to cruizers of their own nationality, but the draft supplies no instructions for such cases. The omission would be immaterial, if the instructions of either Government to its own cruizers were confidential, as further instructions might be supplied, if found necessary; but the instructions are declared to be an integral part of the Treaty, and it would hardly be safe in my opinion to provide for cases where the detained vessels are sent in for adjudication, and to make no provision for cases where they are handed over to cruizers of their own nationality, or are discharged as unseaworthy.

I have suggested a few verbal or formal amendments in the margin of the draft, but have refrained from making any substantial addition to the instructions until I should hear further, in deference to your Lordship's wish that the instructions should be altered as slightly as possible.

Temple, February 5, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that, with reference to my report of the 22nd ultimo upon the draft of a Convention with Portugal for making such modifications in the Treaties for the suppression of the Slave Trade as will be required by the contemplated discontinuance of the Mixed Commissions established under that Treaty, he was directed to state to me that your Lordship has made in the draft Convention some alterations corresponding to those which I have recommended in the draft of a similar Convention with the United States; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would once more examine the draft Convention with Portugal in connection with the observations contained in his other letter of the 31st ultimo relative to the draft Convention with the United States, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the same question arises in this Treaty as in the Treaty with the United States, in connection with the new provision that the detained vessel may be handed over at sea to a cruizer of her own nationality. If she is to be considered thenceforth in charge of the cruizer, and its Government is to be responsible for bringing the vessel to adjudication, there will be no necessity for the proposed addition to Article III, which has been made at my suggestion; but it should not be overlooked that her own Government will have no interest in justifying the seizure of the vessel, and unless the seizure should be justified, damages may be given against the seizors. Under the former Treaty the seizors kept their hands upon the vessel and delivered her up, with her papers, into Court, and they had perfect security that a proper trial would be held, and their seizure of the vessel justified as far as evidence could do so. Under the proposed Convention, as the seizure is to be adjudicated upon by the Courts of the country to which the vessel belongs, and as the commander of the cruizer, to which she may be given up, will have no personal interest in the adjudication, it may well deserve consideration whether the interests of the seizors will be sufficiently protected, unless the charge of the vessel, until she is brought to adjudication, should continue in their hands.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Charles Spring Rice's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at St. Michael's asking for information as to the validity of certain marriages performed at the British Consular chapel at that place under the circumstances therein stated, and soliciting that if necessary an Act of Parliament might be passed to render them valid; and he was to request that we would take Mr. Monson's despatch into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which it would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to pursue in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

The Queen's Advocate to Mr. Otway.—(Received July 4.)

Temple, June 30, 1870.

Sir,

I AM honoured with your letter of the 29th instant, stating that you were directed by the Secretary of State to submit to me the inclosed draft of a letter which he proposes to address to the Admiralty under the following circumstances:—

That an arrangement has recently been entered into with the Portuguese Government for the abolition of the Mixed Courts established under the Slave Trade Treaty between Great Britain and Portugal of 1842, and a Convention, of which a draft is inclosed, is now under the consideration of the Portuguese Government. That pending its conclusion, however, the two Governments have, as I should perceive from the inclosed correspondence, mutually agreed that the Mixed Commission Courts shall be suspended after the 30th of this month, whether or not the proposed Convention is signed by that time, and that these Courts will from that date cease to entertain Slave Trade cases. That a question, therefore, arises as to the mode of dealing with captured slavers during the continuance of this temporary arrangement, as the Act 6 and 7 Vic., c. 53, which applies to the disposal of such prizes, distinctly directs that they shall be conveyed before the Mixed Commission Courts for adjudication. That the Secretary of State apprehends that, when the Convention is signed and ratified, there will be no difficulty in carrying it into effect by means of an Act of Parliament, and that the Act might, if necessary, be made to have a retrospective effect; but that it is the period that may intervene before the Convention is signed and an Act is passed that requires to be provided for. That in the event of the proposed instructions being sent to commanders of British and Portuguese cruizers the result would be, in the case of a British ship captured for being engaged in the Slave Trade, that she would be handed over to a British authority for trial before a British Court; and in view of the law of England regarding the Slave Trade, the Secretary of State apprehends that no difficulty would arise in prosecuting the offending vessel, although the requirements of the Act 6 and 7 Vic., would not be complied with. That a captured Portuguese slaver would, in the same manner, be handed over to the nearest Portuguese authority for trial before a Portuguese Court, and that the Secretary of State apprehends that no action would stand against the British officer, who had made her over to the Portuguese, for not complying with the provisions of the above-mentioned Act, because his proceeding would be protected by the instructions of his Government, which in turn would be covered by the mutual agreement arrived at between the two Governments. That the Secretary of State would be glad, however, to be furnished with my opinion upon these points, and whether the draft instructions are right and proper, and, if not, you were to request that I would advise what steps should be taken to give effect to the provisional arrangement with Portugal.

In obedience to your commands I have the honour to report—

That as far as regards any personal responsibility of the commander of one of Her Majesty's cruizers for seizing and detaining a Portuguese vessel under the proposed new instructions, the instructions would be a protection to him, even if their propriety should be questionable so long as the Convention of 1842 is still in force, seeing that the old instructions, with which the proposed new instructions conflict, are declared by Article VIII of that Convention to form an integral part of it. I would observe that no arrangement appears to have been at present made between Her Majesty's Government and that of Portugal for the sending in of captured vessels to the nearest authority of their nation agreeably to the proposed instructions, the arrangement, as I understand it, having only regard to the abolition of the Mixed Commission Courts.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me two despatches from Her Majesty's Consul at St. Michael's, reporting certain proceedings on the part of British merchant vessels in contravention of the Queen's Proclamation of Neutrality during the present war; and to request that I would take the inclosed despatches into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Monson on the subject. That I should perceive that Mr. Monson asks that these instructions may be sent to him by telegraph, through Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon, by the steamer from that port of the 15th instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. Monson may be properly instructed to warn the master of any British steamer which may be leaving port to communicate with homeward bound Prussian merchant-vessels, that the steamer may thereby incur risk of capture by French cruizers, and that Her Majesty's Consul could not interfere to protect it. Mr. Monson may also be informed, if your Lordship pleases, that such communication on the part of the steamer would not be a breach of any British Statute, but that it would rest with the French Prize Court in each case to determine whether the circumstances under which the steamer was employed rendered her liable to condemnation, as being in the enemy's service.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received November 24.)

Temple, November 23, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter which has been received from the Post Office, requesting your Lordship to address a representation to the Portuguese Government in support of the claim of the Post Office for a certain rate of postage on letters, newspapers, and printed papers, forwarded from Lisbon to South America, and vice versâ, by the vessels of the Steam Navigation Company, with which the Post Office has lately concluded a contract for the conveyance of mails between Liverpool, Bordeaux, and Lisbon on the one side, and the ports of Rio Janeiro, Monte Video, and Valparaiso on the other. That the claim of the Post Office is founded on the XIXth Article of the Postal Convention between Great Britain and Portugal of the 6th April, 1859, of which a copy was inclosed. That I should perceive from the correspondence between the Post Office here, and the Director of the Portuguese Post Office, that the latter declined to admit the claim at first, on the ground that the Pacific Steam Navigation Company conveyed the Portuguese mails gratuitously, in consideration of certain advantages and exemptions conceded to them in the port of Lisbon. That this objection having been disposed of by the Company declining any longer to perform the service gratuitously, the Director of the Portuguese Post Office then alleged that the payment to the British Post Office is not claimable, because the Convention of April 6, 1859, applies only to "mail-packets" maintained by the British "Government," whereas the vessels of the Pacific Company do not receive a fixed annual subsidy from the British Post Office, but are paid according to the weight of letters and newspapers they convey, and therefore do not come within the terms "mail-packets maintained by the British Government," used in the Convention; and Mr. Otway was pleased to state that your Lordship, before writing to Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon, in the sense desired by the Post Office, would be glad to be furnished with my opinion whether there is any weight in the objection thus raised.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the objection raised by the Director of the Portuguese Post Office is, in my opinion, of no substantial weight. There is nothing in the context of Article XVIII of the Convention which warrants the technical interpretation of the term "maintained," as contended for by the Director. The word occurs three times in the course of that Article in slightly different senses; and in the passage more especially referred to is the equivalent of the Portuguese word "estabélecidos." I am of opinion that the proper interpretation of the word "maintained" in the passage referred to, is that the communication by Post Office packets should be regularly kept up by the British Government without any expense to the Portuguese Government other than the rate of postage specified in the Convention, the arrangements under which such communication is kept up by Her Majesty's Government being entirely outside the Convention.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 9th instant, stating that the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury have applied to your Lordship to know what answer should be returned to an application from the Consul-General of the North German Confederation as to the right possessed in this country by Her Majesty's Custom-house authorities to retain possession of the books of a commercial firm suspected of an intention to defraud the Revenue; and Mr. Spring Rice was therefore directed to request that I would take the accompanying correspondence into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to what answer should be returned to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 6.)

Temple, May 6, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 22nd ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying papers respecting the claim of Mr. D. M. Stiebel, the minor son of a naturalized British subject, to be furnished with a British passport; that the case is one of a peculiar nature, as it involves the question of the nationality of the son born of a naturalized British subject in the country of his father's original allegiance; and Mr. Spring Rice was pleased to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion, both on the case generally as to the national status of a person so situated, and also as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Stiebel's present application; whether he should be granted a passport, and, if so, whether unconditionally, or with restrictions as to the countries for which it should be available, or other limitations.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think it doubtful whether this is a case which comes within the provisions of the 6th section of 7 and 8 Vict., c. 66, as regards the transmission of the rights and capacities of a natural-born British subject to the child of an alien who has been admitted to British naturalization. The 6th section of the Statute purports, in our opinion, to confer the privilege of transmitting the rights and capacities of a natural-born British subject only upon such naturalized aliens as at the time of their naturalization are resident in this country with a bonâ fide intention of settling in it, and the bona fides of their intention may, we think, be properly tested by their subsequent conduct.

In the present case, it appears that Mr. Stiebel, the father, almost immediately upon his obtaining his certificate of British naturalization, went back to his native city of Frankfort, where he married a native lady, and has ever since continued to reside there with his family. Mr. Daniel N. Stiebel, who now applies to your Lordship to be admitted to certain privileges of a natural-born British subject, is the second child of this marriage, and was born at Frankfort in 1853. Under these circumstances, we think it at least doubtful whether the condition of residence with a bonâ fide intention to settle in this country, as required by the Statute, was satisfied by Mr. Stiebel, the father, so as to entitle him to a certificate of naturalization. But, assuming him to be so entitled, and giving full effect to the certificate, we agree with Lord Tenterden that it has not the effect of protecting Mr. Stiebel's son against the country of his native allegiance. Under all the circumstances, and having regard to the change about to be effected by the Naturalization Bill, we think that your Lordship would be justified in refusing a passport; but that, if it be granted, it should be subject to the conditions suggested by Lord Tenterden, and that an answer explaining this should be sent to Mr. Stiebel.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to state to us that your Lordship has received a representation from the Prussian Ambassador, saying that it is of the utmost importance to the North German Government that the inhabitants of Heligoland should not be allowed to do pilot service to any but English ships of war, and requesting that Her Majesty's Government would give orders accordingly as soon as possible to the Governor of Heligoland; and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take this matter into our consideration, and report to your Lordship what course should be taken by Her Majesty's Government in regard to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Prussian claim that "the inhabitants of Heligoland should not be allowed to do pilot service to any but English ships of war" is too wide, but if it be restricted to "ships of war of either belligerent" it may, in our opinion, be admitted; and the Governor of Heligoland may be properly directed to forbid the inhabitants to act as pilots "for the ships of war of either belligerent," and to enforce the prohibition by all lawful means at his command.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating that with reference to his letter of the 23rd instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a translation of a letter from the Prussian Ambassador, calling attention to the employment of colliers from Newcastle in conveying coals to the French fleet, and he was to request that we would take the same into immediate consideration, together with the letter on the same subject now before us, and report our opinion on both at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion Count Bernstorff should be informed that Her Majesty's Government do not undertake to prevent the export of arms or munitions of war to either belligerent, and that the Queen's Proclamation does no more than warn Her Majesty's subjects of the risk of hostile capture, which they run if they engage in contraband adventures. He should be reminded that in this Her Majesty's Government are but pursuing the same course which they took during the American war, and the continental wars of 1859 and 1866, at the outbreak of each of which Proclamations similar to the present were issued.

That if, however, it were clearly shown to Her Majesty's Government that any ships were chartered by or for the French Government, to be employed in their service as store-ships, different considerations might arise.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to submit to us an accompanying note from Count Bernstorff, suggesting, as a precaution against coal being exported from this country for the supply of the French fleet, by means of ships clearing with a colourable destination for a neutral port, that the masters or owners of ships freighted with coal for German or Baltic ports should be bound to deposit at the Custom-house of the port of egress, before clearing outwards, a bond for double the value of the cargo, which bond should not be returned until proof had been brought from the Consul at the port of delivery or otherwise that the cargo had been duly delivered at the port for which the ship cleared.

And Mr. Otway was pleased to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on this suggestion, and that we would do so with the least possible delay, as Count Bernstorff had called attention to the large number of colliers now about to leave Newcastle, avowedly for Danish ports.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion Count Bernstorff should be informed that Her Majesty's Government have no power by the law of this country to comply with his request, which would entail an interference with trade such as no neutral country can be called upon to undertake, and which this country has never undertaken.

That no more can be done than to stop such vessels as may be shown by some evidence to be transports or store-ships in the French naval service, or destined to become such, and possibly to prosecute criminally persons who despatch such vessels upon false pretences.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received August 22.)

Temple, August 22, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that I was aware that by the Treaties of 1839 and 1867 the neutrality of Belgium and that of Luxemburg are respectively guaranteed by England, Austria, France, Prussia, and Russia.

That the Prussian Embassy last night communicated to the Foreign Office a telegram from the Ministry for Foreign Affairs at Berlin, dated August 20, 8·22 A.M., of which the following is a translation:—

"So very great numbers of wounded have been announced from Saarlouis that great difficulties, perhaps calamities, may ensue. It would be very important if the greater part of the wounded could be transported from Saarlouis, viâ Luxemburg, to Aix-la-Chapelle.

"Between Couz and Wasserbillig, it is true, the railroad is interrupted, but it might easily be restored, or the communication might be effected through waggons. We have inquired at Brussels and at Luxemburg whether this would be considered compatible with neutrality, but we wish to know also the opinion of the British Government."

The transport thus proposed to be effected, and which would doubtless include wounded French prisoners as well as Prussian wounded, would be almost entirely through neutral territory; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would consider this matter, and at my earliest convenience inform your Lordship whether such a measure, if allowed by the Belgian and Luxemburg Governments, could be carried out consistently with the guarantees given by the five Great Powers, two of whom in the present case are belligerents, of the neutrality of those countries.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that it would not be consistent with the letter of the Treaty of London, which guarantees the territorial neutrality of Luxemburg, for the Prussian Government to transport its own wounded soldiers and its wounded French prisoners across the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg to Aix-la-Chapelle, even with the consent of the Grand Duke. It is true that the concession of such transit would be an act of humanity on the part of the Grand Duke; but, at the same time, it is calculated to relieve the Prussian Government from one of the great embarrassments which usually attend a state of war, and the pressure of which is already severely felt by it. I do not think that the circumstance of wounded French prisoners sharing the benefit of the transport with wounded Prussians alters the aspect of the question.

At the same time, I think that it would be in accordance with the spirit of the Treaty of Geneva, that the transport of wounded belligerents across territory which is neutralized by Convention, should be held to be consistent with its neutral character; but before such an interpretation can be put upon the neutrality of the Grand Duchy, as guaranteed by the five Powers, the consent of all the Parties to the Treaty must, in my opinion, be obtained.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us two letters containing applications from British subjects to be permitted to enter the Prussian service as surgeons,* one of the applicants wishing to be attached to field hospitals and the other to confine his services to towns; and to request that we would state whether, in our opinion, such permission could be given consistently with the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, and of the Proclamation of Neutrality; whether, in such case, any distinction should be made between service in the field and in stationary hospitals; and, finally, if we are of opinion that the permission can be given, in what form it should be granted, whether by a notification or by special license to each applicant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that Mr. Parker would contravene the Neutrality Act, 1870, by entering the Prussian service as a field hospital surgeon without Her Majesty's license, but, as such service in the field is invested by an European Convention with the character of neutrality, we think that Her Majesty may accede to Mr. Parker's request consistently with Her Majesty's Proclamation of Neutrality.

The permission should be given under the form of a special license to Mr. Parker, and not under a general notification.

Mr. Scott's intended avocation would not, in our opinion, necessarily involve a violation of the Statute, but as he might unintentionally violate it, we think it would be safer for him to have Her Majesty's license, which should be granted to him in a special form.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of to-day, stating that on Sunday last he submitted to the Queen's Advocate a question which had arisen on a telegram communicated to him (Mr. Hammond) by the Prussian Embassy, and the words of which were stated in the Queen's Advocate's report sent therewith.

That, in the course of the afternoon of that day, and before the Queen's Advocate's report was received, the inclosed telegram had been sent to Paris for communication to the French Government, which had since distinctly refused its assent to the proposal of the Prussian Government. But the Prussian Government, it appeared, had, in the interval, obtained the permission of the Belgian and Grand Ducal Governments to transport their wounded, it was not clear whether both Prussian and French or only Prussian, through their territories, which, having come to the knowledge of the French Government, they protested against the proceeding as a breach of the neutrality of those countries, and your Lordship had heard that the Belgian Government had withdrawn their permission, as the Luxembourg Government would also doubtless do.

And that your Lordship nevertheless desired him to request our opinion whether the entrance into a neutral country of unarmed wounded Germans would be inconsistent with neutrality; and this opinion your Lordship would be glad to receive from us at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That however painful it may be towards the wounded in war to give such an opinion, we are bound to say that we concur in the report of the Queen's Advocate of the 22nd of this month, which we think perfectly correct, and which we are unable to qualify.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from the North German Ambassador complaining that the French fleet and store-ships were allowed to frequent the waters of Heligoland; and a letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a telegram from the Governor of Heligoland, denying that the French men-of-war or transports find shelter in British waters, but admitting that French freight ships come within them occasionally, and pass the night under the shelter of the land, departing in the morning; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request our opinion on this statement, with reference to the rules laid down in your Lordship's letter of July 19, therewith inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there does not appear to us to be any reason for questioning the perfect accuracy, in point of fact, of the telegraphic despatch of the Governor of Heligoland, and, assuming its accuracy, we are of opinion that your Lordship's directions of July 19, 1870, have not been infringed by anything which the Governor of Heligoland reports to have been done by French vessels.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a Memorandum which had been communicated by Count Bernstorff, complaining that the course adopted by Great Britain in permitting the export to France of arms and war material is inconsistent with an attitude of benevolent neutrality towards Prussia, and urging that no parallel can be drawn between the supply of war material to Russia by Prussia during the Crimean war, and the exports now said to be made from this country to France; and further stating that Mr. Otway was to inclose translation of two notes from Count Bernstorff, giving detailed particulars respecting the persons by whom, and the mode in which, arms and ammunition are sent to France, and calling upon Her Majesty's Government to take immediate steps to stop further exports, and that he was to request that we would take the papers into our immediate consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the nature of the reply which should be made to Count Bernstorff's representations.

We are also honoured with your commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us copy of a further note from Count Bernstorff, giving fresh details respecting the exports of war material to France, and requesting that orders may be given at the Custom-houses of the United Kingdom to stop the articles which he designates; and that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration with those already sent to us.

Lehran and Co. to make shipments of arms for France from Folkestone in cases described as containing "hardware;" and that he was to request that we would take that letter into our consideration, and report to your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, whether any, and if so, what steps should be taken in the matter by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these matters into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, with respect to the details of supposed exports of arms and ammunition sent to your Lordship by Count Bernstorff, and as to which we understand it to be very doubtful whether Count Bernstorff has not been greatly misinformed, we are not in a position to express any opinion as to the matters of fact.

With regard to the questions of international law raised by his memorandum, we have to observe that we cannot assent to the justice of Count Bernstorff's distinction between a benevolent neutrality and a neutrality which is not so.

A nation is either belligerent or neutral, and, if neutral, is bound not to concern itself with or to express any opinion as a nation on the justice or injustice of the war, but to conduct itself with strict impartiality between the two contending parties.

Neither can we admit the soundness of Count Bernstorff's contention that the rules of international law must be changed according to the severity with which they may affect the interests of particular nations. Such a contention, we think, to be clearly inadmissible.

He is also not founded in his statement that the executive can or that it was ever contended that the executive could prohibit the export of contraband of war as such.

If the subject-matter of his memorandum were one of first impression, it is possible that many arguments might be adduced on either side. But it is not so, and your Lordship might tell Count Bernstorff, if you think proper, that there is nothing in the law of nations warranting you in going further than you have gone already; that there is, on the contrary, the clearest and most unbroken precedent and authority, foreign as well as English, for the course which this country has pursued; and that it is not possible, even if it were desirable, for this country alone to alter the hitherto received rules, by which the rights and duties of neutrals are defined and regulated, and which we have carefully observed—rules acknowledged and sanctioned by Prussia herself both in her Treaties with the United States of 1799 and 1828 and in her own conduct, as your Lordship has already pointed out and Count Bernstorff hardly disputes, during the Crimean war.

It may be further observed that both belligerents entered upon the war with a full knowledge of the rules of international law, and of what has been the uniform practice of this country.

Each belligerent therefore had a right to expect that the existing rules and former practice would be maintained, and either belligerent might with some reason complain of any change of rule or alteration of practice by this country while the war continues.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 28th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Home Office, inclosing a correspondence which has passed between the North German Consul at Liverpool and the Mayor of that town, in which the former requested that the manager of the powder magazines might be instructed to recall his refusal to give up the name of the vessel that had shipped cartridges for Spain, and that the latter replied by declining to interfere in the matter; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether the authorities at Liverpool acted rightly in refusing to assist the Consul in the prosecution of his inquiries.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am unable to understand precisely upon what grounds the North German Consul at Liverpool made his application to the Mayor of that town. The Consul in his letter to the Mayor speaks of Mr. John Earle, to whom he made his application, and whom he describes as the manager of the powder magazines, as being the servant of the Mayor, whilst the Mayor states that the magazines and their contents are the property of private owners who have the sole management of them. If the Mayor's account of the magazines is correct, I think he had no authority to call upon the owner's servant to make any declaration. At the same time I think it would be desirable for the Treasury to obtain further information as to the usual mode of proceeding in the matter of shipping from the magazines powder or cartridges on board outward bound vessels, and to make inquiry whether the Custom-house authorities have ground for believing that there have been any fraudulent shipments of ammunition ostensibly for Spain.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 10th instant, stating that on the 26th October, 1869, the Law Officers reported to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs their opinion that Her Majesty's Government could not properly reject the contributions towards a British Consular Church Fund, or decline to grant the equivalent of the sums subscribed by the children of natural born British subjects born and resident in foreign countries, although such persons might be considered by the local authorities as subjects or citizens of the countries in which they resided; that in transmitting a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Hamburgh bearing on this subject, he was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to what effect the new Naturalization Law may have in regard to the right of persons belonging to the above-mentioned category to contribute to the British funds at places where Consular chaplains are maintained.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received October 15,)

Temple, October 14, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with any observations which we might have to make upon the inclosed note, in which Count Bernstorff replied to the observations made by your Lordship in your note of the 15th ultimo upon the position of England as a neutral in the present war.

Inclosed was a copy of that note and of the Memorandum communicated on the 1st ultimo by Count Bernstorff, to which it was a reply.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we have in the first place to observe that Count Bernstorff refers to the cases of the "Hypatia" and "Norseman," which he had not included in the catalogue of grievances set forth in his former despatch, and alleges that "a twofold violation of the international law and the English law had been clearly established."

This statement is based on a complete misapprehension of both international and English law. The former Foreign Enlistment Act of England and that of America were based upon the principle that a belligerent should not be allowed to use neutral territory for hostile operations, and they accordingly prohibited the arming or equipping ships of war, transports, or store-ships for belligerent purposes on neutral ground. As far as we are aware, no other country has given effect to this principle by similar legislation.

The Foreign Enlistment Act of the last Session went further, and prohibited the mere dispatching of a vessel with intent that she should be used in the service of a belligerent, but Her Majesty's Government expressly stated that in proposing this provision they were going beyond any duty cast upon neutrals by international law. This statement was supported by the opinion of the highest authorities in both Houses of Parliament, as it is by all text writers of mark on international law, and was controverted by nobody. There is no pretence that either of these vessels was "equipped" for belligerent service in this country, and, therefore, no obligation by international law or by the former Foreign Enlistment Act to detain them; the allegations of their sale to French owners are wholly immaterial.

Count Bernstorff's complaint, therefore, as to the matter itself, and his apparent imputation of something like breach of faith on the part of your Lordship and of Her Majesty's Government, admit of the same answer. The communication from your Lordship, whatever it amounted to, took place after the new Foreign Enlistment Act came into operation, and must be interpreted with reference to that Act. Now that Act, as we have already explained, had no application to the "Hypatia" or the "Norseman." It became law on the 9th August, and neither it, nor anything said in respect of what the Government would do under it, could by possibility have any reference to vessels which had left England in July, and which, therefore, would not be affected by that Act.

The observation that both vessels had sailed under the British flag after the conclusion of the sale has not been established by evidence. Her Majesty's Government has reason to suppose that the sale took place after the vessels' arrival at Cherbourg, and if the transfer to French owners had not been entered in the ship's books up to 8th August, the presumption from that fact would be that the sale had not at that time been completed. With regard to Count Bernstorff's remark that remonstrances about coal, &c., had remained without any practical result, Her Majesty's Government has reason to believe that no British vessels have supplied coals directly from British ports to French vessels. Count Bernstorff in one paragraph of his despatch states that difference between himself and your Lordship is one of "policy," if that be so, the matter would seem one solely for the consideration of Her Majesty's Government. But he subsequently rests his case on strict right, on which he is entitled to insist by what he calls the rules of international law, and this right is to require a neutral to prevent the exportation of contraband of war. He observes "the present controversy simply centres in the question whether the refusal of Her Majesty's Government to prohibit the export of arms is not at variance with the still unaltered general rules of international law regarding the duties of neutrals towards belligerents and with the laws of this country not yet repealed by the Legislature for the better fulfilment of those duties." No such general rule is laid down by any writer of authority on international law; but the contrary is asserted by all those to whom reference is usually made; and so far from its being true that such a provision is to be found in the laws passed by the Parliament of this country for the better fulfilment of our duty as neutrals, Count Bernstorff must be well aware that during the progress of the Act of last session, passed with this object, such a provision was proposed in the House of Commons, and negatived by an overwhelming majority.

Your Lordship will have no difficulty in dealing with the Minute of Mr. Trevelyan in 1848, whereby an exceptional course was taken in consequence of Treaties between ourselves and Denmark, nor with the Memorandum—not the letter as Count Bernstorff calls it—of the Duke of Wellington in 1825, which was not acted upon. We observe that Count Bernstorff makes no reference to the Treaties between Prussia and America whereby the rule of international law insisted upon by Her Majesty's Government is recognized, to the provisions of which your Lordship may think it right pointedly to call his attention. The provisions to which we refer will be found in Article XIII of the Treaty of 1785, and were renewed in 1799, and again in 1828.

We have suggested before that it may deserve consideration whether an agreement may hereafter be come to among the most powerful nations to extend the duty of neutrals to the prohibition of the export of arms; but we observe that Count Bernstorff expressly "abstains from entering upon that question," and prefers to rest his case solely on what he asserts to be the existing rule of international law.

It occurs to us further to observe that the clause in the Customs Consolidation Act to which he refers does not empower the Queen in Council to prohibit the export of contraband of war, at least eo nomine; but your Lordship will judge whether it is worth while to refer to this distinction. This clause in the statute was not, as Count Bernstorff assumes, passed for the purpose of enabling us to preserve our neutrality, but simply for our own protection in the case of being ourselves at war, or threatened with war, and it seems upon the whole to be the better opinion that if Her Majesty's Government desired to enforce the clause by Order in Council the prohibition must be general and not limited to belligerent countries only.

In our view the real purport of Count Bernstorff's despatch, stripped of all disguise, is an attempt to induce this country to adopt a new rule of conduct, because the rule prescribed by all writers of authority, and by the practice of nations, including that of Prussia herself, happens in the circumstances of this war to be more favourable to France than to Prussia. He requires us to neutralize as far as in us lies the advantages which France possesses by her superiority at sea. This would not be neutrality, but co-operation with Prussia.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me therewith a translation of a note from the Prussian Ambassador at this Court, requesting that Her Majesty's Government will take steps to procure restitution of the German vessel

1870

"Frei," which, according to the declaration of the British pilot, William Denniss, inclosed by Count Bernstorff, was captured on the 28th ultimo by the French vessel of war "Dessaix" while in British waters; and Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my immediate consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course to be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it will be proper, under the circumstances stated in the affidavit of the pilot Denniss, for Her Majesty's Ambassador at Tours to direct a claim to be given in before the Prize Court at Tours for the restitution of the "Frei" and her cargo, as having been captured within neutral waters, and as it appears that the captors were warned by the pilot at the time of the capture, which took place at 5 P.M., of the locality being within neutral jurisdiction, and their attention was called to the bearing and distance of Dungeness Light in proof of his assertion, it is a case in which costs and damages may, in my opinion, be properly awarded by the Prize Court.

No. 213.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received November 10.)

Temple, November 10, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the inclosed papers relating to the case of Mr. Worth, a British subject, who appears to have been captured at Verdun in an attempt to escape from Paris by a balloon, and to have been sent to Versailles, where it is believed that he is being tried by court martial; and Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship at my earliest convenience with my opinion whether Mr. Worth had, by his attempt to escape across the Prussian lines of investment, rendered himself liable to punishment according to military and international usage, and whether it is a case in which Her Majesty's Government can properly interfere to obtain his release.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it would be, in my opinion, an abuse of belligerent right on the part of the German Military authorities if they were to send Mr. Worth for trial before a belligerent court martial. I assume, upon the representation of the friends of Mr. Worth, that he has not compromised his character as a non-combatant, and that he accompanied the French courier in the balloon for no other purpose than to effect his escape from the seat of war. Under such circumstances, bearing in mind that the balloon was captured far beyond the German lines of circumvallation round Paris, I do not consider that the German military authorities would be justified in treating Mr. Worth as a neutral subject captured in an attempt to break through the German lines.

If he had been so captured he might properly have been treated as a prisoner of war, but he had, in fact, accomplished his escape beyond the lines, and he was not taken in arms. It is possible that the German military authorities may have resolved to send the case before a Military Court, constituted on principles analogous to those of a Maritime Prize Court, for the purpose of holding an inquest upon the capture of the balloon, and as the French have adopted a novel use of balloons, and they are employed partly for purposes undoubtedly belligerent, it may be equally in the interest of the captured and the captors that there should be a judicial inquiry in every case of capture, with a view to ascertain whether all the parties captured can be justly regarded as engaged in promoting the objects of the war in the interest of the enemy. I think, therefore, that your Lordship could not reasonably object to Mr. Worth being sent before a Military Court of Inquiry for such a purpose. At the same time it appears to me that it would be both just and reasonable that neutral foreigners who have escaped in an enemy's balloon from a besieged city should not be in a worse position than neutral passengers on board of an enemy's ship which has broken a blockade by egress, and has been captured with enemy's despatches on board.

With regard to the question more immediately raised in Mr. Odo Russell's letter as to the military and international usage in cases where parties have escaped from a besieged city across the lines of investment, I believe that I am correct in advising your Lordship that in cases where an enemy's courier has succeeded in passing the belligerent lines with despatches in a carriage large enough to carry passengers, and where neutral subjects have accompanied him as passengers, with the single object of escaping from the besieged city, such passengers would not be treated as prisoners of war, however severe might be the penalty inflicted on the enemy's courier.

I had written the above when the public correspondence from Versailles, of a date later than the journal which Mr. Odo Russell had forwarded to me, announced that the captives were to be sent before a Council of War. This, I apprehend, would be a very different body from a court martial, and will, I presume, be effectively a Military Court of Inquiry. I do not think your Lordship can well object to Mr. Worth being sent before such a Council to satisfy the German military authorities that he is entitled to the immunity of a non-combatant, but your Lordship will, in my opinion, be justified in opening a diplomatic communication on the subject, and expressing a hope that Mr. Worth may be released as soon as the necessary inquiry is terminated.

I have, &c.

(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

P.S.—Mr. Odo Russell's letter of this day's date had arrived since I had prepared the above report. It announces that Mr. Worth is to be sent to Prussia with the other captives. It may be reasonable, indeed, that Mr. Worth should suffer some detention at the hands of the Prussian authorities, in order that he may not be able to disclose any discovery which he may have made in passing over the German lines. I think your Lordship may intercede so far with the Prussian authorities as to express a hope that they will be content to detain him in France if he is able to satisfy them that he was a bonâ fide passenger without any unneutral object in view.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received November 14.)

Temple, November 14, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 12th instant, stating that, with reference to my letter of the 9th instant, relative to the alleged capture of the German vessel "Frei" by the French man-of-war "Dessaix," in British waters, he was directed to transmit to me a draft of a despatch which has been addressed to Lord Lyons in conformity with my recommendation. The draft of a further despatch which it is proposed to address to his Excellency instructing him to call the attention of the French Government to the facts of the case, was also inclosed, and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether such a representation as is contemplated by the draft would, under the circumstances, be fit and proper. A copy of a telegram received from Lord Lyons on the subject, together with the substance of your Lordship's reply thereto, was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report—

That it would be premature, in my opinion, for your Lordship to direct Lord Lyons to make such a representation to the French Provisional Government as is contemplated in the draft despatch. Your Lordship is entitled, upon the affidavit of the pilot Denniss, to assume that there is a primâ facie case, warranting Her Majesty's Government in claiming the restitution of the "Frei" by Decree of the Prize Court, on the suggestion that the capture was made within British waters, and Lord Lyons has been accordingly instructed to prefer such a claim on the part of Her Majesty's Government. The question now awaits the judicial decision of the Prize Court upon the evidence which may be brought before it, whether to confirm or rebut the claim. I observe that a Provisional Prize Court has been constituted at Tours by the Provisional Government since I had the honour to report to your Lordship upon the question of procuring the release of British cargoes captured in German vessels, and I see no objection to Lords Lyons being instructed to draw the attention of the Provisional Government officiously to the fact that your Lordship has instructed him to prefer "a claim of territory" before the Provisional Prize Court in the case of the German vessel "Frei," captured by the French cruizer "Dessaix," and to express a hope that there will be as little delay as possible on the part of the Court in proceeding to hear the claim.

I have used the term "officiously" inasmuch as I think it would not be proper for your Lordship to intervene officially pending the proceedings before the Prize Court, except your Lordship should be under the apprehension that the Prize Court would not do justice in the matter. Whether any official communication should be made by Lord Lyons after the decision of the Prize Court, if it should hold the claim of territory to be established, will be a matter of some delicacy, depending somewhat on the course which the Court itself may take on the question of costs and damages in connection with the suggestion that the captor erred wilfully and not through ignorance. Under the circumstances, I have refrained from making any special report on the contents of the proposed draft despatch.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Hamburgh requesting to be informed what steps he should take with respect to protests noted by masters of British vessels, which have suffered detention owing to the stoppage of the Elbe navigation by the German authorities, and he was to request that I would take this despatch into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Annesley on this subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Consul may properly be instructed to take no official steps as regards the protests noted by masters of British vessels which have been, or may be, detained in the Elbe, further than by recording them in the ordinary manner as documents which may be required in evidence for civil purposes.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received November 21.)

My Lord, Temple, November 19, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Hamburgh, reporting that the British steamer "Fulmar," of Middlesborough, was fired at by a Prussian gun-boat on the 10th instant on leaving Cuxhaven, and forced to return to that port. A letter with its inclosure from Messrs. Harris and Co., the owners of the above-mentioned steamer, containing details of the transaction, and putting forth a claim for compensation on account of losses occasioned by the delay was also inclosed; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and furnish your Lordship, at my early convenience, with my opinion as to whether any, and what, steps should be taken by Her Majesty's Government in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the "Fulmar" appears, from the protest of her master, to have been within the waters of the Elbe, and subject to the jurisdiction of the North German Confederation, when she was brought-to by the Prussian gun-boat, and compelled to return to Cuxhaven. It is not, therefore, a case of a belligerent Power interfering with the navigation of the high seas by a neutral vessel, but of a belligerent Power regulating the navigation of its own river with a view to its own security against the enemy, which Her Majesty's Consul asserts to be meditating a descent upon the German coast. I consider that this is not a case in which the owner of the "Fulmar" is entitled to claim any compensation from the Prussian Government for the detention of his vessel. The Prussian Government has a perfect right to close the navigation of its own rivers for its own security.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to Earl Granville.—(Received November 22.)

My Lord, Temple, November 22, 1870.

WE are honoured with your commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 19th instant, stating that, by your Lordship's direction, he transmitted to us the correspondence marked in the margin, of such letter relative to the case of Mr. Worth, a British subject, who left Paris in a balloon and was captured at Verdun and sent to the Prussian head-quarters at Versailles; and further stating that, acting under the advice of the Queen's Advocate, Lord Granville instructed Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin on the 12th instant to express a hope that in case Mr. Worth could satisfy the Prussian authorities that he had no unneutral object in view the intention of sending him to Prussia might be abandoned, and that he would be set at liberty, if not at once, at all events after such reasonable detention as might be necessary on military considerations. That it appeared, however, from Colonel Walker's last reports, that Mr. Worth had been sent to Germany as a prisoner of war without having been subjected to any examination.

Mr. Otway requested that we would take the papers into our consideration, in communication with the Queen's Advocate, and inform your Lordship at our earliest convenience whether we concurred in the course hitherto pursued, and what further steps we would suggest.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration in communication with the Queen's Advocate, and have the honour to report—

That the Prussians have a right, by military law, to prohibit the departure of all persons from Paris, and any person violating this prohibition commits an offence against military law cognizable by a court martial.

The Prussians have, however, in accordance with usage, allowed egress to many Englishmen after making the inquiries necessary to ascertain that their departure covered no hostile purpose, indeed, we are not aware that they have refused any bonâ fide application on behalf of an Englishman for leave to depart.

We observed that Mr. Littlewood, in his letter of November 8, asserts that Mr. Worth was refused permission to depart from Paris. It appears, however, from Colonel Walker's letter of the same date, that Mr. Worth informed him "that he was in the first instance to have come out of Paris on the 27th with the party expected on that day, but that becoming impatient of delay he engaged a place in this balloon for which he paid 100*l*." From this we are disposed to infer that Mr. Worth, having paid for his place in the balloon, preferred going in it to leaving Paris as his fellow countrymen did. We certainly do not infer that if he had had a little patience his departure would have been prohibited.

We further observe that although in his letter to his mother he stated that none of the passengers "had a political mission," it appears by a letter dated Epernay, November 2, addressed to Colonel Lindsay by some person who conversed with Mr. Worth that Mr. Worth said "in his opinion one man was on a political mission in the balloon."

We further observe that papers were taken from Mr. Worth, which, indeed, he alleges to be private, and are in the hands of the German authorities. Under these circumstances we are unable to concur with the Queen's Advocate "that it would be an abuse of belligerent rights on the part of the German military authorities if they were to send Mr. Worth for trial before a 'belligerent court martial.'"

This immunity of Mr. Worth from trial by court martial we understand the Queen's Advocate to rest upon two assumptions.

1. That Mr. Worth was captured beyond the Prussian lines immediately surrounding Paris.

2. That "he had not compromised his character as a non-combatant, and that he accompanied the French courier in the balloon for no other purpose than to effect his escape."

Even if the doctrine were admitted that a beseiging army may not try by court martial an escaping non-combatant if they capture him beyond their lines, whereas if they capture him within their lines they may (a doctrine which we fear it would be somewhat difficult to induce belligerents to apply to travellers by balloon), it does not appear to us that Her Majesty's Government are entitled to assume the entire accuracy of Mr. Worth's statements as against the Prussian authorities so far as to deny their right to try him by court martial.

His leaving Paris under such circumstances and in such company may, we think, reasonably be regarded by them as suspicious; the contents of the documents found upon him and upon his fellow travellers are known to them, not to us, and it appears very difficult to pronounce decidedly on the case without any acquaintance with those documents.

On the whole we do not advise that the right of the Prussians should be questioned to try Mr. Worth by court martial if they think fit as distinguished from a "Military Court of Inquiry," but we think that friendly representations such as those of Lord Augustus Loftus may be fairly made in his behalf.

We think it right to add that several of the papers now before us were not before the Queen's Advocate, and we think it not improbable that those papers might have modified his opinion.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received November 30.)

My Lord, Temple, November 29, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 28th November instant, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us by the direction of your Lordship a translation of a note from the Prussian Ambassador at this Court, stating that the steam vessel "Vigilant" is regularly employed in weekly voyages from Poplar to Cherbourg laden with arms and munitions of war, and requesting that immediate proceedings may be taken against her, as coming within the character of a belligerent store-ship; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that we would favour your Lordship with our early opinion whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified by the circumstances in taking any proceeding in the matter under the Foreign Enlistment Act.

Mr. Otway was pleased to add that the note to Count Bernstorff of the 26th July last, and our letter of the 25th of the same month, on which it was founded, were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think that, as the case now stands, there is not a sufficient case for a prosecution under the Foreign Enlistment Act. We suggest that Count Bernstorff may be informed that, if Her Majesty's Government can be furnished with any evidence tending to connect the exportation of the munitions of war with the French Government, Her Majesty's Government will readily do their best to put the law in force against the exporters. But that, so long as the trade is really between private individuals, the mere regularity of its occurrence does not turn the ship employed in it into a store-ship, nor change the operation of the law as expressed in our letter of the 20th July, 1870.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.

---

I agree to the above report, but I think it would be safer for your Lordship, in communicating with Count Bernstorff, to guard yourself against too large a construction being put upon your words by introducing the word "directly" after "munitions of war," as an indirect connection might not be sufficient to warrant a conviction under the Foreign Enlistment Act.

I have, &c.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received December 13.)

My Lord, Temple, December 12, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 8th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Hamburgh, together with a memorandum drawn up in the Foreign Office, respecting the exemption from conscription claimed for his son by Mr. Renner, a British subject domiciled at Altona; and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be issued to Mr. Consul Annesley in this case, and also as to the course to be pursued with reference to the probable occurrence of similar cases.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that the Naturalization Act of 1870 will not warrant your Lordship in departing from the rule, laid down on various occasions by your Lordship's predecessors, that the obligations incident to the status of natural-born subjects must prevail in the case of the children of British subjects who may be born abroad and reside in the country of their birth, notwithstanding such children, in virtue of certain British Statutes, may be entitled to the privileges of British natural-born subjects within Her Majesty's dominions. It appears to me that instructions framed upon this rule may be properly given to Mr. Consul Annesley, as applicable to the present case and to similar cases.

With regard to the suggestion in Lord Tenterden's memorandum, that, in consequence of the change in our municipal law, international comity would warrant an application on your Lordship's part to foreign countries that the children of British subjects born in such countries should be allowed an option as to their nationality on their coming of age, I agree with Lord Tenterden that your Lordship will be justified in seeking to bring about a corresponding alteration in the laws of such countries, on the principle of reciprocity; but, until such alteration shall be made, I do not think your Lordship can properly ask, as a matter of comity, that the operation of the existing laws of such countries shall be suspended in the case of the children of British subjects.

Upon the further question of the Danish law of nationality being still enforced at Altona, although Sleswig-Holstein has been incorporated into the North German territory, I am unable, from want of information, to advise your Lordship whether this is an anomaly to which you would be justified in excepting. But, as regards Mr. Renner's case, the Danish law was in force when he took up his residence in Altona, and at the time when his children were born there, and he could not with any reason complain that the law of Altona has not yet been assimilated to the German law in a sense more favourable to his claim.

Temple, December 14, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 9th instant, stating that, with reference to our report of the 29th ultimo on the subject of Count Bernstorff's request that proceedings might be taken against the British steam-vessel "Vigilant," as engaged in a regular traffic of arms and munitions of war from this country to France, and thus coming within the character of a belligerent storeship, he was directed to transmit to us a translation of a further note from Count Bernstorff, contesting the reasoning on which Her Majesty's Government have declined to take proceedings under the Foreign Enlistment Act in the present state of the case, and to request that we would furnish your Lordship with any observations which might occur to us on the arguments brought forward in Count Bernstorff's note.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Count Bernstorff's despatch is in reality an argument for the interference by a neutral Power for the prevention of trade in contraband of war. For all contraband of war, if successfully carried into the belligerent ports, is intended to be, and in the vast majority of cases is, in fact, used for the benefit of the belligerent Government, into whose country the munitions of war are carried. Every merchant who freights a ship with contraband of war, knows that his goods, if they reach their destination, will be employed in all likelihood in the military or naval service of the Government, to the subjects of which he consigns them. But no proposition is better established, nor fortified by higher authority, or more varied as regards the countries of which the authorities were natives, than that there is no international obligation on a neutral Power to prohibit trade in contraband of war. Nor can it be contended seriously that a British or American merchant, who trades with French or Prussian traders in contraband of war at regular recurring intervals, becomes thereby the agent of the French or Prussian Governments, though he may be morally sure that the French or Prussian merchant would not trade with him, except for the purpose of re-selling to the French or Prussian Governments respectively; nor would the employment in this trade by a British or American merchant of the same ship at regular intervals make a ship to be a storeship either of France or of Prussia, as the case might be. This, indeed, we have already reported to your Lordship as our opinion.

The quotation of the language of the Foreign Enlistment Act is not to the point. This country has deliberately assumed, in respect of the building and dispatching of ships, responsibilities which, with equal deliberation, it has refused to assume in respect of trade in contraband of war.

If your Lordship thinks fit to inquire of our Consul at Cherbourg how and where these goods are landed and disposed of, so as to ascertain, if possible, whether the contracts with private French traders are purely colourable, and to inform Count Bernstorff that you will do so for the purpose indicated, we think your Lordship might very properly do so; but this is a matter for your Lordship's discretion rather than for us.

My Lord, Temple, December 20, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit therewith the accompanying note which had been received from the North German Ambassador at this Court, relative to the intended departure from Greenhithe to-morrow of the British vessel "International," for the purpose, it is alleged by Count Bernstorff, of laying a cable for the French Government; and he was to request that we would take the Ambassador's note into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether, supposing the facts to be correctly stated, the circumstance alluded to by Count Bernstorff would constitute a breach of neutrality; and, if so, what course Her Majesty's Government should adopt.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have taken the said letter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the employment of the "International" for the purpose mentioned in Count Bernstorff's despatch will be in violation of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870, and that your Lordship may properly issue a warrant to seize and detain that vessel.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received September 22.)

My Lord, Temple, December 21, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he transmitted to us, by your direction, a translation of a note from the North German Ambassador in London, complaining of the proceedings of the British steam-tug "Gauntlet," in towing the "Lord Brougham," a German vessel captured by a French man-of-war, from the Downs off Deal to Dunkirk; and, further, stating that he inclosed a report which had been furnished by the Board of Trade, substantiating the facts complained of, and that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether a breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act had been committed, and what course should be taken by Her Majesty's Government in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have considered this matter, and have the honour to report—

That, upon the facts stated, it appears to us that the tug "Gauntlet," in conveying a prize captured by a French cruizer to a French port under an agreement with the French Consul or with French naval officers, was engaged for the time being in the French naval service; and that, if these facts admit of proof, Mr. Mumford may be prosecuted under the 8th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act, for dispatching a ship with knowledge that it would be employed in the naval service of a belligerent.

It would be desirable to institute inquiries forthwith by what legal proof the offence can be substantiated, and if reliable evidence can be obtained, we advise that a prosecution be instituted by Her Majesty's Government.

My Lord, Temple, December 24, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of yesterday, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 20th instant, relative to the intended departure from Greenhithe of the British vessel "International," for the purpose of laying a telegraphic cable for the French Government, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a note which had since been received from Count Bernstorff, furnishing further particulars with regard to the case; and, further, stating that he was to inclose a letter from Mr. J. Hughes, M.P., forwarding a Memorial from the India-rubber, Gutta-percha, and Telegraph Works Company (Limited), accompanied by their contract with the French Government for the laying of the cable in question, and protesting against the detention of the "International;" and, further, stating that he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion as to the course to be adopted with regard to the said vessel, which, as would be perceived from the inclosed correspondence with the Treasury, was then detained by the Customs pending the preparation of a warrant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the further information furnished to us does not induce us to alter the opinion which we expressed in our former report. It is impossible seriously to doubt that the cable is to be used by the French Government for military purposes.

We advise that a warrant for the detention of the vessel be issued forthwith, and that the India-rubber, Gutta-percha, and Telegraph Works Company be informed that it is open to them to apply to the Court of Admiralty for the release of the vessel, but that Her Majesty's Government cannot undertake to release her unless the Court of Admiralty so direct.

We suggest that, as the form of warrant will require to be carefully considered, it will be desirable that the draft of it should be submitted to us.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received December 27.)

My Lord, Temple, December 27, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of yesterday, stating:—

1. That by your Lordship's direction be transmitted to us therewith an accompanying communication from Mr. Matthew Gray, General Manager of the India-rubber, Gutta-percha, and Telegraph Works Company, in reply to the letter addressed to him from the Foreign Office, stating that the "International" could not be allowed to proceed on her voyage.

2. That Mr. Gray said that the Company had decided to submit to the view of Her Majesty's Government; that they were willing to tranship and reland the cable with all possible dispatch, and, at the same time, to bind themselves not to lay or assist in laying the cable for the French Government during the continuance of the war.

3. That under those circumstances the Company submitted that, upon the cable being relanded, Her Majesty's Government might authorize the release of the ship without the matter going before the Court of Admiralty; and that Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take Mr. Gray's letter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in pursuing the course proposed by the Company.

We are also favoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's further letter of this day, stating that he was directed by your Lordship, with reference to his letter of yesterday, to transmit to us a further letter from the parties interested in the "International" and the cable that she has on board, and also a further letter from the Prussian Ambassador, and that he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, together with the letter now before us, and report to your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, our opinion as to the course to be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the vessel may be released on a bond being given to the effect suggested by Mr. Gray, and further undertaking that the vessel shall not be employed in contravention of the Foreign Enlistment Act.

We think that the warrant should be issued, because until it be issued the right of the Secretary of State to require and take security is, to say the least, doubtful.

My Lord, Temple, December 28, 1870.

WE are honoured with your commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that our report of yesterday in the case of the "International" was before your Lordship for your directions, but that he had received from your Lordship this morning a further Memorial from the Company, forwarded to you in the country, which he inclosed, together with the letters from Mr. Hughes, your Private Secretary, by which it was accompanied, and that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to whether there was anything in this further Memorial to alter our view of the case as stated in our report of the 27th instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the further Memorial, together with the letters, into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That nothing contained in the further Memorial alters the view of the case which we had the honour to express to your Lordship yesterday. The further Memorial is not in strict accordance with Mr. Gray's former letters. We advise that no permission or countenance be given to the departure of the vessel with the cable on board, nor to the delivery of the cable (which would seem under the circumstances to be "contraband of war") to the French Government. We advise that the ship be detained until a bond in the form which we suggested be given, and perhaps it would be well that before the bond be accepted, it be submitted to us for consideration.

My Lord, Temple, December 28, 1870.

WE are honoured with your commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Havre, relative to the seizure by the Pussian troops of six British vessels in the River Seine, near Duclair, where they have been scuttled and sunk, the Prussian officers in command giving the several Captains an acknowledgment for their value; and that he was further directed to inclose a letter from the Admiralty, forwarding a report to the same effect from the Commander of Her Majesty's ship "Helicon" at Havre, and to request that we would inform your Lordship what steps should, in our opinion, be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the despatch, together with the letter from the Admiralty, into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, upon the facts stated, we are of opinion that the seizure and sinking of the vessels were altogether unwarrantable, and that the firing upon them, reported by Consul Herring, unless there be circumstances which do not appear to justify or explain it, was a wanton outrage. We think that enough at present appears to justify Her Majesty's Government in addressing a remonstrance to the Prussian Government. It will, however, be desirable to obtain without delay more detailed information.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of yesterday, stating that, with reference to our letters of the 10th and 22nd November relative to the case of Mr. Worth, which were therewith inclosed for convenience of reference, he was directed by your Lordship to inform us, that you had recevied a confidential despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Darmstadt, reporting, though without attaching much credit to the statement, that Count Bismarck had told the Darmstadt Foreign Minister in conversation, that all persons picked up out of French balloons that might chance to fall within German lines would be shot as spies; and requesting that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion how far such a proceeding could be considered as justified by the general practice of nations in time of war.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have considered this matter and have the honour to report—

That of strict right all persons found within the lines of a belligerent army without a safe conduct may be condemned to death by sentence of a court-martial, as spies, but the mitigated practice of modern warfare has sanctioned a distinction between persons who are found within the lines of a belligerent army in disguise or under false pretences and persons who have entered them without any treacherous intention.

This distinction appears to be recognized in writers of authority, and we think, therefore, that Her Majesty's Government would be justified in remonstrating in the strongest terms against the suggested intention of the Prussian Government altogether to disregard it, if it be ascertained that such intention is really entertained by them.

How far, however, the application of the strict right of warfare above defined is, or is not, justifiable in a particular case, must depend entirely upon the circumstances of that case, and it is impossible for us to make our answer more definite if it is to be general.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence respecting the case of Miss Dawkins, who, together with her two friends Miss Cunliffe and Miss Greenstreet and a female servant, after having been for some time resident in Rome, had, after a domiciliary visit from the Pontifical police, received orders from the Roman authorities for their immediate departure from Rome; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether the Pope can properly claim the right to require a British subject to quit his dominions without any reason being assigned for such a summary proceeding.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the "policy" of each nation must determine whether it will permit an alien to reside within its territory, and what is called "comity" may enter into the question how such alien should be treated whilst so permitted to reside; but every Sovereign Power has a "right" to withdraw or suspend such permission without assigning any reason to the individual.

I am of opinion, therefore, that the Pope had the "right" to require the British subjects in question to quit his dominions without assigning to them any reason for such a summary proceeding.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Russell's letter of the 26th August instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Board of Trade, inclosing copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Riga, asking for instructions as to the course he should pursue in regard to the transfer to a British subject of the North German vessel "Evelina Schroeder;" and to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That without considering the question (which the words of the Act render somewhat an obscure one), what would be the duty of a Consul if either the parties to the transfer, or the ship, which is the subject of the transfer, were at the time of the transfer in the port where he is Consul, we are clearly of opinion that where neither the parties nor the ship are at the time of the transfer in the port, the Consul has no power to act under section 54 of 17 and 18 Vict., c. 104. The language of the 22nd instruction does not lead us in any way to qualify this opinion.

Damison and Sons relative to the case of the "Evelina Schroeder;" and he was to request that we would inform your Lordship whether the statements then made induced us to alter the opinion expressed in the above-mentioned report as to the course which Her Majesty's Consul should pursue with regard to the transfer of that vessel, and as to the answer which should be returned to the parties interested.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—instant respecting the case of the "Evelina Schroeder," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit therewith a further letter from the Lords of Trade, containing some remarks on the question of provisional certificates of registry; and that he was to request that we would take that paper into our consideration in connection with those on that subject already before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this paper (in connection with former papers) into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we agree with the views of the Board of Trade on the second and third questions, but we are unable to agree with the Board upon the first question.

We are of opinion that under the words of the Statute the transfer must take place when the vessel is in some foreign port, otherwise there would be no elements in the case to found the jurisdiction of any of Her Majesty's Consuls to grant a provisional certificate, that jurisdiction being expressly vested in the British Consular Officer resident in the port where the vessel becomes the property of a person qualified to become the owner of a British ship.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me two letters from the liquidator of the estate of Messrs. Borstelmann and Leib, requesting that the British Vice-Consul at Nicolaieff may be authorized to continue an embargo laid by him on a cargo of mahogany brought into the above port, pending the settlement of certain claims against a commercial house at St. Petersburgh; and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship at my earliest convenience with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am not aware of any British Statute whereby a British Consul is authorized to sequester the property of a British subject in a foreign country for a debt due from him to the estate of a creditor, whose affairs are under liquidation under the Bankruptcy Act (32 and 33 Vict., cap. 71, part vi.) If Her Majesty's Consul at Nicolaieff has any such power, it must, I conceive, be exercised under some provision of the local law with which I am not acquainted.

I venture to suggest that some inquiry may be properly made at the Board of Trade, if it is cognizant of any such practice on the part of Her Majesty's Consuls, and if so, upon what authority it rests.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr Otway's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General at Odessa, inclosing the explanation of the British Vice-Consul at Nicolaieff of his proceedings respecting a sequester, placed by him upon a certain cargo of mahogany, which has been already referred to me; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with any observations I might have to make upon the case, and more particularly upon the postcript of Mr. Vice-Consul Stevens' despatch, in which he requests to be furnished with instructions for his guidance in similar cases.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the British Vice-Consul at Nicolaieff appears to have been misled by the telegrams from England, under which he was informed that the sequester in the case of the cargo of mahogany was required by British law. Before, however, your Lordship can safely give the Vice-Consul instructions for his future guidance in the class of cases mentioned in his postscript to his letter of November 15, as he states that such cases are "of no unfrequent occurrence, and the interference of the Consul is almost always claimed," it would be in my opinion advisable that he should be requested to explain more precisely on what grounds Consular interference in such cases has been claimed, and in what manner, and especially by what legal machinery, it has been afforded. It may be very right in itself that assistance should be given by Her Majesty's Consuls to British merchants in such cases, but there may be no legal authority at present for their giving such assistance officially, and the mode in which it has been given may be one of doubtful propriety.

1. That with reference to the Law Officers' report of the 27th August, 1868, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. Scott, praying for the restitution of certain books, papers, &c., belonging to him, which were handed over to the Governor of Singapore at the time of Mr. Scott's trial, as being accessory to the loss of the vessel "Erin," of which crime he was convicted, and sentenced to a term of imprisonment, but was subsequently pardoned by the Queen.

2. That he was also to transmit to us a correspondence which had passed with the Colonial Office and Messrs. Alabaster and Kennedy, belonging to Her Majesty's Consulate in Siam, and now in this country, in regard to that matter, as well as the previous papers connected with Mr. Scott's case; and he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which should be pursued as to the disposal of the papers in question, which, as we would perceive, were at present in the custody of Her Majesty's Consul-General at Bangkok, to whom they were consigned by the Governor of Singapore.

the Colonial Office with its inclosures respecting the question of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in certain cases in Siam, and to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion on the points raised in the Colonial Office letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That the Supreme Court of Singapore, in which certain powers were vested by Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 28th July, 1856, and the Imperial Act 20 and 21 Vict., c. 75, was in our opinion the Court created by Letters Patent or Charter of the Queen, which was formally recognized by 18 and 19 Vict., ch. 93, and that it will be necessary, if it be thought desirable to transfer to the new Court created by the Legislature of the Straits Settlements the powers vested in the Supreme Court by the Order and Statute above-mentioned, to pass an Imperial Statute enacting that the said Order and Statute shall be construed to apply to the new Court. We would further observe, that if it is contemplated that the new Court shall exercise the Admiralty jurisdiction exercised under 18 and 19 Vict., ch. 93, by the Supreme Court, it will be necessary to provide by Act of Parliament for the transfer of such jurisdiction, as was done in the case of the Supreme Court itself by that Statute.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Reeeived October 25.)

My Lord, Temple, October 24, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th October instant, stating that, with reference to our report of the 23rd February on Mr. Scott's case, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous correspondence, a further letter from Messrs. Shaen and Roscoe, his solicitors, requesting to be furnished with information as to the bankruptcy jurisdiction in the Straits Settlements; and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which should be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Shaen and Roscoe should be informed that Her Majesty's Consul at Bangkok has dealt with the property of Mr. Scott as property forfeited to the Crown, and that Her Majesty's Consul has distributed such portions of the property as came into his hands, not as property belonging to Mr. Scott's estate and devisable of right amongst his creditors in virtue of a jurisdiction exercised by Her Majesty's Consular Court at Bangkok in matters of bankruptcy, but as property forfeited to Her Majesty's Crown and distributable of grace amongst Mr. Scott's creditors at the pleasure of Her Majesty and under the direction of Her Majesty's Secretary of State. That although the proceedings of the Consul may have had the appearance of proceedings in bankruptcy in consequence of Mr. Scott's agent having filed a declaration of insolvency in Her Majesty's Consular Court at Bangkok prior to the forfeiture of his estate, the distribution of the property amongst Mr. Scott's creditors was not in any way a judicial act on the part of Her Majesty's Consul, but an administrative proceeding, to authorize which no Act of Parliament or Order in Council was required, and in the investigation of which Mr. Scott has no legal interest.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 17.)

My Lord, Temple, January 15, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed to inform me that in accordance with the suggestion contained in my report of the 13th ultimo, Mr. Marcella has been called upon for explanations with regard to the passage which occurs in the second opinion of the Spanish Jurists on the case of the "Criticado," namely, "3rd. That the sentence which neither concedes nor desires the indemnity for damages claimed could not legally do so, such being foreign to the nature of the principles invoked," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter which has been received from Mr. Marcella in reply, and to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion on the case. The previous papers were also transmitted.

I am also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, transmitting a letter and its inclosures from Mr. Marcella, which was accidentally omitted to be sent in his letter of the 30th ultimo.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it would appear from the further opinion of the Spanish Jurists which Mr. Marcella has submitted to your Lordship, that it was not competent for the Court at Seville to entertain the prayer of the owners of the "Criticado" for damages. It would follow, if this opinion be correct, that the Spanish Minister of Finance was misinformed as to the powers of that Court, and did not rest his refusal in 1864 to entertain diplomatically the claim of Mr. Marcella upon solid grounds, when he asserted that the owners of the "Criticado" might have appealed to the Court of Cassation against the decision of the Court at Seville in not awarding him damages; and that as he had omitted to do so, he must be taken to have acquiesced in the decision of that Court. Whether your Lordship would think it proper to re-open the question after an interval of six years is for your Lordship's consideration. Your Lordship would, I think, in asking the Spanish Government to reconsider the grounds upon which Señor Pacheco, in 1864, declined to entertain any claim for damages, seeing that such eminent authorities on Spanish legal procedure have given so decided an opinion against the position taken up by the Spanish Minister of Finance on that occasion. I am not, however, prepared to advise your Lordship that the Spanish Government may not have other good reasons to allege for declining to entertain favourably Mr. Marcella's claim.

My Lord, Temple, January 17, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying drafts of despatches which your Lordship proposes to address to Her Majesty's Consul at Fernando Po and to Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, on a question which has arisen in the former place with regard to the administration of the estate of an intestate British subject. That these drafts, as we should perceive, are founded on a report from the Queen's Advocate, which, together with the papers submitted to him, were also inclosed, and Mr. Spring Rice was pleased to request that we would report to your Lordship whether we concur in the terms of these drafts.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 24.)

My Lord, Temple, January 24, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed to inform us that in accordance with the opinion expressed in our report of the 21st ultimo, the accompanying letter was addressed to Mr. Forbes Campbell, with reference to the offer made by the Spanish Government to place 1,500*l*. at the disposal of Her Majesty's Government for distribution amongst the crew of the steam-ship "Tornado;" he was further directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith two letters which have since been received from Mr. Forbes Campbell on the same subject, and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to them. The previous correspondence was also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Forbes Campbell should be informed that your Lordship considers that the sum of money proposed by the Government of Spain to be paid over, as pecuniary assistance to the crew of the "Tornado," should be distributed amongst the crew according to their wages, and that it is not intended by the Spanish Government that any portion of that pecuniary assistance should be distributed amongst the officers.

That Mr. Forbes Campbell, on referring to your Lordship's letter of December 23, 1869, will preceive that it was addressed to him as the representative of the crew of the "Tornado," and that he was requested in that character to state whether he is authorized on their behalf to accept or decline the proposed sum of money. That although the formal communication of the execution of a power of attorney to Mr. Forbes Campbell by the officers and crew of the "Tornado" was made to Her Majesty's Government on the 15th April, 1867, Her Majesty's Government cannot agree with him that no representation and no communication whatever was made by him before that date. On the contrary, as early as the 5th October, 1866, Mr. Forbes Campbell, in company with Mr. Isaac, one of the owners of the "Tornado," had by previous arrangement an interview with the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, that at this interview a complaint was made by Mr. Isaac and Mr. Forbes Campbell of the ill-treatment of the crew; that Lord Stanley had been already informed by the owners of the "Tornado" of the intention of Mr. Isaac and Mr. Forbes Cambpell to proceed together to Madrid on the "Tornado" business, and that both gentlemen were actually provided by Lord Stanley with a letter of introduction to the British Minister. The whole question of the date at which the representation and communication was made is further wholly collateral and irrelevant to the matters really in question.

My Lord, Temple, March 11, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Charles Spring Rice's letter of the 28th February last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, relative to a claim which had been preferred by a Mr. Saccone, agent for Messrs Bibby and Co. of Liverpool, on the Spanish Government, and

That it appeared a claim was made on the Italian ship "Elvezia" by Mr. Saccone, as agent for the owners of the steam-ship "Tiber," for services in the form of salvage, the latter ship having been employed to tow the "Elvezia" into the port of Almeria when in an alleged sinking condition, and that a dispute having arisen as to the amount of the claim, the case was referred to the Court of Almeria, by whom a decree of arrest was issued against the "Elvezia," but at the request of the Italian Minister the Spanish Government ordered the removal of the sequester from the ship, which was allowed to proceed on her voyage.

Mr. Rice was pleased also to say that in consequence of the interference of the Spanish authorities with the legal proceedings in this case, Mr. Saccone had preferred a claim against the Spanish Government for 5,000*l*., and that he was to request that we would take the correspondence into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the merits of the claim, and as to the course which should be taken in the matter by Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the correspondence into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That there is nothing to show on these papers that the Supreme Court of Granada has decreed the release of the ship "Elvezia" and her cargo, contrary to law and justice, and in consequence of improper pressure put upon the Court by the Executive Government. The Supreme Court may have been set in motion by the Executive Government, whose public officer had objected to the proceedings of the Inferior Court at Almeria, but if Mr. Layard has been correctly informed that the Superior Court made inquiry into the matter, and the result of this inquiry was that it made a judicial order overruling the decision of the Court of First Instance, your Lordship may, we think, properly decline to support the demand which Mr. Saccone has made against the Spanish Government.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 11.)

My Lord, Temple, April 10, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence as marked in the margin,* from which we would perceive that considerable embarrassment had been caused to Her Majesty's Government by the assumed necessity of selling on the spot and without delay vessels which had been seized and condemned at Nassau for breaches of the revenue laws of the colony, the result being that in the absence of competition such vessels are likely, in many instances, to be purchased by agents of the Cuban insurgents.

2. That he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government have any power of preventing or delaying the sale of such vessels.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears that the "Anna" was condemned by default at the instance of the Colonial Attorney-General, acting under the instructions of the Governor of Nassau. We are of opinion that the Court had ample discretion under the Colonial Revenue Act, 17 Vic., cap. 3, sec. 66, to comply with any prayer which the Attorney-General might have thought proper to make, with a view to defer or otherwise regulate the sale by auction of the vessel, so that she should not pass into the hands of the Cuban insurgents or their agents.

Under the peculiar circumstances of the presence of so many Cuban insurgents in the island and the frequent attempts on their part and on that of their agents to violate the Foreign Enlistment Act, we think it would be a reasonable exercise of the discretion of the Court for it to make an order, if prayed, in any similar case, that one of the conditions of the auction should be that the buyer should give security against the vessel being employed in any way contrary to the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, failing which, security being given, the sale should be avoided and the further directions of the Court taken.

My Lord, Temple, April 19, 1877.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence relative to a claim preferred by Mr. J. C. Hill against the Government of Spain on account of the Spanish authorities in Cuba having refused to allow him to land in that island; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the case into my consideration and favour your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this case into consideration and have the honour to report—

That the Spanish authorities in Cuba had a right to refuse permission to Mr. Hill, being an alien, to land in the island, and they have satisfied the requirements of international comity by stating to Her Majesty's Consul their reasons for such refusal, those reasons being that they had a bonâ fide belief that his presence would be prejudicial to the welfare of the island. As the grounds alleged by them for such belief are grounds upon which every State would be justified in acting under the circumstances in which the island was placed, I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government cannot properly interfere to procure for Mr. Hill any compensation from the Spanish authorities.

My Lord, Temple, April 29, 1870.

WE are honoured with your commands signified to us in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating:—

1st. That with reference to our report of January 24th and to previous reports upon the case of the "Tornado" he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mr. Forbes Campbell, in which he endeavoured to prove that the pursuit of the "Tornado" was planned and commenced in the port of Funchal and her seizure effected within the territorial waters of Madeira.

2nd. That he was also to inclose the draft of an answer which your Lordship proposed to return to Mr. Forbes Campbell, and was to request that we would take the same into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether there was any objection thereto.

3rd. That the previous correspondence respecting the "Tornado" was inclosed therewith.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we should suggest the omission of the passage beginning "even supposing" and ending with "the Prize Court."

It is not quite certain that the passage would be correct, if the "Tornado" were taken as a neutral carrying contraband of war. It would be correct no doubt if she were taken as an enemy's ship; but this is a matter which is in dispute, which Mr. Forbes Campbell would certainly not admit, and to assert it would lead most probably to further letters on his part. For these reasons we suggest the omission of the passage. In other respects the despatch appears to us to be perfectly proper.

My Lord, Temple, May 13, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Charles Spring Rice's letter of the 9th instant, stating—

1st. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence as marked in the margin* upon the subject of the proposed sale to the Spanish Government of the arms and other warlike stores seized on board the "Lilian," one of the vessels recently condemned at Nassau, Bahamas, for a breach of the revenue laws of the Colony; and he was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which it would be most advisable to pursue in the matter.

2nd. That the correspondence submitted to us on the 2nd ultimo, relative to the sale of the "Lilian" and other condemned vessels, together with our report thereon, and some further papers, were likewise inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That the Receiver-General is in our opinion bound by the provisions of the Bahamas Customs Law of 1850 to sell the goods seized on board the "Lilian" by public auction to the highest bidder, and that he cannot sell them by private contract at their appraised value in the manner suggested. The Court, however, may make an order, having in view the results of previous sales, that the sale in each case shall be void if the highest bidder should prove to be an agent of the insurgent Cubans, and that the goods shall not be again put up to auction without a further order from the Court.

My Lord, Temple, May 19, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Otway's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence respecting the departure from the Thames of the "Chieftain," an armed screw corvette, lately Her Majesty's ship "Mutine," which vessel was said to have been bought for the Japanese Government, but there appeared to be some suspicion of her being destined for the Cuban insurgents; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that we would take that matter into our immediate consideration, and inform your Lordship whether any steps should be taken to detain her.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we cannot advise your Lordship that the papers before us disclose sufficient facts to warrant the detention of the "Chieftain" for a breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act. As there seems to be nothing beyond mere suspicion that she is really destined for the Cuban insurgents, she may, we think, be allowed to proceed, if it should prove, on examination by the Custom-house authorities, that her papers are perfectly regular, and if some reasonable explanation is afforded of her flying English merchant colours after having been purchased, as alleged, by the Japanese Government, and being armed as a vessel of war. For this latter purpose we think that there may be good grounds for detaining her, so as to afford time for ascertaining her true ownership and the colours under which she should be navigated.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. D. My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the correspondence as marked in the accompanying list, relating to a claim preferred by Messrs. Irving, Elsworth, and Holmes, of London, for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government with the Government of Spain, under the following circumstances:—

Messrs. Irving and Co. have for some years past been engaged in business transactions with the firm of Morales and Co., of Cardenas in Cuba, which firm it is stated has become bankrupt and indebted to Irving and Co., in the amount of 1,920*l.* 16*s.* That one of the partners of the firm of Morales and Co. having lately become implicated in the political troubles in Cuba, his property has been seized by the Cuban authorities and is in danger of sequestration, and it is to prevent this sequestration, at any rate until the amount of their claim is settled, that Messrs. Irving request the intervention of Her Majesty's Government with the Government of Spain; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in interfering further than they have already done in Messrs. Irving's behalf, and, if so, to what extent, and whether this is a case for pressing, on behalf of Messrs. Irving, a prior right over the claims of other creditors of the firm of Morales and Co.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—should not press forward their claim in the usual manner before the liquidator of the firm of Morales and Co., with a view to determine the extent of the responsibility of the estate of Messrs. José Maria Mora for the debts of the firm. If that question can be determined, then, as it appears that the firm became insolvent and its affairs passed into liquidation prior to any embargo being laid by the Spanish Government on the estate of M. José Maria Mora, it would be reasonable to hold that to the extent of the responsibility of M. José Maria Mora as partner in the firm, the lien of the creditors on his estate should not be prejudiced by the embargo, and to that extent I think Her Majesty's Government would be justified at the proper time in giving support to Messrs. Irving and Co. But the present request of Messrs. Irving and Co., namely, that their debt against the firm should forthwith be liquidated by the Spanish Government out of the proceeds of the embargoed estate of M. José Maria Mora is, I think, premature.

That there does not appear to be any special reason why Messrs. Irving and Co.

It does not appear from the papers submitted to your Lordship that any obstacle has been raised by the local Government at Havanah to the liquidation of the affairs of Morales and Co. proceeding in the usual manner, and it is stated by Mr. Graham Dunlop, in his letter of 24th March, 1870, to your Lordship, that the Embargo Committee of Cuba is not likely to proceed to deal with the estate of M. José Maria Mora for some time. Messrs. Irving and Co. ought, therefore, I think, to take advantage of this interval to obtain from the liquidator his report as to the extent of the liability of M. José Maria Mora's estate for the debts of Morales and Co., so as to be prepared with the proper evidence to be laid at the proper time before the Embargo Committee. I do not see any grounds to warrant your Lordship in asserting, on behalf of Messrs. Irving and Co., that they have any privilege over the other creditors of the firm of Morales and Co.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received July 14.)

Temple, July 14, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 7th July instant, stating that with reference to our reports of the 10th April and 13th May, relative to the sale at Nassau of the ship "Lilian" and her cargo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the further correspondence which had passed upon the subject,* from which we would perceive that the arms taken on board the "Lilian" had already been sold to Colonel Herrera, an agent of the Spanish Government, and taken out of the Colony; that the "Lilian" herself, however, was still in custody, and the Governor had issued an advertisement for tenders for her purchase.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, together with the previous correspondence which he inclosed; and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the course proposed to be pursued by Governor Sir James Walker in regard to the vessel in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

That the Secretary of the Colonies was under a misapprehension in supposing, as suggested in Mr. Herbert's letter of May 18th last, that the opinion of the Law Officers was based on the assumption that the "Lilian" had been seized and condemned at Nassau, under the authority of the local revenue laws. The Foreign Enlistment Act has provided that all vessels seized under the provisions of section 7 "may be prosecuted and condemned in the like manner, and in such Courts as ships or vessels may be prosecuted and condemned for any breach of the laws made for the protection of the Revenues of Customs and Excise, or of the laws of trade and navigation;" and it was in virtue of the Imperial Statute that we considered the manner of procedure in the matter of the condemnation of the "Lilian" was to be adapted to the provisions of the local revenue laws. If "the parties claiming as seizors," referred to in Governor Walker's letter of the 30th April, 1870, give their consent to the sale of the vessel in the manner proposed by his Excellency the Governor, we do not see any practical objection to it, as it must be presumed that the provision of the local Act requiring the vessel to be sold by public auction was intended to protect the interests of the seizors, and to secure to them that the vessel should not be sold below its fair value.

Temple, August 2, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th ultimo, stating that, with reference to my report of the 17th November last, in the case of the "Eliza," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me further correspondence (as noted in the margin*), which had passed between the Foreign Office and Mr. Ellis on that subject; and he was to request that I would take those papers into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to any further steps which should be taken in the matter.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose the previous correspondence for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken this matter into consideration and have the honour to report—

That it appears that Mr. J. Ellis has been already informed by Mr. Otway that the result of an official investigation has satisfied the Spanish authorities at St. Domingo that there has been an illegal correspondence between the "Eliza" and parties on shore. Mr. J. Ellis suggests in his letter to your Lordship of 7th July last, that this allegation of the Spanish authorities is a mere afterthought, and in fact a fabrication concocted by the Spanish authorities at St. Domingo, for the purpose of misleading the Spanish Government. If Mr. J. Ellis had been prepared with evidence to show that the crew of the "Eliza" had falsely stated to the authorities at St. Domingo that there had been a communication between the "Eliza" and the shore, whilst the "Eliza" was at anchor off the port of Soufflé, such evidence might have been of importance, and your Lordship might have thought it proper to invite the candid attention of the Spanish Government to it; but the affidavit of the master of the "Eliza," to which Mr. J. Ellis has called your Lordship's attention and upon which he seems to rely, as disproving the allegation of the Spanish authorities, tends the other way, as the master admits the truth of the statement made by the crew, and excuses his own denial of the fact, when he was examined by the Spanish authorities at St. Domingo, on the ground that he had been personally kept in ignorance of it. I am of opinion that this admission of the master, so far from assisting the case of the owner, is calculated to confirm the conclusion at which the Spanish authorities have arrived.

After a careful consideration of the materials submitted to your Lordship's attention by Mr. J. Ellis in his letter of the 7th June last, and his comments on them in his letter of the 7th July last, I am unable to advise your Lordship that they supply any new view of the case of the "Eliza" which would warrant your Lordship in re-opening the discussion of it with the Spanish Government.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received November 12.)

My Lord, Temple, November 11, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me therewith the accompanying correspondence, which contains an account of the circumstances attending the seizure near the coast of Cuba of the British schooner "John Gray," and of the treatment the crew have received at the hands of the port authorities at Basacoa, and to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that Messrs. Williams, of Inagua, the asserted owners of the "John Gray," have not at present made out a case which would warrant your Lordship in supporting a claim on their part against the Spanish Government for compensation on account of the detention of their vessel by the Spanish gun-boat. It appears from the report of the Commander of the gun-boat that the "John Gray" endeavoured to avoid his visit, and that she had no national flag on board nor any papers to prove her nationality.

Under these circumstances, considering the disturbed state of the island and the locality in which the "John Gray" was found, I am of opinion that there was probable cause for the Commander of the gun-boat taking her into port for inquiry.

It does not appear from the letter of Messrs. Williams of August 2, 1870, which is inclosed in Mr. Consul Dunlop's despatch No. 52, that they had taken the proper precaution after purchasing this vessel of having her registered before they sent her on her fishing excursion; and, as I am at present informed, I do not consider that a mere licence to fish granted by the authorities of Inagua can be regarded as a proper substitute for a British certificate of registry.

The case of the crew, on the other hand, divides itself into two parts; their detention was a consequence of the "John Gray" having been sent to sea without a national flag and without proper ship-papers, and they are not entitled, in my opinion, to any compensation from the Spanish Government on that account; but, on the other ground, of undue severity in the treatment to which they were exposed, they have primâ facie cause of complaint.

I think your Lordship may properly instruct Her Majesty's Consul to ask for some explanation at the hands of the proper authorities on the island as to the circumstances under which it was thought necessary by the port authorities at Basacoa to march the crew, bound with cords, through the streets, and to consign them to prison as common malefactors, there being no allegation of misconduct on their part from the Commander of the gun-boat.

My Lord, Temple, November 26, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying papers reporting the circumstances under which three British subjects from the Bahamas have been captured and executed near Cayo Romano, off the north coast of Cuba, by the Spanish authorities, on the ground of their having run the blockade with arms for the Cuban insurgents, and to request that I would take the case into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it is not quite clear, from the papers in this case, that the "Margaret Jessie" was in Cuban waters when she was seized by the gun-boat.

It would appear from the statement of the Marquis San Rafael of October 20, 1870, that she was standing in shore, and had thrown oberboard her cargo, but it does not appear that she had landed any arms.

The "Guanahani," on the other hand, is stated to have landed arms and men. If the Marquis San Rafael intends to represent that the "Margaret Jessie" brought her cargo of arms, which were clearly intended for the use of the insurgents and not for sale as a mercantile speculation, into Cuban waters, and was seized in such waters by the Spanish gun-boat after having thrown them overboard, I think her crew had rendered themselves amenable to Cuban law, and that if military law then prevailed in that port of the island, your Lordship cannot impugn the right of the Cuban authorities to treat the crew of the "Margaret Jessie" as aiding the insurgents, in which case their national character would afford them no protection. The penalty of death may have been under the circumstances excessive, but the right of the authorities to inflict the penalty, if the parties were found guilty of aiding the insurgents, cannot be disputed.

My Lord, Temple, November 28, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 24th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter which your Lordship has received from the Secretary of the Liverpool Wreck Association, requesting information as to the powers of Spanish Consuls in this country with regard to wrecks of Spanish vessels. A memorandum drawn up at the Foreign Office upon the existing Treaties between England and Spain, bearing upon this subject, was also inclosed, and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the Association.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report:—

That your Lordship may properly direct an answer to be returned to the Secretary of the Liverpool Wreck Association, to the effect that there is no Treaty between Great Britain and Spain under which the Spanish Consul can claim a right to intervene officially, and, without the authority of the captain, to displace an agent put in charge of the wreck of a Spanish vessel in this country by the captain.

My Lord, Temple, December 20, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Consul-General in Cuba, reporting the circumstances attending the detention by the Spanish authorities of the master and crew of the vessel "Britannia," of Nassau, which was boarded by the Spanish gun-boat "Vigia" when driven by stress of weather off the coast of Cuba; and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon, and as to any claim which the master and crew may have to compensation on account of the treatment they have been subjected to.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report:—

That it appears from the letter of the Marquis de San Rafael that the case of the detention of the "Britannia" was heard and determined before a Prize Committee. It may be presumed, therefore, that the "Britannia" was seized and detained for some primâ facie violation of belligerent right.

The sentence, however, of the Prize Committee throws no light on the cause of her detention, but is content with affirming that the master and crew were the originators of their own detention.

On the other hand, if full credence is to be given to the affidavit of the master and crew of the "Britannia" sworn before Mr. Consul Dunlop, the master and crew of that vessel were innocent of affording any reasonable grounds for their detention. I do not, however, think that your Lordship can safely instruct Mr. Consul Dunlop to act upon the assumed truth of all the statements in that affidavit, and Her Majesty's Consul may, in my opinion, be properly instructed to report further on the case, and to communicate in the manner which he may think most advisable with the Spanish authorities at Havana, with a view to ascertain more precisely the grounds upon which the Prize Committee has decreed the release of the vessel without damages, and also to report further what steps have been taken by the Spanish authorities as regards the restitution of the vessel itself, pursuant to the decree of the Prize Committee.

My Lord, Temple, December 23, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 17th instant, stating that with reference to my letter of the 2nd June last, upon the claim of Messrs. Irving, Elsworth and Holmes, upon the property of Señor Mora, in Cuba, he was directed to transmit to me further correspondence which has passed upon this case, and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion, whether Messrs. Irving and Company are entitled under the present circumstances of the case to any, and if so, to what assistance from Her Majesty's Government for the recovery of their debt.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it does not appear from the letter of Messrs. Morrison Brothers, inclosed in the despatch No. 38 of Her Majesty's Consul, that the liquidating firm of Morales and Company will be unable to settle the claims of Messrs. Irving, Elsworth and Holmes against the firm, without recourse being had to the property of Señor Mora, which has been sequestered. It further appears from the same letter, that the claims of Messrs. Irving, Elsworth and Holmes have no priority over those of other creditors. I am of opinion, therefore, that, as matters stand at present, Messrs. Irving, Elsworth and Holmes have not made out a case which will warrant your Lordship's interference on their behalf to obtain a settlement of their claims by the Spanish authorities out of the estate of Señor Mora.

My Lord, Temple, December 28, 1870.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th instant, stating that, with reference to my report of the 11th ultimo, on the case of the vessel "John Gray," which was seized last June off the coast of Cuba by a Spanish gun-boat, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Board of Trade, inclosing a copy of a despatch from the British Vice-Consul at St. Jago de Cuba, reporting the circumstances under which expenses amounting to 69*l*. 7*s*. 7*d*. have been incurred on account of the crew of that vessel.

That the Board of Trade, as I should observe, consider that this expense cannot properly be defrayed out of the vote for the relief of distressed British seamen, and suggest the propriety of applying to the Spanish Government for repayment of the amount in question, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this matter into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That until the principal question is settled respecting the seizure of the "John Gray," which, as Mr. Ramsden reports, has still to be settled at Havana between the Captain-General and Her Majesty's Consul-General, your Lordship would not be justified, in my opinion, in directing any application to be made to the Spanish Government for the repayment of the expenses incurred in providing for the subsistence of the crew of that vessel.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 11.)

Temple, May 11, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Berne, requesting instructions in regard to an application which has been made to him by a British subject, to be married to a foreigner who it appears had contracted a former marriage in Prussia, which had been legally dissolved. That Mr. Gould states fully the grounds of his hesitation to perform the marriage ceremony in this case without previous authority from the Foreign Office, and that, as the case is an exceptional one, Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would take it into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion at my earliest convenience as to the instructions which should be sent to Mr. Gould.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report:—

That it does not appear from Mr. Gould's report that the former husband of the foreign lady was a domiciled Prussian subject, but assuming such to have been the case, the Prussian Courts would be competent to declare the marriage of the parties to be null and void, so as to enable either party to contract marriage as if the other party were dead. But before the proposed marriage is permitted to be solemnized at the British Legation, it will be proper for Mr. Gould to require a copy of the sentence of divorce to be produced before him, and if the sentence should, in terms, declare the lady free to marry again, the marriage may be thereupon properly solemnized as if the previous husband of the lady were dead, but if the sentence is silent on this subject, Mr. Gould may properly require a certificate to be produced from some German lawyer conversant with the law of Prussia, certifying that after such a sentence the parties are, by Prussian law, free to contract marriage again. These documents should be filed at the Legation, and if it is the practice to require an affidavit from either of the parties that there is no lawful impediment to the marriage, &c., the affidavit in this case should be a special one, and the sentence and certificate should be annexed to it.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 24.)

Temple, May 23, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 14th instant, stating that, with reference to the Queen's Advocate's report of the 15th November, 1865, he was directed to transmit to me the papers relative to the refusal of the Cantonal Government of Tessin in Switzerland to recognize as the Official Liquidator of the European Central Railway Company, which has become bankrupt, a gentleman, Mr. Lovelock, who has been appointed to that post by the High Court of Chancery in this country; and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to any action which it may be proper that Her Majesty's Government should take in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report:—

That the application of Mr. Lovelock for your Lordship's assistance to procure from the Cantonal Government of Tessin his recognition as the Official Liquidator of the European Central Railway Company, is, in my opinion, premature, his object being, as may be gathered from his letter of 5th May, 1870, to intervene in that character in the disposal of the property belonging to the Company. The Cantonal Government is clearly entitled, under the 27th Article of the Company's Concession, to conduct the sale of the works of the Company upon the forfeiture of the Concession, and after the deductions contemplated in that Article have been made, to pay over the balance to the Company. Mr. Lovelock may be entitled, when the proper time arrives for the payment of that balance, to step forward and claim, under the Order of the High Court of Chancery, to receive it in his official character of Official Liquidator, but his right at the present moment under the Order of the Court is not different in kind or degree from that which the Company itself would possess, if its affairs were not under liquidation; and I am of opinion that under Article 27 of the Concession the Company could not claim to set the Civil Tribunals of the Canton in action, which appears to have been attempted by the agents of Mr. Lovelock, for the purpose of administering its property whilst it is in course of sale by the Cantonal Government.

I think your Lordship may properly instruct Mr. Bonar not to interfere at present in the question between Mr. Lovelock and the Cantonal Government, as there does not appear to be any intention on the part of the Cantonal Government to work any injustice against the Company in the conduct of the sale of its works.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 6th instant, stating that with reference to my report of the 23rd May last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me an accompanying further letter from Mr. Lovelock, the official liquidator of the European Central Railway Company, representing that the decision of Her Majesty's Government not to interfere at present between him and the Cantonal Government of Tessin has been arrived at from a misapprehension of the object he had in view in soliciting assistance, and explaining the question at issue between him and the Cantonal Government; and Mr. Otway was pleased to transmit to me the former papers relating to this case, and to request that I would take the case again into consideration, and report to your Lordship whether there is anything stated in Mr. Lovelock's letter then inclosed which would induce me to alter the opinion already expressed by me relating to this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I see no reason to alter the opinion expressed to your Lordship in my former report.

I may add that it appears from Mr. Lovelock's letter of May 5, 1870, that the proper course for him to pursue is to take the necessary steps before the Tribunal of the Canton to have the question determined, whether the Edict of March 10, 1869, was regular or not. "The Government of the Canton," he says, "opposes that Edict, but, at the same time, allows the rights of his agents if the Edict should be held to be regular."

Temple, September 28, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Switzerland, wherein he states that the Canton of Vaud had recently abandoned in favour of Russian subjects the claim for probate duty, which it persistently makes on the personal property out of the country of foreigners domiciled in the Canton at the time of their death, on the Russian Minister giving in an official declaration that in this respect the personal estates of citizens of the Canton of Vaud dying in Russia would be treated on a footing of perfect reciprocity; and that Mr. Gould, therefore, suggests that, in order to obtain a similar exemption for the personal estates of British subjects dying in the Canton, Her Majesty's Legation at Berne should be authorized to make a declaration corresponding to that made by the Russian Minister. The draft of an answer, which your Lordship, with the concurrence of the Treasury, proposes to return to that despatch, was also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereon. Mr. Hammond was pleased to add that your Lordship suggested whether it might not be desirable that I should insert in the draft a definition of what constitutes a legal domicile.

1870

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it is extremely difficult to define domicile, and no definition hitherto proposed has been pronounced by jurists to be completely satisfactory.

I think, however, that the object which your Lordship has in view may possibly be secured by explaining that your Lordship uses the phrase "legal domicile" in your despatch to denote "the principal domicile" of a deceased person in the sense in which European and American law make domicile to be the test for regulating the succession to personal estate. I would observe, however, that the difficulty which arose in Mr. Townshend's case, and which may occur again in the case of any other British subject who may have a residence in the Canton of Vaud, would not be met by a declaration of the kind suggested by Mr. Gould. Mr. Townshend was not "domiciled for testamentary purposes" in the Canton of Vaud at the time of his death, his "principal domicile" being in England, so that a declaration applicable to Russian subjects domiciled in the Canton of Vaud would not mutatis mutandis meet any new case analogous to that of Mr. Townshend. What is wanted would rather appear to be a declaration to the following effect:—

"No tax or duty shall be levied on the property of any British subject dying within the Canton of Vaud, who shall not at the time of his death have his principal domicile therein, except probate duty on such property as he may possess within the Canton; and in the same way no tax or duty shall be levied on the property of any Swiss citizen dying within the United Kingdom, who shall not at the time of his death have his principal domicile therein, except probate duty on such property as he may possess within the United Kingdom."

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Tunis,* reporting the particulars connected with a failure of justice in a most serious case. That it appears that in the month of October last an individual named Annunziato Bugeja, born in Tunis of Maltese parents, was sent under a warrant from the British Consular Court at Tunis for trial at Malta on a charge of murder committed on the person of a native of Malta, when the Judge before whom the case was to be tried discharged the prisoner, on the ground that the Tunis Consular Court had no legal power to send him to Malta, although, as Her Majesty's Consul-General observes in a perfect analogous case in 1867, no doubt was raised as to the validity of a similar warrant from the same Consular Court; and Mr. Spring Rice was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and furnish your Lordship with an early opinion as to the decision come to by the Judge in this case, which has resulted in the release of the prisoner Bugeja. A confidential letter and its inclosures from the Colonial Office relating to this case, by which we should preceive that doubts are entertained by the authorities at Malta as to the legality of the detention in the prisons there of several persons who have been sent to that island for imprisonment under warrants from the Consular Courts in Alexandria and Tunis, was also inclosed, and Mr. Spring Rice was also to state that the Secretary of State for the Colonies suggests, therefore, that Her Majesty's Consuls in the Provincial Courts should be instructed not to send any more prisoners to Malta until further orders; and to request that we would also furnish your Lordship with an immediate opinion in regard to this suggestion.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the decision of the Criminal Court of Malta is, in our opinion, correct, and that the only competent authority, under the Order in Council of 1864, to cause a person accused of a crime, committed within the jurisdiction of a Provincial Consular Court, to be conveyed for trial to Malta, is the Judge of the Supreme Consular Court. The same construction we consider must be given to Article 66, under which any offender convicted before a Provincial Consular Court may be sent by order of the Judge of the Supreme Consular Court to Malta for the purpose of undergoing his punishment.

We think it would be proper for your Lordship to instruct Her Majesty's Consuls in the Provincial Courts not to send any more prisoners to Malta under warrants from themselves, until further orders, in accordance with the suggestion to that effect made in Mr. Spring Rice's letter.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Otway's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from the Acting British Consul-General at Tunis, respecting a proposal of the Government of the Bey for the establishment of a mixed tribunal to try cases between foreigners and natives. Mr. Otway was pleased also to inclose a despatch from Sir P. Francis, Her Majesty's Judge at Constantinople, reporting his opinion on the subject; and he was to request that we would take those papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with such observations as we might have to offer on the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report:—

That we concur with Sir Philip Francis in thinking that the proposal of the Tunisian Government should be favourably received by Her Majesty's Government, and that the scheme of the Decree of His Highness the Bey, subject to some modifications, may be approved by your Lordship.

The modifications which we would suggest are that it should be open to the other European Powers who may be disposed to appoint Consular Judges, who should be qualified to sit as members of the Tribunal of First Instance, which should always consist of not less than five judges as proposed, amongst whom there should always be, if possible, a representative of the nationality of the plaintiffs and the defendant.

With a Court so constituted we do not consider that the Presidency of a Tunisian Judge would be objectionable.

The Court of Appeal has, we think, an objectionable feature in its composition, so far as it is proposed that it should consist of three Tunisian and three European Judges, in which case, if the President is a Tunisian and has a casting vote, the administration of justice in both Courts will virtually be under Tunisian control. We think this Court should consist of seven judges at least, four of whom should be European, in which case we see no objection to the President being a Tunisian. If we mistake not, it is proposed that the Courts of Appeal in Egypt should consist of seven members.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 10th instant, stating that, with reference to my report of the 26th August last, he was directed to state to me that in December last your Lordship received from Mr. White a further letter, also inclosed, adducing further facts in connection with his alleged contracts for the purchase of certain ores in Turkey, and that your Lordship considered it desirable to refer the subjects to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Constantinople for investigation and report.

Mr. Spring Rice was pleased to inclose Mr. Barron's report, from which I should learn the grounds on which he considers that the case is one which should not be supported. But that, before your Lordship causes any further communication to be made to Mr. White in the matter, your Lordship would wish to learn whether I concur in the opinion which Mr. Barron has taken of the case, and, if so, as to the portions of Mr. Barron's report which should be communicated to Mr. White. The previous correspondence was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report:—

That I concur in Mr. Barron's opinion that this is not a case which calls for any support from Her Majesty's Government. I would suggest that Mr. White should be informed that your Lordship has made very careful inquiry into his complaint, and that the result of such inquiry is to satisfy your Lordship that Mr. Paterson has no legal or equitable claim against the Turkish Government.

That with regard to any legal claim on his part, your Lordship has ascertained that Mr. Paterson has no claim under Turkish law to a renewal of the concession of the Dagarde mine, as the mine is the private property of the Sultan, and, as such, is not subject to the law or custom which governs the concession of mines which are the property of the State. That with regard to any equitable claim on the part of Mr. Paterson, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Constantinople has been informed by the Turkish authorities that in January, 1868, Mr. Paterson declined to accept a renewal of the concession of the Dagarde mine upon the terms offered to him by Atta Effendi; that he received timely notice of the intended concession to which he now objects, and declined to bid for the mine. That under these circumstances your Lordship must decline to interfere any further in the matter of the Dagarde Concession, more especially as it appears that the grant was not made to Mr. Paterson himself, but to Ottoman subjects, under whom Mr. Paterson worked the ore.

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. Robert Sutherland, inquiring under what authority a discharge in bankruptcy was granted to him by Her Majesty's Consul at Salonica, and whether that discharge holds good in England—

2. That no report of that case appeared to have been received from Mr. Consul Wilkinson; but your Lordship presumed he acted under the authority conferred on him by the 40th section of the Order in Council of 30th November, 1864, copy of which was therewith inclosed—

3. That your Lordship, however, would be glad if we would take Mr. R. Sutherland's letter into consideration, and favour you with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That presuming that Mr. Sutherland was adjudicated a bankrupt by Her Majesty's Consul at Salonica under section 40 of Her Majesty's Order in Council of 30th November, 1864, we are of opinion that such adjudication would only be operative for and within the Consular district as respects the debtors and creditors of Mr. Sutherland, and his discharge consequent on such adjudication would not relieve him from the claims of creditors in England.

Your Lordship may, we think, properly direct that information to the above effect shall be communicated to Mr. Sutherland.

Temple, April 20, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th April instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from the British Commissioner on the Danube, stating the course which the Danube Commissioners were desirous of taking in regard to investing their surplus money in the English funds, and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the points raised by Colonel Stokes.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

1, 2, and 3. That to the first, second, and third of the questions raised by the British Commissioner, our answer must be in the negative.

4. That assuming the stock required to be sold has been invested in the names of the Commissioners, we are of opinion that the Executive Committee of the Commissioners could not effectively issue powers of attorney for the sale of such stock.

5. We think that the difficulties may be removed by the appointment of trustees in England, in whose names the stock could be purchased, and by whom or by power of attorney from whom, the stock might be sold according to instructions from the Commissioners.

My Lord, Temple, August 27, 1870.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 25th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence marked in the margin* relative to complaints in regard to the British Hospital dues levied at Constantinople and Smyrna under the authority of the Orders in Council of the 3rd July, 1854, and the 31st July, 1858, copies of which were inclosed.

That the hospital at Constantinople was erected by funds provided from the Exchequer, but there was some uncertainty whether that at Smyrna had been chargeable to the public.

That an inquiry was about to take place how far the statement was correct that revenue derived from the tonnage dues levied under the Order had been applied to other Consular purposes, and he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the memorialists would have, under the terms of the above Order in Council, just ground for complaint if such revenue in excess, taking the average of the past twelve years of the cost of maintenance of the hospitals, had been applied to Consular expenses towards the liquidation of the cost originally incurred by Her Majesty's Government for their establishment.

And that should we be of opinion that if, when the matter was investigated, it should appear that money had been so applied, irregularity had been committed, he was to request that we would state whether such objection could be removed, if it was not judged expedient to lower the rate of tonnage dues by an explanatory instruction from the Secretary of State, or whether the issue of a fresh Order in Council would be necessary.

In a postscript appended to the said letter, Mr. Russell was pleased to state that he was to add, in consideration of the inquiry about to take place, your Lordship would be glad to receive our Report on the matter at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that there has been irregularity in the application of the surplus revenue from the hospital dues, and that the memorialists would have, under the terms of the Order in Council, just grounds of complaint, if the revenue in excess were applied to Consular expenses. With regard to the liquidation of the cost originally incurred by Her Majesty's Government for the establishment of hospitals, we are of opinion that where such hospitals have been established subsequently to the Order in Council of 1854 (10 Hertslet, p. 613), the moneys in excess may properly be applied towards the liquidation of the expenses of their establishment. With regard to the irregularity above mentioned, we consider that it is beyond the powers granted to the Secretary of State to remove it by any explanatory instruction, and if it should not be judged expedient to lower the rate of tonnage dues, the issue of a fresh Order in Council will be necessary to warrant their application to any other object than the "establishment, maintenance, and support of British hospitals."

other papers as noted in the margin,[*] respecting certain steamers constructed in England for the Hungarian Navigation Company now lying at Turn Severin in the Danube, and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the Austrian Ambassador, and, generally, as to the course which should be pursued in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report:—

That I am of opinion that the steamers in question are to be regarded as British vessels legally as regards their papers, and equitably as regards the contract, and they are entitled to all such protection from the local authorities as the latter are bound by Treaty or comity to afford to vessels of British nationality.

With regard to the Hungarian sailors taken on board the steamers at Sulina from motives of economy to replace British seamen, there is no information in the papers before me as to the terms upon which they were engaged, whether they were engaged to navigate the vessels to their ultimate destination at Pesth, or to what other place, as they may have been justified under their contract in refusing to leave the vessels. With regard to the later telegram inclosed in Mr. Otway's letter of 28th instant, announcing that the Hungarian sailors on board the vessels have attacked the English sailors, while the latter were attempting to get up steam, and maltreated two captains, I am not clear that the conduct of the Hungarians is piratical as suggested, in a sense to justify the interference of Her Majesty's gun-boat. Upon this point I should wish to be furnished with the Conventions regulating the navigation of the Danube and the jurisdiction to be exercised over its waters.

There can be no doubt that the captains of the steamers would be justified in appealing to the local authorities for protection against the violence of the Hungarian sailors, as such violence is a disturbance of the navigation of the river, but as regards the maintenance of discipline, the Roumanian authorities will probably decline to exercise jurisdiction on board a foreign ship where all the parties are of foreign nationality.

Temple, January 12, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 15th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 4th October, he was directed to transmit to us a letter from the Board of Trade, conveying the views of that Department, both as to the proposals of the Government of the United States in the matter of a Consular Convention, and on the suggestions contained in our Report.

The draft of a Treaty, which would embody the views thus arrived at, and which has been prepared as a basis for a counter-proposal to be made to the Government of the United States, if Her Majesty's Government should decide on dealing with the matter by proceeding forthwith with the negotiation of a Convention, was also inclosed. Mr. Spring Rice was also pleased to state to us that your Lordship would be glad to receive from us, at our earliest convenience, a Report on this subject, together with any suggestions we may have to offer.

That your Lordship desired him at the same time to observe that an alternative course of action is open for consideration, namely, an application in the first instance to the Legislature for such powers as will be necessary to carry out the arrangements which the proposed Convention has in view. That this course involves the disadvantage of the delay consequent on an appeal to Parliament, attended necessarily by much of uncertainty as to the result; that, on the other hand, if an Act of Parliament enabled Her Majesty to extend generally to foreign Tribunals and to foreign Consuls within the United Kingdom the privileges and obligations contemplated by the proposed Convention, such extension being conceded on the grounds of reciprocity, and effect being given to it by Order in Council in each case, an opportunity would present itself in case of necessity for placing the whole matter, as between Her Majesty's Government and the Governments of foreign countries in general, on a systematic and satisfactory footing. That such an Act of Parliament might also provide the powers necessary to give effect to the objects which the United States' Government have in view in their proposals as regards emigration, which form the subject of the inclosed note from Mr. Motley, referred to in our Report of the 15th ultimo. That, in order to consider the relative advantages of these two courses, it is desirable that your Lordship should be informed as to the nature of the legislation which would be necessary for the purposes in view, and that on this point your Lordship requests that we would furnish your Lordship with our views.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have perused the papers which your Lordship has communicated to us. We beg leave to refer to our Report of the 4th October, 1869, as containing our opinion upon the general scope and object of the various provisions of Mr. Motley's proposed Convention. We see no reason to change the general judgments there arrived at.

What we presume your Lordship now to desire is, our view as to the necessity of English legislation in order to effect many of the most important of the objects aimed at, and what, in consequence of that necessity, is the best method of proceeding to attain those objects.

Every provision alike in Mr. Motley's draft and in your Lordship's which affects existing laws, whether as to the jurisdiction of the Courts, the authority of executive officers, the nature of evidence, or the liability to local or Imperial burdens, will require an Act of Parliament to give it force in this country. To enter into a Convention on such matters unauthorized by Parliament would be merely delusive, and might possibly lead to serious international troubles. Legislation being necessary, it may take place in various forms, the choice between which is a matter for your Lordship and the Government.

The Act may be confined to the subjects discussed between this country and the United States, and the provisions of the Act may either go in detail through the various Articles which are hereafter to form the body of the Convention, or the Convention may be first negotiated and agreed upon, subject to the approval of Parliament, and then an Act passed simply giving it legal effect, and annexing the Convention as a schedule, if the Government think that Parliament can be depended upon to pass it unaltered. Or a general Act may be passed, as suggested in Mr. Spring Rice's letter, empowering the Crown to give certain powers to foreign authorities, and to restrain English authorities on certain given foreign matters by Order in Council.

Looking at the matter from a purely legal point of view, the more proper and convenient course would seem to be to have a general Act, to be applied when necessary to the subjects of other countries by Order in Council.

This, however, is not a question merely of law, but (especially as regards America), of policy, and it is for your Lordship to determine whether it may not be worth while to incur some inconvenience, and run some Parliamentary risk, sooner than drop negotiations with the United States at this moment, or to include them as one only amongst foreign countries, the question between us being peculiar, and no doubt pressing. In any event, it will probably be convenient to submit the Convention to the Government draughtsman before it is finally settled, for his criticism on the wording, with reference to the undoubted need of future legislation of some kind.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 24.)

Temple, January 22, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 19th instant, stating that with reference to my report of the 18th ultimo, upon the draft of a Convention with the United States of America, making such modifications in the Treaty of April 7, 1862, for the suppression of the African Slave Trade, as are requisite in consequence of the contemplated suppression of the Mixed Courts of Justice established under that Treaty, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit, for my consideration, a draft of Convention revised in accordance with the suggestions contained in my report, and that your Lordship would be glad if I would favour you with my opinion thereupon.

Mr. Otway was pleased to state that your Lordship felt some doubt whether the draft is sufficient to keep alive Article III of the Treaty of 1862, or at least the concluding clause of it, which fixes the period for the payment of indemnification at one year from the date of the sentence of the Mixed Court of Justice, and that your Lordship would draw my attention to this point.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I have suggested certain verbal and formal amendments in the margin of the draft. I have also thought it necessary to provide some additional instructions to meet the case where a detained vessel may have been handed over to a cruizer of her own nationality, which was not contemplated in the Treaty of 1862, and for which no provision was made in the instructions annexed to that Treaty. How far the proposed addition to Article 3 of the Instructions will sufficiently meet that case it will be for your Lordship to judge.

With regard to Article 5 of the Instructions, it may deserve your Lordship's consideration whether there ought not to be some corresponding addition made to Article III of the draft Convention, as it at present provides only for the action of the Courts where the vessel itself is sent in.

With regard to Mr. Otway's remarks upon Article III of the Treaty of 1862, as no question of indemnification for damages could have arisen under it except in consequence of the sentence of a Court, I consider that the payment of any such indemnification would fairly be within the scope of the words "the proceedings consequent on adjudication," which are found in Article II of the proposed draft.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 28.)

Temple, January 27, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that, with reference to my report of the 27th March last, respecting the claim of Mr. Machado, as represented by Messrs. Westhead, on account of the detention by Her Majesty's cruizers in 1857 of two of his vessels on suspicion of being engaged in the Slave Trade on the West Coast of Africa, he was directed to transmit to me a letter from Messrs. Rothery and Co., of Doctor's Commons, representing the supercargo and consignee of one of the vessels, asking on his behalf for permission for one of their clerks to inspect and take copies at the Foreign Office of any papers relating to the case. Mr. Spring Rice also inclosed, together with the correspondence, a short summary of the case, and stated that, as it is evident that the views of Her Majesty's Government upon the merits of these claims have been considerably modified since they first admitted their liability for the seizure of Mr. Machado's vessels, while the original admission might be made a pretext for heavy claims against Her Majesty's Government, he was to request that I would advise your Lordship at my earliest convenience as to the nature of the answer that should be returned to Messrs. Rothery's application.

I am also honoured with Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 25th instant, transmitting further papers relative to this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Rothery and Co. should be informed that Her Majesty's Government decline to entertain any application relative to the claim of Mr. Francisco José de Madeiros, as supercargo and consignee of the cargo lately laden on board the American vessel "Thomas Watson," through a private channel, and that if any question is to be reopened on his behalf, it must be reopened by him through the United States' Government.

With reference to the character in which Messrs. Rothery and Co. state that M. de Maderios claims compensation, namely, as supercargo and consignee of the cargo on board the "Thomas Watson," I may observe that the claim made on his behalf by the United States' Government was for personal compensation by reason of his alleged unjustifiable seizure and detention as being engaged in the Slave Trade, and that he is described in the copies of certain depositions made in New York as the agent of Mr. Machado. He is also stated in those depositions to have been on board the "Thomas Watson" in charge of the cargo, as such agent. I have not before me the original note of Mr. Dallas of 22nd March, 1858, addressed to Lord Malmesbury, to which Mr. Adams refers as entering fully into the particulars which gave rise to the claim; but the character in which M. de Madeiros is now apparently instructing Messrs. Rothery and Co. would imply that he had an interest in the cargo distinct from that of agent for the owner, which interest has not been hitherto alleged on his behalf, as I gather from the papers before me, by the United States' Government.

Messrs. Rothery and Co. may also be informed, if your Lordship thinks it would be advisable so far to notice the particulars of their application, that there are no original papers in the possession of Her Majesty's Government of the kind suggested in their letter.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 5.)

Temple, February 4, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th January ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a note received by your Lordship from the United States' Minister at this Court, with a copy of a despatch from the United States' Secretary of State, inclosing a draft of a proposed Convention with the great Powers for the protection of submarine cables.

Mr. Hammond was pleased also to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington upon the subject, together with a letter which your Lordship had received from the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, to whom the question was referred, and to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the points raised by the Board of Treasury with reference to Articles III, V, VI, and VII of the proposed Convention.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report,—

That the view of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury is in our opinion correct, that the engagements of Article III, as proposed, would be in conflict with the 52nd section of the Telegraph Act, 26 and 27 Vict., c. 112; and that if they are to take effect in time of war their maintenance would materially cripple the action of a belligerent State as regards despatches going to an enemy, and as regards the powers incidental to the right of blockade.

With regard to Articles V and VII, we see no good reason, if the destruction of submarine cables within, equally as beyond, a marine league from the shore of any of the States, parties to the Treaty, is to be deemed and taken to be an act of piracy under Article V, why the offence in either case should not be justifiable within the dominion of any of the States parties to the Convention, instead of being only justifiable in the former of the two cases, under Article VII, by the State within whose jurisdiction the act of piracy has been committed.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 7.)

Temple, February 5, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that your Lordship had received my report of the 22nd ultimo, on the revised draft of a Convention with the United States of America, for making such modifications in the Treaty of 1862 for the suppression of the African Slave Trade as are requisite in consequence of the intended discontinuance of the Mixed Courts of Justice established under that Treaty; and that he was directed by your Lordship to acquaint me that you had adopted generally the corrections and suggestions which I had made in the draft, but that your Lordship desired him to remark, with regard to the following points:—

1st. That your Lordship had no objection to add to Article III of the Convention, and to Article 3 of the Instructions, the clause which I suggested in order to meet the case of a vessel handed over to a cruizer of her own nation; but that your Lordship was under the impression that such a case was sufficiently provided for by preceding stipulations of the Article, which were not limited to cases in which the vessel should be delivered to a Court of Justice.

2ndly. As to some provisions being inserted in the Convention to correspond with Article 5 of the Instructions, which contemplates the case of a vessel abandoned as unseaworthy, your Lordship thought that such a provision might be desirable if the matter were res integra. But that no provision of the kind is to be found in the Treaty of 1862, although the Instructions of that date contain the Article relative to the abandonment of an unseaworthy vessel. With a view to avoid unnecessary difficulties, your Lordship wished, as far as possible, to abstain from bringing forward points altogether new, and to confine the proposed Convention to such corrections of the Treaty of 1862 as are indispensably required by the abolition of the Mixed Courts of Justice. That your Lordship is the more desirous to follow this course, because, owing to the almost complete suppression of the Slave Trade, the proposed Convention will, in all probability, be a mere arrangement on paper, and never come into practical operation.

that the requirement is in the Treaty of 1862, and its omission now would raise a new point for discussion, and so perhaps occasion difficulty. That your Lordship believes that all that is contemplated is, that the officer in signing the certificate should say that he does so upon his oath, as imparting additional solemnity, and not that he should be required to sign and swear to it in the presence of some magistrate or officer legally authorized to administer an oath, which, indeed, would be evidently impossible in most cases contemplated by the Article.

Mr. Otway was pleased to state that your Lordship requests that I will once more examine the draft Convention in connection with these remarks, and report to your Lordship my opinion upon it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have examined the draft Convention in connection with the above remarks, and have the honour to report—

That as regards Article III of the proposed Convention, the preceding stipulations as to "witnesses and proofs" will be sufficient if it is not intended that an officer of the capturing ship should continue in charge of the captured vessel in all cases until she is brought in for adjudication. I consider that the words "handed over to a cruizer," without any provision that an officer of the capturing vessel shall continue in charge, would imply that the vessel was thenceforth to be in charge of the cruizer, and that the business of taking or sending her in for adjudication and the subsequent proceedings would be in the hands of the commander of the cruizer. If your Lordship sees no objection to this, and considers that the interests of the captors in the condemnation of the vessel will be sufficiently secured, it will be unnecessary to provide that an officer of the capturing vessel shall continue in charge. I may observe that the provision for handing over the vessel when at sea is entirely new.

With regard to Article V, the provision which was suggested for insertion in the Convention in correspondence with Article 5 of the Instructions, may be omitted if your Lordship pleases, as the absence of such a provision has not given rise to any difficulty under the Treaty of 1862.

With regard to the verification of the certificate of the commander of the capturing vessel by his oath, as a practical interpretation has been given to this provision as it stands in the Treaty of 1862, it may be retained if your Lordship pleases.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a draft Convention on the subject of naturalization which it is your Lordship's intention to propose to the American Minister at this Court; that the draft is in conformity with the Protocol signed by the Earl of Derby with Mr. Reverdy Johnson on the 9th October, 1868, save as to certain points which are explained in the accompanying Memorandum; that it is intended to fill up the blank in Article II with the date on which the Bill now before Parliament shall receive the Royal assent; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that we would take the draft Convention into our consideration, and report to your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, our opinion whether it will effect the object in view.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 18.)

Temple, May 18, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd ultimo, stating that he was directed to state to us that a proposal was made not long since by the Government of the United States to the Government of Her Majesty, as well as to those of other Powers, having for its object the negotiation of an international Convention for the protection of submarine cables. That, Her Majesty's Government having first communicated with some of the principal European Powers, and ascertained the view they took of the proposal, Her Majesty's Minister at Washington was instructed to make known to the American Secretary of State the views taken of it by this country, and that your Lordship has since received from Mr. Thornton a despatch which, together with the other papers to which Mr. Hammond alluded, namely, the original American proposal, the Circular addressed to Her Majesty's Ministers at foreign Courts, their answers, and the instruction to Mr. Thornton, he was to inclose for our more complete information as to what has passed. That we should perceive from Mr. Thornton's despatch of 4th April that he is under the impression that Mr. Fish has mainly in view to obtain an international declaration that the destruction of submarine telegraph cables shall be dealt with as an act of piracy. That so far your Lordship is inclined to think that Her Majesty's Government may safely go, and that your Lordship directed him to transmit to us the draft of a despatch to that effect, which, with our concurrence, your Lordship would be prepared to address to Mr. Thornton; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take this draft into our early consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether it may be properly and safely addressed to Her Majesty's Minister in the United States. Mr. Hammond was pleased to add that your Lordship would not be unwilling to authorize Mr. Thornton to go still further in his answer to Mr. Fish, and to express the readiness of Her Majesty's Government further to agree, at all events in substance, to Articles I, II, III, and IV of the American draft relating to monopoly, the consent of the territorial Sovereigns, privileged messages, and the subsistence of Convention in time of war; and also to Article VII, modified as we proposed in our report of the 4th February, in regard to the trial of offences, as well as to Article VIII. But that, before extending the instructions to Mr. Thornton, so as to embrace these points, your Lordship would wish to receive our opinion as to the expediency of doing so, and also as to any variation which we would suggest in the terms of the original draft.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no objection to Article V (which we understand Mr. Fish chiefly to insist upon), in as far as it makes the wilful destruction of telegraph cables on the high seas piracy. This Convention could, of course, only bind the subjects of the two Contracting Parties, and would have to be confirmed on the part of both by legislation.

The term "piracy" does not seem properly applicable to offences committed within the territorial limits of either State, but there probably need be no difficulty in each country providing, by its criminal law, for the severe punishment of wilful injury to cables on their respective shores.

Article VI appears to us objectionable, as likely to interfere with, and possibly, in some cases, altogether to defeat military and naval operations in time of war, if it were observed (which it probably would not be), and we venture to recommend its omission. We somewhat question the expediency of Articles I, II, III, and IV, but we see no insuperable objection to them, if Her Majesty's Government think it convenient to undertake the obligations which they impose. We think it right, however, to point out that these Articles taken together, more especially Article III, may possibly be interpreted by the United States as a guarantee on our part for the maintenance of the cable under all circumstances, though we do not think that they constitute a direct engagement to that effect. In the event of a war between France and the United States, France might possibly claim, as a belligerent, the right to cut the cable, if information as to the movements of her fleets or armies were conveyed by it.

Assuming that she exercised this right (whether or not it properly appertained to her by the law of nations), we presume that Her Majesty's Government would not desire to be under an engagement with the United States to treat such exercise as a casus belli between ourselves and France. We merely suggest this possible state of things by way of illustration of the caution which it seems desirable to observe in framing the terms of the Convention.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying papers relating to the conduct of the master of the British ship "William Wilson,"* who, while that vessel was in the custody of a United States' Deputy-Marshall at San Francisco, is reported to have ejected that officer and sailed away; and Mr. Otway was pleased to request that I would take this case into my consideration, and favour your Lordship with my opinion as to any action which it may be proper for Her Majesty's Government to take in the matter.

In obedience to the commands of your Lordship I have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it was clearly the duty of the master of the "William Wilson" to remain in the port of San Francisco to answer to the process of the Court in which the suit for wages against his ship had been instituted, but as no complaint has been made of his conduct by the United States' Government, I do not consider that Her Majesty's Government is called upon to take any action in this matter.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, and its inclosure, from Mr. Holderness, relative to the claim preferred by him against the Government of the United States on account of injury done to his vessel the "Duke of Edinburgh" in collision with the "General McPherson," and asking that Her Majesty's Minister at Washington might be instructed to make a representation on the subject to the American Government; and he was to request that we would take the case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may, in our opinion, properly instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Washington to make a representation to the United States' Government on the subject of the claim preferred by Mr. Holderness.

No. 282.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received November 22.)

Temple, November 21, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 11th instant, stating:—

1. That with reference to our Report of the 12th January last, relative to a draft of Consular Convention proposed to Her Majesty's Government by the Government of the United States, he was directed by your Lordship to acquaint us that your Lordship's predecessor, the Earl of Clarendon, communicated to the Minister of the United States, in two memoranda, of which copies were inclosed, marked A and B, the general ideas of Her Majesty's Government with regard to the Draft Convention proposed by him. Mr. Motley having, by order of his Government, intimated their willingness to enter into negotiations on the basis indicated in those memoranda, a Counter Draft of Convention had been prepared at the Department of the Foreign Office and the Board of Trade, a copy of which your Lordship desired Mr. Russell to transmit for our consideration.

2. That your Lordship was quite aware that a Convention in the terms even of the Counter Draft would require very considerable alterations in the law of this country on the subjects to which it relates. Still your Lordship thinks the difficulties on that ground are not insuperable, and there can hardly be two opinions as to the desirableness of some such arrangement being made with the United States in the first instance, and afterwards with other Maritime Powers.

3. That your Lordship would therefore be glad if we would have the goodness to examine the Draft and Counter Draft, which are printed in parallel columns in the inclosed copy, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with any observations which might occur to us thereupon.

In obedience to you Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report as follows:—

Article I. We are unable altogether to approve of the first Article in the Draft, but we think the first Article on the Counter Draft is unobjectionable.

Art. II. We think Article II of the Draft inadmissible. We think it would lead to insuperable difficulties.

Art. III. We think Article III of the Draft might be agreed to; but we venture to suggest that a clause should be added giving power to the Secretary of State by warrant to cause the Consulate to be entered and searched, a power which of course never would be exercised except under circumstances of great urgency.

We are induced to make this suggestion from consideration of the state of some parts of Ireland, and of the possibility, however remote, of the necessity of instituting criminal proceedings against a Consul.

Art. IV. Subject to some alterations in phraseology, which will probably require to be made, we think Article IV of the Draft is in substance unobjectionable.

Art. V. We think Article V of the Draft inadmissible.

We are of the same opinion as to Articles IV and V of the Counter Draft on the ground, amongst others, that the Courts of this country cannot be called upon to administer the criminal law of any other country. We do not concur in the observations made in the papers before us that Article X of the original Draft (which in substance appears to us unobjectionable) is at all provided for by Articles IV and V of the Counter Draft, which we are now dealing.

Art. VI. We see no reason for dispensing with the oath of the Consular officer, as provided in this Article. A man's liberty ought not, we think, to be taken away except on oath. In other respects the Article appears to us in substance unobjectionable.

Art. VII. We concur in the objections made to this Article.

Art. VIII. We concur in the observations made in the memorandum of the Board of Trade upon this Article.

Art. IX. We see no substantial objection to Article IX of the Draft. We somewhat question whether Article VII of the Counter Draft is any improvement upon it.

Art. X. We have already observed upon this Article in what we have written upon Article V. We concur in the objection we understand to be entertained to its preamble. But the provisions of the Article itself do not appear to us open to objection, with this qualification, that the offences dealt with under this Article must be offences which, if committed within the country the Tribunals of which are invoked, would be offences against the law of that country.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 23.)

Temple, February 23, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas, asking instructions as to the course he should pursue in regard to certain British claims on Venezuela, which were not adjudicated upon by the Mixed Commission which has lately concluded its labours at Caracas. The Report of that Commission, and the previous papers bearing on the claims still undecided, were also inclosed.

That I should perceive, on reference to the Report of Mr. Joel, the British Commissioner, that Mr. Middleton is under a misapprehension as to the grounds on which these claims were withdrawn from before the Commission, inasmuch as the question arising out of the retroactive effect sought to be given to the Law of June 16, 1865, was at the last moment settled, and the claims affected thereby adjudicated upon, with the exception of that of Mr. P. Award, to which Mr. Middleton alludes. Mr. Award's claim was 31,467 dollars on account of cattle alleged to have been taken during the War of Federation. That the Venezuelan Commission objected to adjudicate upon it, unless the additional proofs subsequent to the date of the Convention for the settlement of the claims were struck out. That the British Commissioner declined to adopt this course, and it was agreed that the claim should be withdrawn without prejudice to the claimant. That the other claims still left pending without prejudice to the claimants are those of Oliver Romberg,* J. P. K. Stevenson,† Felipe Désiré (2)‡, all of which were objected to on the same ground as that of Mr. Award; and that of Christian Christopher,§ J. Horne, and W. Thomas, on which the Venezuelan Commissioner declined to adjudicate, on the ground that his brother, the President of the Supreme Court of Cuidad Bolivar, was one of the officials implicated in the allegations of the claimants.

That this is a claim for a denial of justice. That I should therefore see that the ground on which the greater part of these claims have been left open is not the bearing of the Law of June 16, 1865, as supposed by Mr. Middleton, but the fact that the proofs adduced in support of those claims were formalized subsequently to the 21st September, 1868, the date of the Convention for the settlement of pending British claims on Venezuela. That it is nevertheless very desirable that Mr. Middleton should receive instructions in regard to these claims, and Mr. Hammond was accordingly to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the objections to them raised by the Venezuelan Commissioner. In addition to the above-mentioned claims, Mr. Hammond was also to request my opinion with regard to those of Messrs. Schloss and Co. and Michelsen, which, as I should observe from the correspondence (pages 19, 21, 159, and      of the Report) have been left pending, all the rights and privileges of which the claimants might have enjoyed had their claims been adjudicated on, being reserved for them by Mr. Joel.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report:—

That it does not appear from the records of the Commission what was the nature of the documentary evidence tended in support of the claims of Mr. P. Award, Oliver Romberg, J. P. K. Stevenson, and Félipe Désiré, further than that it had been formalised posterior to the date of the Convention, and these claims were therefore held by the Venezuelan Commissioner not to be within the scope of the Convention. I am unable, therefore, to offer your Lordship any opinion as to the validity of the respective claims, but as they were withdrawn under an express understanding that all the rights which appertained to the claimants were reserved to them, I think Mr. Middleton may be properly instructed to bring them to the attention of the Venezuelan Government as claims "expressly reserved."

‡ Report, pages 117, 118, 137, 190, and 191

With regard to the claims of Christian Christopher, J. Horne, and W. Thomas, I am of opinion that Mr. Middleton may be properly instructed to bring to the attention of the Venezuelan Government the promise of the Venezuelan Commissioner that he would request his Government to name another Commissioner to adjudicate upon them. As these claims involve a complaint of denial of justice against the Superior Court of Guayana, of which the brother of the Venezuelan Commissioner was President, it was reasonable that the Venezuelan Commissioner should excuse himself from entering upon their merits, and that the British Commissioner should acquiesce in his excuse on the understanding that another Commissioner should be specially appointed to adjudicate upon them.

With regard to the claim of Messrs. Schloss and Co. and Michelsen, the refusal of the Venezuelan Commissioner to entertain it seems to have been based upon a decision of the Venezuelan Chamber of Deputies, which had refused in 1861 to acknowledge it on the ground that it was not presented for recognition to the Plenipotentiaries of New Grenada, Equador, and Venezuela, who met in Bogota in the year 1837. It may be that the Venezuelan Commissioner rightly held himself to be debarred from considering this claim, without any prejudice thereby accruing to the claimants. As New Grenada appears to have paid her quota of 50 per cent. of this claim, subsequent to the meeting at Bogota, there is a fair presumption that the objection taken by the Venezuelan Chamber does not rest on any solid ground, and as the claim is advanced in respect of certain bonds of the old Republic of Columbia, and interest, and of certain bills of exchange and interest, I do not see any grounds why the claim should not be supported by your Lordship.

The Queen's Advocate to Mr. Otway.—(Received July 4.)

Temple, July 1, 1870.

Sir,

I AM favoured with your letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that you were directed by the Secretary of State to transmit to me the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Venezuela, relating to the closing to foreign trade of the ports of Maracaibo, La Vela, and Puerto Cabello, by the Venezuelan Government.

That the Representatives of France, Spain, Italy, and the North German Confederation, had, it would be seen, joined Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in protesting against the legality of the measure adopted by the Venezuelan Government, on the ground that no effective blockade of the ports in question has been established, and you were pleased to request that I would take the inclosed papers into my consideration, and report to the Secretary of State my opinion upon the proceedings of the Venezuelan Government in this case, and also as to the legality of the protest on the part of the foreign Representatives.

In obedience to the commands of the Secretary of State, I have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That I am not aware of the precise character of the insurrectionary movement in Venezuela, but I gather from the correspondence, that the contest between the insurgents and the Government hitherto recognized by Her Majesty, has not at present the attributes of a civil war, so as to impart to that Government as regards the intercourse of foreign nations with Venezuela the rights attaching to belligerency. The closing, therefore, by a decree of that Government of certain ports occupied by the insurgents against foreign commerce can only be regarded as a municipal regulation, which Venezuela would have the right to enforce as part of her revenue laws within a marine league from her coast by vessels stationed in the neighbourhood of the ports, but not by vessels cruizing on the high seas beyond that distance. It will be important for Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to ascertain what orders the Venezuelan Government proposes to give to its armed vessels in pursuance of its decrees, as if it should order them to interrupt by force the navigation of foreign vessels on the ocean beyond the limits above-mentioned, under the plea either of intercepting all commercial communications with the specified ports, or of confiscating all vessels which have contravened its decrees, I should be of opinion that such an interference with the commerce of foreign nations might be rightfully resented by them, and would give just cause for reprisals, and that Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires may properly intimate to the Venezulan Minister of Foreign Affairs that Her Majesty's Government would not be disposed to acquiesce in any such vexatious interference with peaceable British merchant-vessels.

How far I may be in error in the limited view which I have taken of the insurrectionary movement in Venezuela, it is for Her Majesty's Government to decide. It may be that the laws of Venezuela are de facto suspended in the ports in question, and it is possible that the protest of the Diplomatic Body is grounded on the view that the revolutionary party is supreme over the ports of which it holds possession. If this be the view entertained by those who have joined in the protest, other considerations of public law will govern the question of right as regards foreign vessels frequenting such ports. It would be their duty upon entering such ports to obey the authorities there established in all questions of internal administration touching the public revenue, and their obedience to such authorities could justly work no forfeiture of the vessels on leaving the ports and passing into waters still under the control of the recognized Government of the Republic. Whether the events of the contest justify this view of the ascendancy of the insurrectionary forces in the ports in question must be determined by the facts which are presented in each case, respecting which there is very little light in the papers which have been forwarded to me, as the collective note of the Diplomatic Body, referred to in Mr. Middleton's despatch No. 7, Commercial, 4th June, 1870, does not accompany it. I infer, however, from Mr. Middleton's despatch to the Diplomatic Body laying stress upon there being "no effective blockade of the ports," that they consider the contest to have the attributes of a civil war, in which case foreign vessels would have a right to enter any port under the de facto Government of the insurgents which was not blockaded by the forces of the de jure Government, and it would be the duty of the masters of such vessels upon entering such ports to obey such authorities as they might find established there in all matters of fiscal or Custom-house regulations. Upon this latter supposition the protest might be justifiable.

Temple, August 11, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas, detailing the circumstances under which the British schooner "Clemencia," which was employed as a packet between Puerto Cabello and St. Thomas, had been fired upon and damaged by the "Maparari," a war-vessel in the service of the party in hostility to the Government of the Republic of Venezuela, and reporting the steps he had taken to obtain compensation for that outrage; and he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the said papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the firing upon the British merchant-vessel "Clemencia" whilst peaceably at anchor in the seaport of Berburata, and subsequent plunder of her, if the "Maparari" had no "commission of war" or "letters of marque," was an act of piracy, the cognizance of which is within the Admiralty jurisdiction of nations; and as the Republic of Venezuela has declined to exercise her territorial jurisdiction, which is concurrent with that of the Admiralty of nations, Great Britain may properly exercise the latter, and direct the "Maparari" to be seized wherever she shall be found upon the seas by a British cruizer, and carried for adjudication on a charge of piracy before the most convenient British Court of Vice-Admiralty.

We assume that there has been no recognition on the part of Her Majesty of the insurgents who are in possession of Puerto Cabello as belligerents.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, inclosing a further report which had been received from Vice-Admiral Wellesley, respecting the attack made on the British schooner "Clemencia" by the war steamer "Maparari," belonging to the opponents of the present Government of Caracas; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this report into my consideration in connection with the papers inclosed in his letter of the 2nd instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken the said report into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, as it contains no new matter which would affect the report already agreed upon by the Law Officers, I have not thought it necessary to forward it to them, and beg to return it, that it may be placed with the other papers.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 9th instant, stating that, with reference to my report of the 1st ultimo, he was directed to transmit to me, together with the previous papers, two despatches from Mr. Middleton relative to the course pursued by the Venezuelan Government in closing certain ports of the Republic; and to request that I would again take this matter into my consideration, and report to your Lordship any further observations I might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, assuming the Government established at the present time at Caracas to be recognized by Her Majesty's Government as the Government of the Republic of Venezuela, I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government is bound in comity to respect its decrees for the regulation of the commerce of British subjects with any of the ports of Venezuela, unless those ports are not only not in the possession, but also not under the dominion of the Republic. Whether the three ports to which the Decree of the Venezuelan Government applies are or are not in the possession and under the dominion of the Republic, is a question partly of fact, partly of law. That they are not in the actual possession of the forces of the Republic is apparent, but the Government of the Republic asserts its right of dominion over them, and it appears from the Protocol of the Diplomatic Body, signed at Caracas on the 22nd June, 1870, to which the signature of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires is attached, that the Powers whom they represent hold the so-called Government, in whose name General Hernandez claims to act within those ports, to have ceased to exist since 17th April last, and refuses to recognize any state of war between him and the Government of the Republic which would entitle him to establish a belligerent blockade of the three ports. Under these circumstances, I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government will be consistent if it recognizes the right of the Government of the Republic to close for a time the three ports against foreign commerce on the alleged ground that it is unable to prevent the Customs on foreign commerce in those ports being wrongfully diverted from the Treasury of the Republic, to which they of right belong.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the inclosed letter from the Colonial Office, containing copies of a correspondence which has passed between the Lieutenant-Governor of Trinidad and the Venezuelan Consul-General in that Colony relative to the proceedings of certain war-steamers which have been cruizing in those waters under Venezuelan colours, but which have been declared by the de facto Government of Venezuela to be pirates, and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether any and, if so, what instructions should be given to the Governors of Her Majesty's West India Possessions on this subject.

A letter from the Admiralty on the same subject was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it is difficult to advise your Lordship as to any general instructions which should be given to the Governors of Her Majesty's West Indian Possessions on the subject of these vessels further than they should give every facility to the Venezuelan Consul-General if either of the vessels mentioned in his despatch should enter a British port, and he should wish to arrest it in the British Vice-Admiralty Court with a view to recover possession of it as the property of his Government.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a despatch from the Governor of Trinidad, submitting a correspondence which has taken place between his Excellency and the leading merchants of that island with regard to the inconvenience arising from the continued presence in the harbour, of Venezuelan ships of war, and to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon and as to any steps which should be taken in the matter. Mr. Hammond was also pleased to add, for my information, that the civil war still continues in certain provinces of Venezuela, but that the Government of General Guzman Blanco, in whose service the vessels complained of are, is recognized by Her Majesty's Government as the legitimate Government of the Republic.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Governor Longden should be instructed to report to the Earl of Kimberley if the "Guzman Blanco" should in fact interfere with any British vessel, and, if so, under what circumstances, and also to report whether the Government of General Guzman Blanco has issued any prohibition against foreign vessels trading with the ports of Guiria.

It does not appear that the merchants of Trinidad have any ground of complaint against the Commander of the "Guzman Blanco" on account of any act hitherto done by him, but they say that the presence of that vessel in British waters is a standing menace to all those who are desirous of trading with the neighbouring coasts, whereby the trade with those ports is at a standstill. I am of opinion that at present there is no case made out for the interference of Her Majesty's Government, but that your Lordship may properly request to be furnished with fuller information as to the conditions under which trade is permitted, if at all, with the coast in the hands of the insurgents.

No. 290.

The Queen's Advocate to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 4.)

Temple, March 3, 1870.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Spring Rice's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter and its inclosure from the India Office upon the subject of two marriages performed at Zanzibar, the validity of which is questioned. That the first marriage was solemnized in 1865 at the British Consulate, in the presence of Dr. Seward, then Acting Consul, under the authority which he conceived was vested in him as Registrar of Marriages appointed under the Act of 1852 of the Indian Government. That at that time no marriage warrant had been supplied by the Secretary of State to Her Majesty's Consul at Zanzibar, and that the marriage, therefore, could not be celebrated under the Act 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68. That the second marriage was solemnized in 1869 by Bishop Tozer in the "Bishop's Chapel, Zanzibar," and was certified to by Dr. Kirk, acting as British Consul, as "Registrar of Marriages" under the Government of India, and that although a marriage warrant had been supplied to Mr. Churchill, the Consul in 1868, Dr. Kirk appears to have thought that it was personal to the Consul, and did not give the necessary authority to anyone else. That as it has always been held that the warrant applies equally to the Consul and to any person duly authorized to act in his absence, your Lordship would have no doubt as to Dr. Kirk's powers, were it not that his appointment as Acting Consul was authorized by the Bombay Government, and not by the Secretary of State. Mr. Spring Rice was therefore to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion, firstly, whether your Lordship is right in assuming that a marriage warrant applies to the person authorized to act for the Consul in his absence; secondly, whether the recognition of Dr. Kirk's appointment by the Bombay Government was sufficient for the purpose; and thirdly, whether the two marriages performed at Zanzibar, under the circumstances above stated, are legal, and, if not, what steps should be taken to render them so. Mr. Spring Rice also transmitted some volumes containing the Acts alluded to in the letter from the India Office bearing on the subject of the solemnization of marriages.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That (1) I am of opinion that the warrant of Her Majesty's Secretary of State to solemnize marriages would apply to the person duly authorized to act in the absence of any Consul to whom the warrant had been directed. What constitutes due authorization will depend upon the instructions issued by Her Majesty's Secretary of State.

(2.) I consider the recognition of Dr. Kirk's appointment by the Bombay Government would not be sufficient for the purposes of 11 and 12 Vict., cap 68.

(3.) The validity of the two marriages for English purposes is, in my opinion, questionable. Whether a special Act should be passed to declare the two marriages valid will depend very much upon the question whether your Lordship proposes to bring into Parliament this session a Statute to amend the Consular Marriage Act, in accordance with the recommendation of the Marriage Laws Commission. If your Lordship should so propose, these and other marriages elsewhere solemnized abroad, under circumstances which render their validity doubtful, might by a general provision be declared valid.

The Law Officers of the Crown to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 11.)

Temple, April 11, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Otway's letter of the 4th instant, stating:—

1. That your Lordship had desired him to consult us upon a question that had arisen as to whether Her Majesty's Government possess rights of jurisdiction in Zanzibar over certain natives of Kutch (an Indian State under the protection of the British Government), who, by neglecting to enroll themselves on the British Consular Register in accordance with the provisions of the Order in Council of the 9th of August, 1866, had waived their claim to British protection and sought instead to place themselves under the protection of the Sultan and under the laws of Zanzibar, which permit the acquiring and holding of slaves.

2. That the important point at issue is whether Her Majesty's Government could interfere to prevent those Kutchees from holding and trading in slaves (for which object they had sought the Sultan's protection), and he was therefore to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the following points:—

1. Whether Her Majesty's Government, acting under existing Treaties with Kutch and the Rao's Proclamations (contained in the accompanying papers) could exercise jurisdiction over Kutchees who had failed to enroll themselves on the British Consular Register; and, if not, what further steps could be taken to enable Her Majesty's Government to assume such rights of jurisdiction, which the Rao was willing that they should exercise.

2. How far would Her Majesty's Government be justified in the exercise of such jurisdiction, in interfering with the simple holding of domestic slaves by these Kutchees in a country where slavery is legal.

3. That he was to add that a Committee appointed for the consideration of those questions would meet on Tuesday, the 12th instant, and that your Lordship would be glad, if possible, to be favoured with our reply before that time.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that it is competent for Her Majesty's Government under the circumstances to prohibit Kutchees, whether residing in the territory of the Rao or in Zanzibar, carrying on the Slave Trade, or even holding domestic slaves; and that the prohibition can be enforced by proceeding criminally against all Kutchees contravening it who may be found in the territories of the Rao, or on the high seas, and by liberating without compensation all slaves belonging to them which may be found on British territories or on the high seas.

Such would be the limits of the interference of the Government if the question arose in the case of a civilized and independent nation. What powers, however, are to be dealt with on the footing of their being civilized and independent is a question of discretion and good sense and not of law; and whether the Sultan af Zanzibar is to be so dealt with is for the Government to decide. It may very well be that the despatch of the Governor-General set out at pp. 26 and 27 of the printed papers before us expresses the true view of the subject and the one on which Her Majesty's Government may be disposed to act. The case is hardly one for the application of strict principles of international law; and the evils to be interfered with appear from the papers before us to be of the most cruel and detestable description. Under these circumstances we are unable to advise Her Majesty's Government to place any impediment from this country in the way of the apparently salutary action of the Government of India.

Separate Report of the Queen's Advocate.

That upon the information contained in the accompanying paper, I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government has no title to exercise jurisdiction within the dominions of the Sultan of Zanzibar in matters of slave-holding or of the Slave Trade, over natives of Kutch who are not enrolled in the British Consular Register.

Assuming that jurisdiction in such matters over all Kutchees residing at Zanzibar may have been granted to Her Majesty by the Rao of Kutch under his Proclamation of 24th April, 1869, I do not find in the accompanying papers any Treaty or Capitulation with the Sultan of Zanzibar, authorizing Her Majesty's Government to exercise such jurisdiction within his dominions; and without the previous consent of the Sultan, I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government cannot rightfully authorize Her Majesty's Consul at Zanzibar to exercise any such jurisdiction.

I agree with the Attorney-General and the Solictor-General in their opinion that all Kutchees may be prosecuted criminally within the territories of the Rao for holding slaves or dealing in slaves, whilst they were resident in Zanzibar, notwithstanding the possession of domestic slaves may be authorized by the territorial law of Zanzibar, and that all slaves belonging to Kutchees may be liberated by the British authorities if they should be found within British territory or on the high seas.

Upon the expediency of Her Majesty's Government dealing with the Sultan of Zanzibar upon different principles from those which govern its conduct towards a civilized and independent nation I offer no opinion, but I would remark that the questions raised by your Lordship, as I understand them, have regard to the exercise of jurisdiction, which presupposes right, by the British Consul at Zanzibar in the British Consular Court, which has been established there in virtue of a Convention with the Sultan of Zanzibar.

The rightful extent of the powers which Her Majesty's Government may delegate to that Court must therefore depend upon the terms of the Convention, and as regards that Convention its interpretation must be governed, in my opinion, by the same rules which apply to Conventions with civilized nations.

Temple, May 4, 1870.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified to us in Mr. Charles Spring Rice's letter of the 6th ultimo, stating that a question having been raised as to the validity of two marriages performed at Zanzibar by clergymen of the Church of England, under the circumstances stated in the accompanying papers,* and the Queen's Advocate having stated his opinion in the accompanying report that their validity was questionable, he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour you with our opinion upon that point, as the present view of the Queen's Advocate did not coincide with that taken by the Law Officers in their report of December 14, 1866, who then stated that a marriage performed at Zanzibar by an ordained priest would be valid.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we agree with the opinion of the Law Officers expressed in their report of December 14, 1866, that the two marriages are valid. We do not think that they fall within the operation of the 14 and 15 Vict., cap. 40, and the Indian Act No. 5 of 1852, passed in pursuance of it, nor of the 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68; but we think them valid because they are in conformity with what was the law of England before Lord Hardwick's Act (26 Geo. II., cap. 33), and, inasmuch as that Act does not extend to British subjects in Zanzibar, with the law now applicable to British subjects in Zanzibar.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. COLLIER.
J. D. COLERIDGE.

I am not prepared to dissent from the opinion of the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General, that these marriages are good marriages from the necessity of the case, as it was impossible for the parties to comply with the lex loci, owing to religious difficulties, and there seems to have been no statutory provision in force at Zanzibar to facilitate the marriages of British subjects. But I adhere to my opinion, that doubts may be raised as to the validity of these marriages, and the certificates would not be legal proof of the circumstances under which the marriages were solemnized. It would be necessary, in my opinion, in each case, to show that it was impossible for the parties to avail themselves of the lex loci, and as the provisions of the Indian Act had ceased to apply to the marriages of British subjects at Zanzibar, there was no Statute law which governed the celebration of the marriage of the parties.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 21, 1871 | Losses of British subjects during civil war in the Province of Entre Rios. As to instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Minister on the documentary evidence required by the Argentine Government before claims can be compensated | 1 |
| 2 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 7, | As to the course to be taken by Her Majesty's Government on refusal of the Argentine Government to compensate British subjects for losses during civil war in the Province of Entre Rios | 1 |
| 3 | Law Officers .. | Oct. 9, | On claim of Mr. Williams to recover the value of certain property seized by the Argentine Government, which formed the subject of a law-suit with the Municipality of Buenos Ayres. Her Majesty's Government would be justified in interference, the land having been held by the claimant for more than forty years before the Prescription Act of July 1867 | 2 |
| 4 | Queen's Advocate | 20, | As to disputes between the Argentine Government and the Central Argentine Railway Company. Concession to the Railway Company and the contract should be sent before opinion is given | 3 |
| 5 | Queen's Advocate | Dec. 13, | As to steps to be taken by Her Majesty's Government on the murder of Mr. Weguelin, of the Alexandra Colony, on the San Javier River. Cannot take measures to prevent recurrence of similar events | 3 |

BELGIUM.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 6 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 9, 1871 | Belgian mail-packets on entering port of Dover are exempt from harbour dues, except under a Postal Convention with Belgium. Distinction to be made between national vessels the property of either Government, and those of private Companies, which are liable to port dues | 4 |
| 7 | Law Officers .. | Dec. 20, | The arrest of the Belgian mail-steamer "Belgique" was illegal, and in contravention to VIIth Article of the Convention of the 19th October, 1844, and the general law of nations. Course to be pursued to obtain her release | 4 |

BOLIVIA.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 8 | Queen's Advocate | Oct. 10, 1871 | As to the Decree issued by President of Bolivia on subject of diplomatic reclamations in that Republic. No objection to the rules laid down for foreign subjects in the prosecution of their claims | 5 |

[1182]

BRAZIL.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 9 | Queen's Advocate | June 20, 1871 | As to the imprisonment of Mr. Fox, superintendent, and Mr. Fryer, traffic manager of the railway in the Province of San Paulo, on a charge of homicide in connection with an accident. Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro should be instructed to see that these parties should have a fair trial | 6 |
| 10 | Law Officers | 29, | On Project of Law for abolition of slavery in Brazil. It would be legal for British subjects to enter into contracts with slaves for the purpose of purchasing their freedom under certain conditions | 6 |
| 11 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 7, | As to the claim on Brazilian Government by the North Brazilian Road Steamer Company, for indemnity for losses on being prevented from working their vessels. Her Majesty's Government not justified in interfering in this case | 7 |
| 12 | Queen's Advocate | Oct. 25, | Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro should not be instructed, without further information, to interfere on the imprisonment of Mr. Lyde, the acting agent of the Queen Insurance Company, of Liverpool and London, in the action of Messrs. Figueredo and Brothers, furniture dealers, for damages on destruction of their property by fire. Cannot recommend general instructions on imprisonment of British subjects at Rio. Each case must depend on its own merits | 7 |
| 13 | Queen's Advocate | Nov. 2, | Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere at present with the judgment given by Brazilian Law Courts in the action brought against the Queen Insurance Company at Rio de Janeiro by Messrs. Figueredo and Brothers, whereby Mr. Lyde, the agent of the Company, was sentenced to a year's imprisonment | 8 |

CENTRAL AMERICA.

NICARAGUA.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 14 | Queen's Advocate | Jan. 30, 1871 | As to claim of Mr. H. Goussen on account of contributions levied on him by forced loans by Nicaraguan Government. Her Majesty's Government may demand reimbursement of sums levied on him, with interest, as well as expenses on obtaining legal documents, but cannot claim for damages on account of the detention of himself and family for refusing to submit to Decree. He ought to have paid the forced loan under protest | 8 |
| 15 | Queen's Advocate | Dec. 14, | Further on claim of Mr. H. Goussen. Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Guatemala to delay proceeding with the case until he has ascertained whether the claimant is a naturalized Nicaraguan subject by his alleged marriage with a Nicaraguan woman and his acquisition of landed property in that country | 9 |

SALVADOR.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 16 | Queen's Advocate | Nov. 24, 1871 | On claim of Mr. Ch. E. Comyn for arrest and imprisonment by Salvadorian authorities on an alleged charge of conspiracy to assassinate the then President of that Republic; but, according to a letter from a Mr. Gregory, Mr. Comyn joined a political party in the State, and, if so, he would be little entitled to the protection of Her Majesty's Government, but, if not, he might have some claim to compensation | 10 |

CHILE.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 17 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 3, 1871 | As to the validity of the marriage between two British subjects at the British Vice-Consulate at Coronel. Vice-Consul Schwager's letter raises the doubt, as, by the law of Chile, the civil ceremony ought to have preceded or followed the religious ceremony | 11 |
| 18 | Queen's Advocate | Dec. 21, | As to instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to assist Messrs. Templeman and Co. with regard to their mining property endangered by proceedings of the Governor of Freisnia, in the Province of Altacama | 11 |

CHINA.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 19 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 22, 1871 | No reason to alter opinion of the 31st January last relative to the capture of the British ships "Sophia Rickmers" and "Robert Rickmers" by French vessels of war, and taken into port of Saigon | 11 |
| 20 | Queen's Advocate | 22, | Further respecting the capture of the British vessel "Robert Rickmers" in Chinese waters by the French naval squadron. Rule of French Prize Courts as to sale of an enemy's vessel to a neutral after commencement of war cannot be impugned. Her Majesty's Consul at Shanghae was wrong, therefore, in protesting against capture of the vessel | 12 |
| 21 | Queen's Advocate | 23, | As to amended Extradition Ordinance of Hong Kong and Macao of 1869; no objection to the confirmation by Her Majesty | 12 |
| 22 | Law Officers | 23, | The non-registration in Her Majesty's Consulate of Sister Louise, a native of Ireland, and one of the Sisters of Charity who was massacred at Tien-tsin, does not affect her international status as a British subject in any claim Her Majesty's Government wish to raise against the Chinese authorities | 12 |
| 23 | Law Officers | May 11, | As to the reversal by the Supreme Court at Shanghae of a case tried before the Consular Court at Taiwan. Approves conduct of Sir E. Hornby on the question. Expediency of compromising the difference with Mr. Wade by not questioning the propriety of his order to Mr. Hewlett not to publish Sir E. Hornby's decision in Island of Formosa, nor the wisdom of the principle on which Her Majesty's Minister desires to act | 13 |
| 24 | Law Officers | Nov. 30, | Instructions to Governor of Hong Kong respecting application of the Chinese Government for the rendition of a Chinese criminal after the expiration of his sentence at Hong Kong, are right and proper | 14 |

FRANCE.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 25 | Queen's Advocate | Jan. 4, 1871 | The French Government is justified in denying the right of the Prussian Government to consider the officers and crews of captured merchant-vessels to be liable to be treated as prisoners of war | 14 |
| 26 | Law Officers | 9, | As to the proposed additional telegraph cable between coasts of England and France. Their former opinion was justified from the accuracy of the statements in letter from Post Office | 15 |
| 27 | Law Officers | 16, | As to complaint of Mr. Robert Wm. Kirby, established at La Torté Imbault, in Department of Loire-et-Cher, against the ill-treatment he and his family have received from German troops, by levying requisitions, and for acts of violence during the war. Instructions to Lord Lyons correct. Resident British subjects liable to the evils inseparable from war | 16 |

1871

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 28 | Law Officers .. | Jan. 20, 1871 | No objection to the French lighthouse authorities applying to the Trinity House to enable them to obtain materials, &c., for their lamps from English sources, as they cannot procure them, as usual, from Paris | 16 |
| 29 | Queen's Advocate | 31, | As to request of Mr. Peter A. Rickmers, a native of Heligoland, for interference to obtain release of the "Sophie Rickmers," which was captured and taken into port of Saigon by French cruizers. Not a case for intervention of Her Majesty's Government. French Prize Courts will not recognize the sale of an enemy's ship in a neutral port after commencement of war | 16 |
| 30 | Law Officers .. | Feb. 27, | On complaint of Messrs. Montgredien, Ellerby, and Co. against the breach of contract, by the French Government, which they had entered into for the supply of flour for revictualling of Paris. Refusal of French Government to pay before delivery of the flour is no breach of contract | 17 |
| 31 | Law Officers .. | 28, | No general rule can be laid down for guidance of Her Majesty's Ambassador in Paris on application of British subjects for indemnity for losses alleged to have been sustained by them during war | 18 |
| 32 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 6, | As to the reply to be given to solicitor of the executors of the late Marquis of Hertford, who has requested that Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris may receive Lord Hertford's will, and transmit it to the Court of Probate in England | 18 |
| 33 | Law Officers .. | 23, | On question to be asked in House of Commons, whether the French Government would be liable to compensate British subjects for losses and damage to their property during the late war. British subjects not entitled to claim any compensation from French authorities | 19 |
| 34 | Queen's Advocate | April 6, | On the application of certain Irishmen who had served in the French army to the Embassy in Paris, for pecuniary aid to return to their own country. Not expedient to lay down any rule against the repatriation of British subjects who had violated the Foreign Enlistment Act of 1870. Instructions may be given to assist them under certain conditions | 19 |
| 35 | Queen's Advocate | 6, | Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires will not have incurred any liability on account of Her Majesty's Government, in event of disregard being shown to a certificate of protection which he had granted to a Mr. Bartlett, a horse-dealer, on his own declaration that the horses which were required by the Central Committee of Paris were bonâ fide his own property | 19 |
| 36 | Law Officers .. | 10, | On claims of Mr. Charles Stewart for losses which he had sustained by the occupation of his houses in Paris by French troops during the war. Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere if he receives similar treatment to that of French subjects | 20 |
| 37 | Queen's Advocate | 15, | Reply to be sent to Rev. J. G. Orger, as to the validity in England of a marriage contracted before the Mayor of Dinan. The marriage will be valid, provided the formalities required by the law of France have been complied with | 21 |
| 38 | Queen's Advocate | 21, | Application of the engineering firm, Messrs. Varral, Elwell, and Middleton, to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Paris, for protection in case the Commune called on them to manufacture arms. Should be granted as regards their persons, but not for their property, if seized | 21 |
| 39 | Law Officers .. | 29, | Messrs. E. W. Johnson and Co. have no claim of right to compensation against the Government at Versailles on account of the seizure by the insurgents in Paris of a cargo of coals shipped by them for delivery in that city. The good offices of Her Majesty's Government may be given to British subjects in case French Government should entertain a desire to compensate such losses | 21 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 40 | Queen's Advocate | May 3, 1871 | Claim of Mr. George J. Spelman, a British subject, for a pecuniary indemnity against the French Government for arrest by the Communist authorities in Paris cannot be properly made unless Her Majesty's Government recognized the insurgents as a de facto Government, which was not the case | 22 |
| 41 | Queen's Advocate | 16, | Application of Mr. J. R. Curtis, a British-born subject naturalized in Prussia, to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Versailles for his official intervention | 23 |
| 42 | Law Officers .. | June 10, | On claim of Messrs. Carver, Darbishire, and Co., on account of the destruction by fire of a quantity of provisions, which they were compelled by the Communist authorities to store in the Grenier d'Abondance. They have no privileges over French citizens, and they should ascertain and adopt the same course that French citizens pursue in like case | 23 |
| 43 | Law Officers .. | 10, | As to claim of Mr. Myers for compensation for loss of his merchandize burnt in the recent conflagration in the docks of La Villette. Before opinion is given on general instructions to be sent to Lord Lyons in cases of a like nature, wish to know on what conditions the goods were received in docks at La Villette | 24 |
| 44 | Queen's Advocate | 17, | The reply to the inquiry of Her Majesty's Consul at Bordeaux, whether service on board a British merchant ship should be considered as residence in the United Kingdom, under provisions of the Naturalization Act of 1870, should be, that it cannot be so considered | 24 |
| 45 | Law Officers .. | 20, | As to reply to be returned to Mr. George Hewitt, who wanted to know if he was entitled to compensation for the destruction of two houses, his property, at Asnières, burnt by shells during civil war | 25 |
| 46 | Law Officers .. | 20, | The French Government not entitled to renounce the Commercial Treaty with Great Britain without a year's notice, but may give notice any day they desire to do so. Want further information respecting paragraph on page 3 in Second Supplementary Convention on subject of "drawbacks," before giving opinion as to power of the Government to modify the Treaty | 25 |
| 47 | Law Officers .. | 21, | Instructions to be sent to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, on claim of Mr. Alan Metcalfe, for intervention on seizure by the Commune of a quantity of compressed hay exported by him to Paris, and on similar claims. These claimants must follow the course adopted by loyal French citizens in bringing their respective losses before the French Government | 26 |
| 48 | Law Officers .. | 21, | Reply to be given to Messrs. Robert Von Glehn and Sons, on their request for assistance of Her Majesty's Government to obtain indemnity from French Government in consequence of the destruction by fire at Villette of a quantity of coffee belonging to them in the bonded warehouse of the Magasins Généraux | 26 |
| 49 | Law Officers .. | 24, | Cannot demand compensation from French Government for the imprisonment of Mr. Frederick John Apel in the fortress of Bitche, as he was domiciled in Germany at the time he set out from Neustadt, and was travelling under the protection of German papers, selling maps to the German army, and he was captured when sketching a French fortress, and that if he was a natural-born British subject he had forfeited that claim by being employed in a hostile act at the time of his arrest | 27 |
| 50 | Law Officers .. | 26, | Further opinion on subject of the application of Mr. Myers for intervention to obtain compensation for loss of his property which was bonded, and burnt in the docks of La Villette. The warehouse being under the surveillance of the French Douane did not constitute the French Government as bailee of the goods | 27 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 51 | Law Officers .. | July 5, 1871 | As to claim of Mr. J. F. Boyd for loss which he alleged he had sustained in sending provisions to Paris during the raising of the siege, but which he forwarded on faith of the notification published in the London papers on behalf of the French Embassy. Proper course for him to pursue, but Her Majesty's Government should not present claim to French Government | 28 |
| 52 | Queen's Advocate | July 19, 1871 | Application of Mr. Stuart Mackenzie for interference of Her Majesty's Government to obtain compensation for losses on account of having to lodge French troops during the war, and the plunder of his store at Asnières by them, should not be granted with respect to billeting of French troops, but he has, primâ facie, a claim on account of the lax discipline of the troops; but he must give evidence of his losses | 28 |
| 53 | Law Officers .. | 28, | As to instructions to be given to Lord Lyons, on claims of British subjects resident in France, to compensation for losses of movable property by destruction or plunder, during the recent military operations, in houses hired by them, and specially on the case of Miss Galloway. Must wait to ascertain what course French Government intends to pursue with respect to similar claims of loyal French citizens | 29 |
| 54 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 11, | Instructions to be given to Lord Lyons on claim of Messrs. Geipel and Co. for compensation for a cargo of coals and coke belonging to them on board the "Anna Wilhelmina," which was captured by a French cruizer, and condemned by a French Prize Court. They should apply to the Conseil d'Etat without delay | 30 |
| 55 | Queen's Advocate | 11, | Course that Mr. Stuart Mackenzie should follow, on his claim for compensation on account of goods stolen from his stores by French troops in service of French Government | 30 |
| 56 | Queen's Advocate | 14, | Instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Consul at Calais as to the validity of marriages between a British subject and a French subject, solemnized in France | 31 |
| 57 | Queen's Advocate | 28, | Lawsuit between Mr. Candwell and Mr. Cohen at Boulogne. Charges against the judicial authorities by the former. Instructions should be sent to Lord Lyons to inform him that there has not been such a denial of justice in his case as to warrant the interference of Her Majesty's Government, and he must have recourse to his legal adviser on the question | 31 |
| 58 | Law Officers .. | Sept. 15, | The French Government cannot, without notice, according to to Article XXI of Treaty of Commerce of the 23rd January, 1860, raise the ad valorem duty on British mineral oils beyond 25 per cent. specified in Article XVI | 31 |
| 59 | Queen's Advocate | 16, | Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in interfering diplomatically, on claim of owners of the British vessel "Dream" for damage through collision with the French vessel "Isère," as requested by Messrs. Lawless, Nelson, and Jones. The French Courts open to their clients to sue the commander of the "Isère" | 32 |
| 60 | Queen's Advocate | 18, | On complaint of Mr. Fairman on his arrest and imprisonment in Paris, and claim for compensation. His conduct was not free from blame, and therefore he is not entitled to compensation under present French Government | 32 |
| 61 | Law Officers .. | 20, | On the claim of Mr. John Hanson, a British subject resident at St. Malo, for compensation on account of his imprisonment on a charge of being an accomplice, with his son, in a robbery against the London and South Eastern Railway Company, but who was acquitted, though his son was found guilty and sentenced | 33 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 62 | Queen's Advocate | Sept. 26, 1871 | Complaint of Messrs. Smith, Fleming, and Co., on the enforced duty at Havre on a cargo of coffee, shipped on board the "Anazi" in alleged contravention of Treaties of Commerce. Before giving decision as to instructions to Lord Lyons, want text of French Law of the 9th July last, under which new duties are imposed, Treaty between France and Portugal, and Decree of French Government of July 1867 | 33 |
| 63 | Queen's Advocate | 28, | Further as to complaint of Messrs. Smith, Fleming, and Co., on enforcement of duties levied on a cargo of coffee at Havre, on board the "Anazi." Before giving definite instructions to Lord Lyons, want more precise information as to the nature of the authority under which cargoes consigned to merchants domiciled in France, have over cargoes of merchants not so domiciled | 34 |
| 64 | Queen's Advocate | Oct. 7, | Further respecting the enforcement of duties on a cargo of coffee at Havre, on board the "Anazi." The Decree issued by French Government of the 12th July last does not alter views already expressed. Her Majesty's Government would not be entitled to remonstrate against it | 35 |
| 65 | Law Officers .. | 11, | Claim of Mr. Boyd against the French Government may be properly brought to the notice of that Government | 35 |
| 66 | Queen's Advocate | 16, | As to the claim of two persons named Bocchini, and Smart, implicated in the late revolutionary proceedings in Paris, to British protection. Inquiry respecting the former will be made by the Home Department. With respect to the latter, Mr. Eugène George Smart has no claim to be protected against the operation of the law of France when charged with a criminal offence, but may obtain for him a fair trial, and, if possible, a remission of sentence | 36 |
| 67 | Queen's Advocate | 21, | No grounds for altering opinion already given relative to the enforcement of duties levied on a cargo of coffee belonging to Messrs. Smith, Fleming, and Co., shipped on board the "Anazi" | 36 |
| 68 | Law Officers .. | 23, | Suggestion of Mr. West, Her Majesty's Minister at Paris, whether similar privileges conceded by French Government to Alsace and Lorraine could not be claimed by Her Majesty's Government under the XIXth Article of Treaty of Commerce of 1860 is open to doubt, and could be fairly contested by French Government as not within the spirit of the Treaty | 36 |
| 69 | Queen's Advocate | 27, | Further as to claim of Mr. Stuart McKenzie for losses by French troops being billeted upon him during the war. Has no special privileges over French subjects, and must adopt the same course as they do in prosecuting their claims on French Government | 37 |
| 70 | Queen's Advocate | 31, | Arrest and imprisonment of Mr. Fairman and his son in Paris was brought on by his own conduct, and former Report on his case was decided on the consideration of his own admissions, and he is not entitled to compensation | 37 |
| 71 | Queen's Advocate | Nov. 7, | Course that should be pursued by Messrs. Glehn and Co. on the destruction of a quantity of coffee belonging to them by fire at La Villette. Reluctance of French subjects to press their claims does not warrant the intervention of Her Majesty's Government in their case | 38 |
| 72 | Queen's Advocate | 9, | As to claims of Messrs. de Mattos and Greene against the French Government arising out of contracts made with French War Department during the war. They should be informed their claims should be sent in to the Committee appointed by the National Assembly to consider those claims | 38 |

1871

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 73 | Queen's Advocate | Nov. 17, 1871 | As to claims of Messrs. Rossel, Fehr, and Fromm for compensation for losses sustained by the increased duties charged on mineral oils by the custom-house at Dunkirk, in violation of Treaty stipulations. They should be informed negotiations are pending on the subject of these duties, and in proper time their losses, as well as those of other British subjects, will be brought before the French Government .. .. .. .. .. | 39 |
| 74 | Queen's Advocate | 24, | Complaint of Messrs. Wade and Co., of Hull, against freight levied by the French Government on cargoes of two German ships, "Johanna" and "Stadt Frankfort," captured by French cruizers during late war, is not well founded .. | 40 |
| 75 | Law Officers .. | Dec. 5, | Messrs. Glehn and Sons should be informed that their claims for destruction of their property at Paris during the operations against the Commune must be brought by them before the ordinary Tribunals of France, before Her Majesty's Government can interfere in their favour .. .. | 40 |
| 76 | Queen's Advocate | 11, | Her Majesty's Government should decline official support to petition of Mr. Kennelly to the French Government on behalf of Young's Paraffin Light and Mineral Oil Company with reference to their losses from the increased duties on mineral oils imported into France. If the French Courts decree performance of contracts of the Company under altered system, may make further representation to Her Majesty's Government .. .. .. .. | 40 |
| 77 | Queen's Advocate | 14, | May use good offices with French Government in favour of the Coatbridge Oil Company requested by Mr. Wilson, so as to procure permission for that Company to fulfil its contracts, which the Court of Douai considers them bound to do under the same conditions as they were entered into, the altered import duties being ruinous to the Company . | 41 |
| 78 | Queen's Advocate | 20, | Further respecting claim of Messrs. Wade and Sons against French Government arising out of the seizure of the vessels "Johanna" and "Stadt Frankfort." Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere with the discretion of the Prize Courts in the present case .. .. .. .. | 42 |
| 79 | Law Officers .. | 21, | As to the claim of a British subject named Hetherington, for arrest and imprisonment on a charge of having taken part in the insurrection of Paris. Her Majesty's Government cannot claim for him, and other British subjects similarly situated, to be treated more favourably than loyal French citizens .. .. .. .. .. .. | 42 |
| 80 | Queen's Advocate | 30, | Before reply is sent to letter of Mr. Stuart McKenzie, renewing request for interference of Her Majesty's Government to obtain compensation for damage to his property by French troops, Decree of the 15th June, 1871, should be procured, as it may only refer to losses by billeting of troops, and not to plunder of property .. .. .. | 42 |
| 81 | Queen's Advocate | 30, | As to the destruction of property of British subjects at Mohilla by bombardment of the French gun-boats. If notice was given, and property could be removed to a place of safety, Her Majesty's Government cannot remonstrate .. | 43 |

GENERAL.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 82 | Law Officers .. | Jan. 4, 1871 | As to reply to be given to the Indian Government, whether the interdict against the entrance of armed ships of belligerents into British ports with prizes is to be extended to cases of prizes of war in charge of prize crews. May only enter British ports under stress of weather, or want of necessaries .. .. .. .. .. | 43 |
| 83 | Queen's Advocate | 11, | As to the coaling of two belligerent vessels—the French vessel of war "Guyenne" and the North-German vessel "Augusta." The former was properly stopped by order of the Admiral of the station off Queenstown, having no need of coals, while the latter required them to carry her to Madeira .. .. .. .. .. | 44 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 84 | Law Officers .. | Jan. 12, 1871 | As to former Report on subject of the vessels "Sharpshooter" and "Steady." Request of Mr. Cheetham, the owner, for immediate release of the latter without application to Court of Admiralty. Must register himself as owner, and give security to twice the value .. .. | 45 |
| 85 | Law Officers .. | 12, | Her Majesty's Government should not interfere on the proposed reception by a private person at Folkestone of a number of wounded French soldiers, who were sent over from Boulogne for medical treatment, as stated by Lord Robert Montague to the Admiralty .. .. .. | 45 |
| 86 | Law Officers .. | 18, | Her Majesty's Government should have further information before acceding to claim of Mr. Bates to compensation for detention of the "Sharpshooter" .. .. .. | 45 |
| 87 | Law Officers .. | Feb. 24, | As to instructions to be given to the Governor of New South Wales relative to the exemption of French vessels of war carrying mails from restrictions as to supply of coal under Circular of the 19th July last. The Commander of the French vessel of war "Belliqueuse" should be told he would lose the privileges of his ship if he even threatened hostilities .. .. .. .. .. | 46 |
| 88 | Law Officers .. | 28, | Further respecting the claim of Mr. Bates against Her Majesty's Government on the detention of the "Sharpshooter." Discrepancy in statement of Messrs. Lilley and Gardner. If the vessel was detained and the loading deferred, it would be better to accede to the claim .. | 47 |
| 89 | Law Officers .. | Mar. 18, | Further respecting the claim of Mr. Bates for detention of the "Sharpshooter." Reports from the Treasury render it doubtful whether it could be successfully resisted. Advisable to pay it. Queen's Advocate doubts as to claim of Mr. Bates being bonâ fide to extent advanced, but better not resist it for sake of reducing amount .. .. | 47 |
| 90 | Law Officers .. | 18, | As to the reply that should be sent to the Memorial of certain Scotch merchants relative to an alleged loss to them owing to a communication to the "Edinburgh Gazette" with respect to the blockade of Hamburgh. Her Majesty's Government not responsible for error in the communication to the Governor of Heligoland by the French Admiral as to date of commencement .. .. .. .. .. | 48 |
| 91 | Queen's Advocate | 31, | As to contribution to British Church Establishment abroad. The first paragraph of the 10th section of the Naturalization Act of 1870 precludes a woman, the natural-born subject of the Queen at the time of her marriage to a foreign subject, to privileges of British subjects as long as he is alive; and if she become a widow, she cannot be deemed a British subject unless the State to which her husband belonged allow her to renounce her allegiance to it .. .. .. .. .. .. | 48 |
| 92 | Queen's Advocate | Apr. 15, | As to the national status of an alien-born woman married to a British subject, and who may become a widow, and resident in her own or any foreign country. The privileges obtained under the Consular Act 6 Geo. IV, cap. 87, still hold good .. .. .. .. .. | 49 |
| 93 | Queen's Advocate | 17, | Suggesting substitution of certain words in form of despatch authorizing Acting Consuls to solemnize marriages abroad . | 49 |
| 94 | Queen's Advocate | 18, | Proceedings of Lord Canterbury, Governor of Victoria, on arrival of the French ship of war "Belliqueuse" at Melbourne, and departure after taking in stores and coal, should be approved .. .. .. .. | 50 |
| 95 | Queen's Advocate | May 6, | Should concur in view expressed by the Indian Government, that troop-ships should be considered as vessels of war within the meaning of the Neutrality Proclamation of the 19th July, 1870, they not being exempt from rules with respect to supply of coals .. .. .. .. | 50 |

| 96 | Law Officers .. | June 12, 1871 | The Court of Divorce has no power to issue an attachment against Mr. Bonar, Her Majesty's Minister at Berne, as he is out of its jurisdiction; neither would such be issued without due notice. No facts stated to justify Mr. Yeatman's application for an attachment. Mr. Bonar should not proceed to England without special permission | 51 |
| 97 | Law Officers .. | 30, | As to draft Ordinance prepared at the Colonial Office for the suppression of gambling in Island of Heligoland, and specially sections applying to foreigners. Suggesting certain words in section 3 | 51 |
| 98 | Queen's Advocate | July 14, | As to the sale of the British vessels "Sophie" and "Robert Rickmers" at port of Saigon. Question for decision of the French Prize Court. Misapprehension as to right of having vessels restored when peace is declared between France and Prussia | 52 |
| 99 | Queen's Advocate | 18, | Further respecting the sale of the British vessels "Sophie" and "Robert Rickmers" at Saigon, and right of restoration of the vessels on the re-establishment of peace. Article XIII of Treaty of the 10th May, 1871, provides only for restitution of vessels condemned before the 2nd March, 1871. The Treaty limits the vessels to those of German nationality | 52 |

GREECE.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 100 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 16, 1871 | As to the instructions to be sent to Mr. Erskine, Her Majesty's Minister at Athens, on the application of a deserter from the British army named Snelling for a British passport for his sons to proceed to Constantinople. Should decline to grant it, as, by deserting from Her Majesty's forces abroad, he is not entitled to protection | 53 |
| 101 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 31, | Her Majesty's Government would be justified in protesting against the proposal of the Greek Minister of Finance to extend the deductions made on all public salaries and allowances, and military, naval, and other pensions, to the pensions of the Ionian Government, received under the Convention of March 1864 | 53 |
| 102 | Queen's Advocate | May 18, | As to the dispute between Mr. J. M. Evans and the Greek Government relative to a contract for emery. Her Majesty's Government should not interfere in this case until Mr. Evans has exhausted all legal means in the Greck Courts | 54 |
| 103 | Queen's Advocate | June 30, | As to the instructions to be sent to Her Majesty's Minister at Athens, and in reply to the representations of Mr. Naegeley, relative to the proceedings of the Greek Government towards a Company who are working a lead mine at Ergasteria. Her Majesty's Government cannot properly interfere officially on account of the contract entered into by M. Sarpieri with the Greek Government, being a different Company from that of Hilarion, Roux, and Co., in which Mr. Naegeley is interested | 54 |
| 104 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 10, | Further respecting the proceedings of the Greek Government towards the Smelting Company at Lauriam. Her Majesty's Government cannot remonstrate officially against the interpretation the Greek Government put on the concession granted to Messrs. Sarpieri and Co., although the latter are prevented from fulfilling their contracts | 55 |

| 105 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 29, 1871 | Approves proposed reply to Captain Harris, who demurs to the decision of the Commission appointed to examine the claim of the owners of the San Geronimo estate for damage to their property in 1838 | 55 |
| 106 | Queen's Advocate | May 3, 1871 | Further respecting the claim of the owners of the San Geronimo estate on Guatemalan Government. Her Majesty's Government cannot properly accede to the request of Captain Harris that Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires be instructed to call on that Government to pay the expenses incurred in the arbitration of the case | 56 |
| 107 | Queen's Advocate | June 20, | Further respecting the claim of the owners of the San Geronimo estate on the Guatemalan Government. As to the proper mode of distributing the amount of 7,000 dollars awarded to the claimants, and then held by a Mr. Peatfield, who belongs to a commercial house in Guatemala. Offer of Captain Harris to enter into a joint bond of indemnity with Mr. John Owen to Her Majesty's Government should be accepted | 56 |
| 108 | Queen's Advocate | July 8, | Further respecting claim of the owners of the San Geronimo estate on Guatemalan Government. Instruction should be sent to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to deduct from the award, before it is paid to the claimants, the expenses incurred for legal assistance and witnesses, but not the per-centage on the whole sum which was arranged privately to pay the arbitrator | 57 |

| 109 | Queen's Advocate | May 6, 1871 | Further as to the claim of Messrs. Williams and Knowles, of Nassau, to compensation for the seizure on two occasions, and condemnation and sale, of their vessel the "Belinda W." Her Majesty's Acting Consul-General at Port-au-Prince should be informed Her Majesty's Government decline to support their claim, as the vessel was engaged in a trade forbidden by the laws of Hayti | 57 |
| 110 | Queen's Advocate | June 8, | On claim on the Haytian Government by Mr. Charles Smith, a British merchant, on account of certain duties levied on goods belonging to him. He has no claim of right to be reimbursed by the actual Government of Hayti for custom duties paid to the revolutionary authorities at St. Marc, as his goods were reimported from a foreign port; but he has an equitable claim, as French and German merchants were permitted to reimport goods into that port under similar circumstanees free of duty, and it was done for the benefit of the revolutionary authorities, who are now the actual Government of Hayti | 58 |

| 111 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 23, 1871 | As to the claim put forward by the Governors of the Dominican College of St. Thomas Aquinas, at Rome, to British protection. No sufficient grounds to warrant the claim | 58 |
| 112 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 2, | Further relative to the claim of the Governors of the Dominican College of St. Thomas Aquinas, at Rome, for British protection, and if the Convent of the Minerva, at Rome, is also not entitled to British protection. Neither are entitled to British protection, unless evidence can be shown that British subjects have proprietary rights in the convent; and even then it would be only of a qualified character, rather in the form of good offices | 59 |
| 113 | Law Officers .. | July 5, | As to the instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Consul-General at Venice, on subject of the disputed will executed by Mr. Foliot Nash, a British subject lately deceased at Venice, after his marriage with an Italian lady. The alleged previous marriage of Mr. Nash would not invalidate the will | 59 |
| 114 | Law Officers .. | Sept. 8, | On refusal of two Irish religious communities at Rome to make a declaration of their property for purposes of the mortmain duty, on account of their being foreigners. | 119 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 19, 1871 | As to the claim of the River Plate Telegraph Company to protection of Her Majesty's Government, on the alleged proceedings of the Uruguay Government towards them, and their property, during the civil war. Her Majesty's Government could not properly interfere to control the action of the Blanco (rebel) party, if they believed it necessary to interrupt the telegraph wire which was used by the Monte Videan Government for political purposes .. | 63 |
| 120 | Queen's Advocate | Oct. 9, | As to reply to be given to further letter of River Plate Telegraph Company on their claim against the Uruguay Government. A copy of the Concessions referred to by Mr. Oldham, the Secretary to that Company, should be obtained before a definitive answer can be given.. .. | 64 |
| 121 | Law Officers .. | Dec. 5, | As to the course to be taken by Her Majesty's Government to obtain redress for the pecuniary and other injuries inflicted by the Uruguayan Government on Her Majesty's Government and subjects, as set forth in a Memorandum and correspondence sent to them. The adoption of reprisals might be resorted to, but Her Majesty's Government must be then prepared to declare war against Uruguay, if that Government laid an embargo on British vessels, or sequestrated the property of British subjects.. .. .. | 64 |

| 122 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 4, 1871 | In the action of trespass brought by Mr. John Haire against Mr. Stokes, British Vice-Consul at Mazagan, before the Supreme Court of Gibraltar, as to the reply to be sent to the Vice-Consul, who requires to know if he is liable to the jurisdiction of that Court for acts done by him in his official capacity under the Order of Council of 1857. Further information must be obtained from Vice-Consul Stokes as to the period when he was served with the process of the Court after the action of trespass .. .. .. | 66 |
| 123 | Law Officers .. | Sept. 23, | Further relative to the action of trespass against Vice-Consul Stokes and the question of jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Gibraltar over British Consular Officers in Morocco. Concur in views expressed by the Queen's Advocate on the subject of the limitation of the clause of the Order in Council of August 1857. Vice-Consul Stokes ought not to have been served with a writ of summons, as he was not within the local jurisdiction of the Court. Steps should be taken to defend Vice-Consul Stokes, or any Consular Officers, where they are sued for acts done in the honest discharge of their duty .. .. .. .. | 66 |
| 124 | Law Officers .. | 25, | As to the dispute between the British and United States' Consulates at Tangier relative to the jurisdiction to be exercised over a British subject employed as an interpreter at the United States' Consulate. Mr. Scott, not having registered himself as prescribed by the Order in Council of 1857, is not entitled to British protection, but being still under the Naturalization Act of 1870, he remains under the criminal jurisdiction of the British Consul, notwithstanding his employment as interpreter to the American Consul .. | 67 |
| 125 | Queen's Advocate | Nov. 6, | As to the amount of support to be given by Her Majesty's Government to the claims of British subjects on the estates of Moorish subjects, whose property has been confiscated by the Sultan of Morocco .. .. .. .. | 68 |
| 126 | Queen's Advocate | Dec. 2, | Approval of the course taken by Her Majesty's Minister at Tangier, in demanding the punishment of the parties who assaulted and wounded Mr. Spinney, in the neighbourhood of Mazagan; but compensation for him should not be required, as he should not have attended the Moosem, or religious festival, without giving notice to the authorities, according to the notice issued by the Minister .. .. | 68 |
| 127 | Queen's Advocate | 8, | As to the dispute between Her Majesty's Minister and the Spanish Consul at Tangier on the question of the nationality of persons born in Gibraltar of Spanish parents. By birth these parties are British subjects, but Spanish subjects by origin, and Her Majesty's Consuls should not extend protection to such persons against the Consular authorities of Spain, as they owe allegiance to Spain, and the Spanish Consuls in Morocco are empowered by Treaty to exercise jurisdiction over Spanish subjects within that State .. | 69 |

| 138 | Law Officers .. | Mar. 15, 1871 | As to the proposed Order in Council for the regulation of Consular jurisdiction in the Fiji Islands, and the grounds of their omitting Article 25, which granted to the Court at Sydney the same powers in civil as in criminal suits. Terms of imprisonment under Article 34 .. .. | 76 |
| 139 | Queen's Advocate | May 4, | As to the course that should be pursued by Her Majesty's Consul in the Fiji Islands on the boarding of the British ship "Oriti" in the port of Levuka by certain parties, some of whom were British subjects. Would wish to confer with the other Law Officers on the subject .. .. .. | 77 |
| 140 | Law Officers .. | 18, | Further relative to the proposed Order in Council for the regulation of Consular jurisdiction in the Fiji Islands, and the powers it confers on the Supreme Court of New South Wales, and that criminals in the Fiji Islands should be deported for punishment to a British Colony. Proposed additional Articles to the Order in Council .. .. | 77 |
| 141 | Law Officers .. | 18, | Further relative to the case of boarding of the British vessel "Oriti" in the port of Levuka by certain parties, some of whom were British subjects. Approval of the action of the British Consul in the Fiji Islands; but he can only act under Order in Council under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, of which at present there is none. Can only now act from his personal authority .. .. .. .. | 78 |
| 142 | Law Officers .. | June 30, | Verbal alterations in the proposed Order in Council conferring Consular jurisdiction in the Fiji Islands on Her Majesty's Consul .. .. .. .. .. .. | 78 |
| 143 | Law Officers .. | July 22, | As to the validity of the Charter granted by the Chief Thakobau to the European residents at Levuka, and authorizing the formation of a Body Corporate to frame and pass police, municipal, and other regulations. If the Fijian Chieftain's authority can be recognized by Her Majesty's Government, there is no reason why the Charter in question should not have a binding force within the area of its operation .. .. .. .. .. | 78 |
| 144 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 28, | Further relative to the claims of certain parties arising out of the release of the "Daphne" by the Admiralty Court of New South Wales. Mr. Smith has not made out his case on behalf of the owners for payment of passage money of the islanders to Fiji; and Mr. Ross Lewin, to whom they were chartered, has forfeited his right to the service of the natives by violating the terms of his licence .. .. | 80 |
| 145 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | Sept. 9, | As to the reply to be sent to Mr. Smith relative to the claim of owners of the "Daphne" on account of the natives of the South Sea Islands imported into Fiji. Want to see Report of Queen's Advocate of the 28th August .. | 81 |
| 146 | Queen's Advocate | 16 | Concur in proposed reply to Mr. Smith relative to the claim of the owners of the "Daphne," released by Her Majesty's Consul in the Fiji Islands .. .. .. .. | 81 |
| 147 | Law Officers .. | Oct. 31, | On the seizure by Consul March of the British vessel "Challenge," sent to Sydney for trial for breach of laws relating to Slave Trade, and refusal of the Governor of New South Wales to proceed against this vessel in the Vice-Admiralty Court, and restoration of the vessel to the owners, who hold the captors responsible for loss and damage by her detention. Consul March was correct in seizing the vessel and endeavouring to obtain her condemnation; and the conduct of the officers and crew of Her Majesty's ship "Blanche" should be approved and held harmless if the action is successfully prosecuted against them. Suggestions with respect to Slave Trade legislation .. .. .. | 82 |
| 148 | Law Officers .. | Nov. 23, | Further respecting the case of the British vessel "Challenge," and the master of that vessel being sentenced to three years' imprisonment in the Supreme Court of New South Wales, and claim of the owners on Captain Montgomerie, of Her Majesty's ship "Blanche," for damages and loss of profits. If any action is brought against him he should be defended by the Crown .. .. .. .. | 82 |

| 153 | Law Officers .. | Apr. 17, 1871 | As to the proposed alteration in the draft Convention for the abolition of the Slave Trade Commission Courts providing for the procedure in cases of maritime prize with regard to the onus probandi. Explanation of the words proposed in the IInd Article of the amended Treaty, "and the rules of evidence to be applied," and the burden of proof, will fall on the captors, as heretofore .. .. .. .. | 85 |
| 154 | Queen's Advocate | 22 | On claim of Mr. F. Andrews to compensation from Portuguese Government for losses during civil war in 1833–34. Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in urging any further consideration of this claim.. | 86 |
| 155 | Queen's Advocate | June 30, | Further relative to the claim of Mr. F. Andrews on the Portuguese Government. Nothing to alter decision already given on this claim. Nothing in the conversation of Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon to warrant an expectation that the claim could be satisfied .. .. | 86 |

PRUSSIA.

| 156 | Law Officers .. | Jan. 5, 1871 | As to complaint of the Prussian Government against the Government of Luxemburg for violations of neutrality, and that they could no longer consider they were bound to respect the neutrality, but reserved to themselves the right to prosecute their claims for damages done through the non-maintenance of neutrality. The explanation of M. de Servais in defence of the Luxemburg Government, if to be relied on by Her Majesty's Government, would make the threatened proceedings of the Prussian Government unjustifiable .. .. .. .. .. .. | 87 |
| 157 | Law Officers .. | 11, | As to claim of Messrs. Digby and Son, on behalf of the owners of the British vessel "Chamois," for detention at Rouen by ships that had been sunk in the River Seine. Her Majesty's Government not justified in demanding compensation for the owners, as the River Seine was closed in consequence of the exigencies of war .. .. .. | 88 |
| 158 | Law Officers .. | 11, | As to steps to be taken by Her Majesty's Government on complaint of the Prussian Government that a Company had been formed under British auspices for establishing a regular postal service between Calais and Cherbourg; and that British steamers, fitted out and employed under the French flag, was a breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act. The German Ambassador might be told that the mails being carried by vessels between Calais and Cherbourg does not amount to a violation of the Foreign Enlistment Act of 1870; and if French Generals exchange letters through the post, this does not make the carrying of mail bags between two French ports an employment in the military service of the French Government .. .. .. .. | 88 |
| 159 | Queen's Advocate | 14, | As to the intention of the North German Government to revoke their decision not to capture French merchant-vessels during the present war, but will give time for neutrals who may have shipped cargoes in French bottoms; and the effect this has on the Royal Ordinance of the 18th July last, and the Declaration of Paris 1856; and whether an announcement should appear in the "London Gazette." Course that Her Majesty's Government should pursue on the occasion .. .. .. .. | 89 |
| 160 | Law Officers .. | 16, | Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in making a representation to the French Government respecting the condemnation by a French Prize Court of a cargo captured on board a German vessel bound from Rangoon to Europe, belonging to the firm of which Mr. Barckhausen, a naturalized British-Indian subject, is a representative. The claimant must have entirely divested himself of his native German character before Her Majesty's Government could interfere .. .. .. .. .. | 90 |
| 161 | Law Officers .. | 18, | As to the non-efficiency of the blockade of the German Baltic ports according to the Declaration of Paris of 1856, and the assertion of the North-German Government that if one belligerent should break any one of the conditions of the Declaration that would release the other from observing its conditions. The inefficiency of the blockade renders the French Prize Courts unable to enforce the blockade against neutral vessels, but does not release the other belligerent from the obligations of the Declaration of 1856 .. .. | 90 |
| 162 | Law Officers .. | 19, | As to whether Her Majesty's Commissioners of Customs would be justified in permitting the trans-shipment of cargoes from German into neutral bottoms at certain British ports on certain conditions—they having in two cases granted this where the cargoes were the property of neutrals and not contraband of war. There are no reasons, on grounds of international law, why the permission should not be granted for the trans-shipment of all goods, but would except goods as are clearly contraband, as that would be scarcely consistent with the Queen's Neutrality Proclamation .. .. .. .. | 90 |

| 163 | Law Officers .. | Jan. 21, 1871 | Further respecting the case of the German vessel "Frei," captured in British waters off Dungeness by the French vessel of war "Dessaix." Still think that diplomatic intervention is the right course to pursue, instead of leaving the case to the French Prize Court. Queen's Advocate alters former opinion on this case, and now agrees with the Attorney- and Solicitor-General that diplomatic intervention should be adopted by Her Majesty's Government .. | 92 |
| 164 | Queen's Advocate | 23, | With respect to claim of Mr. Renner, a British subject resident at Altona, to have his sons, who were born there, exempted from military conscription. Cannot properly ask German Government to apply principles of German law to Mr. Renner's children .. .. .. .. .. | 94 |
| 165 | Queen's Advocate | 31, | The proceedings of the naval authorities at Plymouth on subject of the capture of the French vessel "St. Marc" by the erman vessel of war "Augusta" should be approved | 95 |
| 166 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 6, | As to form of notice to be published in "London Gazette" announcing the German Imperial Order of the 19th January, revoking the Decree of the 18th July last announcing the determination not to capture French merchant-vessels not carrying contraband of war until the Decree was in the hands of Her Majesty's Government. Approving proposed notification .. .. .. .. .. | 96 |
| 167 | Law Officers .. | 11, | Further respecting the claim of Mr. Barckhausen to be a native-born British merchant resident in India, and that his Indian certificate of naturalization entitled him to trade anywhere. He should have laid his claim for his goods not to be condemned before the Prize Court at Saigon .. | 96 |
| 168 | Queen's Advocate | 16, | As to the destruction of the house and property of a British subject named Laurence Smith, at St. Ouen, near Rouen, by the Prussian troops, and his claim for compensation. If wantonly destroyed, is entitled to interference of Her Majesty's Government to obtain redress .. .. | 97 |
| 169 | Law Officers .. | 21, | Further on case of Mr. Worth. The German military authorities were justified in instituting a searching investigation as to whether he was an accomplice in transporting over the German lines a correspondence punishable by military law, and whether he was in the secret service of the enemy, and used his knowledge against the German positions .. | 97 |
| 170 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 23, | As to Memorial of Mr. Kirkman Hodgson, M.P., requesting interference of Her Majesty's Government to procure compensation from the North-German Government for the loss of the British vessel "Gloucestershire," off the River Weser, by not being able to find a pilot and being wrongly directed by a German gun-boat. As the master of the British vessel acted upon his own responsibility after advice, he is not entitled to compensation .. .. .. .. | 98 |
| 171 | Queen's Advocate | 23, | On request of Mrs. Reid for intervention of Her Majesty's Government to obtain reparation for loss of property which fell into the hands of the German troops. Her Majesty's Government should not interfere .. .. .. | 98 |
| 172 | Queen's Advocate | 28, | Further respecting case of Mr. Worth. He has no right to claim indemnity for his imprisonment on account of being captured in a balloon by the German troops .. .. | 99 |
| 173 | Queen's Advocate | May 24, | An application of M. Debrunner, who claims to be a naturalized British subject of India, for advice and assistance on his imprisonment at Wiesbaden for debt. To be told he is not entitled to the privileges of a British subject out of India, and the fact of his having renounced his Swiss nationality is immaterial .. .. .. .. | 99 |
| 174 | Law Officers .. | June 27, | Bill submitted to the Reichstag, and passed, as to the mode in which the war indemnity is to be received by Germany from France, and how it should be apportioned. Not expedient to enter into a reciprocal engagement with the German Government to enable British subjects, not resident in German provinces, to receive compensation without an Act of Parliament .. .. .. .. | 100 |

| 176 | Law Officers .. | Aug. 10, 1871 | Expulsion of Mr. Cohen from Odessa. Inquiry should be made why he obtained a Foreign Office passport under the Naturalization Act of 1870, to enable him to return, after being deported at the request of the American Consul, and being prohibited from returning there. On the first deportation, if a grievance, must obtain redress from American Government. On the second, Her Majesty's Government should not interfere without further information.. .. | 101 |
| 177 | Law Officers .. | 23, | Expulsion of Mr. Cohen from Odessa. Her Majesty's Government cannot properly question proceedings of the police authorities as to the first visit under an United States' passport, nor to the second under a British passport, as, under the Treaty of the 12th January, 1859, British subjects are not exempt from Russian police regulations which are applicable to all foreigners .. .. .. | 102 |

| 179 | Queen's Advocate | Jan. 7, 1871 | On claim of Messrs. Wright and Co. against the Spanish Government, on account of certain fines levied on their vessel, the "Evening Star," by Custom-house at Havana. Her Majesty's Government could only claim for demurrage and other expenses in their favour on account of the despatch of Señor Sagasta, the 20th June, 1870; but the Spanish Government have a good answer that the regulations require a third copy of the ship's manifest to be delivered by masters of foreign vessels .. .. | 103 |
| 180 | Queen's Advocate | 21, | As to the employment of the steam-vessel "Hercules" and other vessels registered at Gibraltar in towing out vessels engaged in contraband trade with Spain. The charge too vague for Her Majesty's Government to notice; but no legal offence is committed by the owners so employing the "Hercules," unless in contravention of British law .. | 104 |
| 181 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 17, | As to the detention of the vessel "Britannia," of Nassau, at Cuba, and her subsequent release by the Prize Committee. The master and crew have no claim for detention on account of her ship's papers having been found informal. Masters of these small vessels should be warned against going to sea without proper papers and without a proper flag .. | 105 |
| 182 | Queen's Advocate | 20, | Further as to the seizure of the "John Gray" off the coast of Cuba by a Spanish gun-boat. The owners have only a claim for compensation on account of the unreasonable time she was detained in the Harbour of Baracoa after her papers were examined, but as she had no national flag, there was reason for first detention by the Spanish cruizer.. .. | 105 |

| 183 | Law Officers .. | Apr. 4, 1871 | Case of the "Tornado." As to the distribution of 1,500*l.* awarded by the Spanish Government to the crew of the vessel, Mr. Forbes Campbell, who alleges he holds a power of attorney to receive the money, should show a correct copy, with the signatures appended, before the money is paid to him .. .. .. .. .. | 106 |
| 184 | Queen's Advocate | 5, | As to the treatment of the crew of the "John Gray" by the Spanish authorities at Baracoa, and the denial of the Spanish Admiral that they were ill-treated during their detention in Cuba. Their complaint of ill-treatment referred to their imprisonment at Santiago de Cuba, but they have only an equitable claim against Spanish Government for long detention and delay of local authorities on the inquiry which resulted in proving their innocence .. .. .. | 107 |
| 185 | Law Officers .. | 29, | Case of the "Tornado." As to the distribution of the award of 1,500*l.* to crew of the vessel. The Board of Trade ought to have the distribution of the shares, both to the representatives of those entitled to the shares who have died as well as to the survivors. Mr. Forbes Campbell's communication not such as to put implicit confidence in him .. | 108 |
| 186 | Law Officers .. | May 17, | As to protest of Mr. Forbes Campbell against the distribution of the 1,500*l.* to the crew of the "Tornado" by the Board of Trade. Cannot advise any portion of the money to be paid to him. Sufficient to tell him the Board of Trade will distribute it .. .. .. .. .. | 109 |
| 187 | Law Officers .. | 27, | Further on case of the "Tornado." Mr. Forbes Campbell has no right to insist on a distribution of the 1,500*l.* to officers and crew pro ratâ, or any other mode of distribution. Concur generally in Memorandum of Board of Trade as to their mode of allotting the amount to the survivors .. .. .. .. .. | 109 |
| 188 | Queen's Advocate | June 19, | No reason to alter opinion already given relative to the case of the "Eliza Walker" and other British vessels subjected to rigorous quarantine on arriving in Spanish ports from ports of the United Kingdom and certain ports of France and Africa .. .. .. .. .. | 110 |
| 189 | Queen's Advocate | 19, | As to the rigorous action of the Spanish Government in enforcing quarantine regulations on the arrival of British vessels in Spanish ports from the United Kingdom and certain ports of France and Africa. Cases of the "Eliza Walker," "Favourite," and "Janie" .. .. .. | 110 |
| 190 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 28, | Further as to quarantine imposed upon British vessels on their arrival in Spanish ports. Although the treatment of the "Favourite" and "Janie" was a harsh administration of the law, it was not in excess of their own Municipal law; but in the case of the "Eliza Walker," Her Majesty's Government might bring it to the notice of the Spanish Government, as she was admitted to free pratique at port of Santander and allowed to discharge her cargo, and then was subject to quarantine at Bilbao .. .. .. | 113 |
| 191 | Queen's Advocate | Sept. 8, | On subject of free pratique being refused to the British vessel "Tyne Queen" at Huelva. The Spanish authorities there are responsible for the refusal; and the Spanish pilot who had charge of the vessel should be obliged to make a declaration that the Carabinero was an office of the Board of Health at Huelva. Compensation should be demanded for losses entailed on the vessel .. .. .. .. | 114 |
| 192 | Queen's Advocate | Oct. 19, | Her Majesty's Government entitled to demand from Spanish Government apology or expression of regret for conduct of Commander of Spanish ship-of-war towards the English vessel "E. Beckwith" within Haitian waters .. .. | 114 |
| 193 | Queen's Advocate | Nov. 8, | As to claim of Messrs. Baring Brothers and Co. against the estates of Don Miguel de Aldama, confiscated by Spanish Government. Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid may be instructed to urge an inquiry into legality of the claim without delay .. .. .. .. .. | 115 |

| 194 | Queen's Advocate | Nov. 20, 1871 | Course that Her Majesty's Government should pursue relative to the salvage of the British vessel "Saxony" and its cargo at Garrucho. Instructions to be sent to Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid to concert with Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs for an end to be put to the proceedings against Mr. Pecket, the British Vice-Consul, as the local Judge did not act towards him with that comity due to his official character. In the meantime, Mr. Pecket should hold proceeds of the sale of the hull or cargo, subject to the salvage award .. .. .. .. | 116 |
| 195 | Queen's Advocate | 24, | Claim of Messrs. Morrison Brothers for interest on a sum of money wrongfully levied on them by Spanish Custom authorities at Cuba, but which they subsequently returned. Her Majesty's Government may fairly press for payment .. | 116 |
| 196 | Solicitor- and Attorney-General | Dec. 10, | As to steps that should be taken to prevent a breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act by preventing the sailing of the "Francesco Calderon" from Dundee, suspected of being fitted out for the insurgents in Cuba. Should be detained by the local authorities, as present information is vague .. | 117 |
| 197 | Queen's Advocate | 12, | Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid may properly represent the case of the "Tyne Queen" to the Spanish Government, and to claim compensation for refusal to allow her to remain at port of Huelva, notwithstanding her having a clean bill of health .. .. .. .. .. | 117 |
| 198 | Queen's Advocate | 21, | Further respecting the "Tyne Queen," which vessel was ordered away by the health authorities at Huelva without inspecting the ship's papers. The pilot in charge of the vessel should give evidence before indemnity is claimed for the wrongful act of the officer who ordered the vessel out of the river.. .. .. .. .. .. | 118 |
| 199 | Attorney-General and Queen's Advocate | 24, | Suspected vessels lying in the Mersey fitted out, supposed to be for service of the Cuban insurgents. Not sufficient cause for the issue of a warrant for detention under the Foreign Enlistment Act .. .. .. .. .. | 118 |
| 200 | Law Officers .. | 24, | No objection for the Collector of Customs at Liverpool being instructed to inquire of the parties connected with the suspected vessels in the Mersey for what purpose or employment they were designed .. .. .. .. | 119 |
| 201 | Queen's Advocate | 27, | Further on subject of the seizure of the British vessel "John Gray" off the coast of Cuba, and treatment of the crew by Spanish authorities of Baracoa; and of the British vessel "Britannia," the owners of which have been compensated. Expenses of British Vice-Consul on account of detention of crew of the "John Gray" may be demanded, but not on account of the "Britannia." Must have further information respecting the "Star" .. .. .. .. | 119 |
| 202 | Law Officers .. | 29, | As to further information supplied by Customs authorities at Liverpool on the vessels being fitted out there, and suspected for the Cuban insurgents, "Scud" and "Francesco Calderon" not sufficient to warrant their detention .. .. | 120 |

SWITZERLAND.

| 205 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 20, 1871 | As to the protection or interference to be afforded by Her Majesty's Legation at Berne, or the British Consul at Geneva, to British subjects applying for passports, who were among the officers and soldiers of the French army that escaped into Switzerland. Passports should not be granted to any such British subjects while the war lasts .. .. | 122 |
| 206 | Queen's Advocate | May 5, | As to claim made by the authorities of Canton de Vaud to succession duty on property of Miss England, deceased, at Lausanne, both in Switzerland and England, and referring to former Report, on application of Messrs. Dawes and Son, who stated that she never lost her original domicile as an Englishwoman, though she resided in the canton many years. Her Majesty's Government may properly represent the case to the Federal Government, on the ground of the double fact that the authorities of the Canton deferred to her protest, and made no further attempt to tax her down to her death .. .. .. .. .. | 122 |
| 207 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 17, | Further on subject of the claim of Canton de Vaud to succession duty on property of the late Miss England. Draft of Convention or Declaration for consideration for the reciprocal regulations for levying succession or legacy duties .. | 123 |
| 208 | Queen's Advocate | 30, | As to the demand made by the authorities of the Canton of Geneva for a return of the property left by Mr. Reynolds, late British Vice-Consul there, to enable them to levy succession duties thereon. If he died at Geneva, his character as British Vice-Consul would not exempt his widow from making the required return .. .. .. .. | 125 |
| 209 | Law Officers .. | Sept. 20, | As to marriages solemnized by English clergymen in Switzerland. The interpretation which Mr. Bonar, Her Majesty's Minister at Berne, has put on the Marriage Law in England, is correct .. .. .. .. .. | 125 |
| 210 | Queen's Advocate | Oct. 9, | Further respecting demand of authorities of Canton of Geneva for a return of the property left by Mr. Reynolds, late British Vice-Consul there. As to the instructions to be sent to Mr. Bonar, Her Majesty's Minister in Berne, on the alleged intention of Mr. Reynolds to resume his residence in England. The English Courts regard the domicile according to the Law of Nations, and his personal property should not be withdrawn from jurisdiction of the English Courts, but must not claim immunity on the ground of the official character of the late British Vice-Consul .. .. | 125 |
| 211 | Queen's Advocate | Dec. 26, | No objection to the draft Declaration which the Federal Government are willing to sign with respect to the succession duties to be levied in the Cantons of Geneva aud Vaud. Suggesting verbal alterations .. .. .. | 126 |

TRIPOLI.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 212 | Queen's Advocate | June 20, 1871 | As to the reply to be returned to Vice-Consul Mercer respecting the extension of British protection to his adopted son. Inquiry should be made as to the lex loci at Tripoli, and whether Mr. Mercer has complied with that law with respect to the adoption of children .. .. .. .. | 127 |

TUNIS.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 213 | Queen's Advocate | July 18, 1871 | As to the rights of the Bey of Tunis to the proceeds of fisheries of sponge and polypi beyond three miles' limit from the shore. The Bey must show a prescriptive right of property, founded on long-continued and exclusive enjoyment of it, to prove his right .. .. .. .. .. | 127 |

| 214 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 27, 1871 | As to the liability of the Egyptian Government for damage done to property by explosion of gun-cotton in their magazines at Alexandria. Unless it was the work of design, the Government cannot be responsible .. .. .. | 128 |
| 215 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 27, | On request of Mr. Joseph Williams for the assistance of Her Majesty's Government to procure the revision of a sentence of imprisonment for fifteen years, pronounced against him by a Turkish Tribunal, for the manslaughter of a watchman at Constantinople. As the trial was not conducted according to the Capitulations, and the preliminary inquiry in the Court of the Zaptieh, on which the sentence of the Supreme Council was founded, was not in accordance with the Firman of the Sultan of February 1854, it is invalid, and Her Majesty's Government would be justified in demanding a new trial .. .. .. .. .. | 129 |
| 216 | Queen's Advocate | May 16, | Further relative to the case of Mr. Joseph Williams. Course proposed to be adopted by Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople in procuring his liberation, instead of requiring a new trial to be instituted, may properly be approved .. .. .. .. .. | 129 |
| 217 | Law Officers .. | 24, | As to the right of the Mixed Commission to levy dues for the improvement of the River Pruth on vessels frequenting that river, and whether Article XV of Treaty of 1856 was intended to include the Pruth in its allusion to the navigation of the Danube .. .. .. .. | 130 |
| 218 | Queen's Advocate | July 17, | As to the course that should be taken to obtain settlement of the claim of Messrs. Ward and Rivolta against the Roumanian Government. Articles 7 and 8 of the Concession to the claimants are in favour of the Roumanian Government, and Her Majesty's Government cannot claim on their behalf the refunding of the caution money to them .. | 130 |
| 219 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 20, | Further relative to the application of Vice-Consul Mercer for the protection of his adopted son. Her Majesty's Government may properly extend to him the same degree of protection which would be granted to a natural son of a British subject born within the Ottoman dominions .. .. | 130 |
| 220 | Law Officers .. | Sept. 2, | On subject of the suggestions of Sir E. Hornby for the consolidation of the Orders in Council and rules for extraterritorial Courts .. .. .. .. .. | 131 |
| 221 | Law Officers .. | 7, | Information in the Foreign Office insufficient to enable them to deal satisfactorily with the questions relating to the alleged irregularities of judicial proceedings and charges on the part of British Vice-Consuls in Turkey, and complaints of the Consular Court system. Suggesting returns of suits they have been called on to exercise jurisdiction for the last three years .. .. .. .. | 132 |
| 222 | Law Officers .. | 23, | As to the merits of the existing controversy between the Roumanian Government and the holders of Roumanian railway bonds. According to the terms of the Concession the Roumanian Government must be held to have guaranteed the interest of 7½ per cent. .. .. .. .. | 133 |
| 223 | Law Officers .. | 25, | As to claims of Mr. Petherick against the Egyptian Government arising out of the proceedings of the Governor-General of the Soudan in 1863, which compelled him to break up his trading establishments on the White Nile .. .. | 134 |
| 224 | Queen's Advocate | Oct. 31, | Further respecting the claims of Messrs. Ward and Rivolta against the Roumanian Government relating to the Railway Concession granted in April 1864. Expediency of Her Majesty's Government having a copy of the Petition of Mr. Ward to the Prince of Roumania of the 4th June, 1868 | 135 |

| 225 | Queen's Advocate | Dec. 4, 1871 | Further respecting the claims of Messrs. Ward and Rivolta against the Roumanian Government. No reason to alter former decision, that the caution money in hands of the Roumanian Government is forfeited by terms of the Railway Concession: but they have an equitable claim, as the Roumanian State has suffered no damage from their default; but cannot advise an official instruction to obtain the return of the caution money | 136 |
| 226 | Queen's Advocate | 11, | As to complaint of the Danube and Black Sea Railway and Kustendji Harbour Company against the proceedings of the Turkish Government and local authorities at Kustendji. Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople might use his good offices to obtain, according to Mr. Price's request, a reference of the dispute to a Commission | 137 |
| 227 | Queen's Advocate | 30, | Further respecting Messrs. Ward and Rivolta's claim against the Roumanian Government. Her Majesty's Government might give their unofficial support to the claim | 138 |

UNITED STATES.

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 228 | Law Officers | Feb. 9, 1871 | As to the Reports of the Legal Adviser to the Treasury on Slave Trade matters:—1. On the Convention concluded with the United States for the abolition of the Mixed Commission Courts. 2. On the draft Convention with Portugal, also for the abolition of the Mixed Commission Courts | 138 |
| 229 | Law Officers | 24, | As to steps that should be taken on account of the death of Elizear Goulet, a citizen of the United States, by drowning in the Red River, in the Province of Manitoba, Canada. Proceedings should be taken against one of the parties concerned, according to the Report of Mr. McConville, to secure the administration of justice | 140 |
| 230 | Law Officers | Mar. 21, | As to the instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Commissioner with respect to the fourth point of the proposal of the American Government relative to the rules of international law for the detention of ships of war in neutral ports under the Foreign Enlistment Act | 140 |
| 231 | Law Officers | 27, | Returns original telegrams from Her Majesty's Commissioners on the subject of previous Report, and will be ready to wait on the Cabinet this day | 141 |
| 232 | Law Officers | Apr. 1, | On further telegrams from the High Commissioners on the amended propositions respecting the "Alabama" arbitration, and rules for detention of ships of war in neutral ports under the Foreign Enlistment Act | 141 |
| 233 | Law Officers | 3, | On Memorandum and papers prepared in Canada respecting a portion of the boundary between British and American territories in North America, under the VIth Article of the Treaty of Ghent, and objection raised to the authority of the maps prepared by the Commissioners under that Article. The Report of the Commissioners and the map illustrating it should be taken together, but if the latter should be found at variance with it, the Report of the boundary must prevail as evidence | 142 |
| 234 | Law Officers | 4, | Further respecting the boundary between the Dominion of Canada and the United States at the mouth of the River St. Clair. The Report of Mr. McMicken and tracings of the maps referred to in the Report of the Boundary Commission show the canal being constructed to be within Canadian waters, but from Mr. Forster's survey a portion only is within those waters, but the map referred to by the Commissioners must be looked to for its clear definition | 143 |
| 235 | Law Officers | Apr. 14, 1871 | As to the extradition of Richard Baker Caldwell, surrendered by the Canadian Government to the United States' Government on a charge of forgery and uttering forged paper, but who was subjected to legal proceedings for an offence under the laws of that country for which he was not surrendered. Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in reclaiming his surrender, as there is nothing in Convention of 1842 to preclude the United States' Government from indicting the prisoner for an additional offence so long as no fresh proceedings are adopted against him | 143 |
| 236 | Queen's Advocate | 28, | As to steps that should be taken on the imprisonment of Alfred S. Williams, a British subject, for desertion from the United States' army. No objection to instructions being sent to Her Majesty's Minister at Washington to bring the case before Mr. Fish; and the father, the Rev. Lewis Williams, should be recommended to forward a Memorial to Her Majesty's Government on behalf of his son | 144 |
| 237 | Law Officers | May 11, | As to the course to be pursued respecting the alleged murder by the master and crew of the American vessel "Montezuma" of Antoine Anthony, a British subject, at Portsmouth, Dominica. As there is little chance of the "Montezuma" coming into British jurisdiction, so that the parties might be taken into custody, the American Government might be requested to cause the accused to be apprehended when they might come within American jurisdiction | 144 |
| 238 | Law Officers | 30, | As to the reply that should be given to a question in the House of Commons, whether the existing law is sufficient to enable the Government to carry out the rules specified in Article VI of the Treaty of Washington of the 8th May, 1871, and, if not, will they introduce such a measure | 145 |
| 239 | Law Officers | June 17, | Proposed drafts of despatches to Sir E. Thornton for carrying out the provisions of the Treaty of Washington of the 8th May, and forms of notes to be submitted to the United States' Government relative to the appointment of Arbitrators on the "Alabama" claims and San Juan boundary, and as to the Rules under the VIth Article of the Treaty, are right and proper for the purpose | 145 |
| 240 | Law Officers | 17, | Approves draft notification to be published in the "London Gazette" respecting the Mixed Commission to be established under the XIIth and following Articles of the Treaty of Washington of the 8th May, 1871, for settlement of the outstanding claims of subjects and citizens of the respective countries therein described | 146 |
| 241 | Law Officers | 29, | As to further draft notification respecting the appointment of an Agent at Washington to receive and classify British claims; and draft instructions proposed to be given to Mr. Howard, who will attend the Commission under the XIIIth Article of the Treaty of Washington | 146 |
| 242 | Law Officers | Aug. 15, | As to the draft instructions to be given to Mr. Russell Gurney, Her Majesty's Claims' Commissioner under the XIIIth Article of the Treaty of Washington, and to Mr. Carlisle, appointed Counsel for the British claimants | 147 |
| 243 | Law Officers | 18, | On questions raised relative to the Canadian Fishery question. As to notice to be given to the Government of the United States of the termination of the fishery arrangement at such time after the period fixed by the Treaty | 148 |
| 244 | Law Officers | Sept. 16, | As to the reply to be sent to Mr. Heathcote, Secretary of the Association for the Protection of Commercial Interests, respecting the claims of British subjects on account of losses inflicted by the "Alabama" | 149 |
| 245 | Law Officers | 25, | Claim of Messrs. Goddard for compensation on account of the losses they sustained through the acts of the "Alabama." Not one to be admitted by Her Majesty's Government; but if within the scope of the Treaty of Washington, must be prosecuted before the Tribunal for the consideration of these claims | 149 |

| 248 | Queen's Advocate | 10, | As to the reply to be sent to Mr. Huntley, who forwarded a protest and claim of the Captain of his vessel, the "Grace," on account of an outrage committed on that vessel by negro officials at Doboy, in the United States | 150 |
| 249 | Law Officers .. | 20, | Instructions should be sent to Mr. Howard not to present to the Commissioners any document sent to him by the Foreign Office or Her Majesty's Legation at Washington on behalf of any claimant until the claimant shall have first filed in the Office of the Commission the statement of his claim under Rule 1 of the Commission | 151 |
| 250 | Law Officers .. | 21, | Approves draft notification for publication for the information of the claimants with respect to the presentation of claims of British subjects to the Commissioners at Washington | 151 |
| 251 | Law Officers .. | 23, | Further respecting claim of Mr. Tarrant against the United States' Government. To be told he ought to have preferred his claim before the Court of Claims, but as he has declined to do so, it cannot be made the subject of diplomatic intervention | 152 |
| 252 | Law Officers .. | 31, | As to the reply to be sent to Mr. Howard, British Agent for Claims' Commission at Washington, that all claims made by British subjects, notwithstanding their having declared their intention to obtain American naturalization, may be properly presented by Her Majesty's Political Agent; but that claims made by British subjects, who were such dnring the war, but since made American citizens, should not be presented | 152 |
| 253 | Law Officers .. | Nov. 6, | As to the replies that should be sent to Messrs. Leech, Harrison, and Forwoode, and to Messrs. Ellman, Raper, and Ellman, on their claims against the United States' Government—the latter firm who wrote on behalf of Mrs. Mary Cassin | 152 |
| 254 | Law Officers .. | 27, | Further respecting claims of Messrs. Leech, Harrison, and Forwoode against the United States' Government. Cannot lay them before the United States' Government, not being within the scope of the Treaty of Washington | 153 |
| 255 | Law Officers .. | 27, | Further respecting claim of Mr. Stewart against United States' Government. He should be informed that the residence of a claimant may be an important element in particular cases for deciding a question of domicile or identity, or even of bona fides of the claims, and that the Commissioners exercised a wise discretion in settling the rule which Mr. Stewart objects to | 153 |
| 256 | Queen's Advocate | Dec. 9, | Case drawn up, with the aid of Admiral Prevost, setting forth the claim on the part of Her Majesty's Government, with an Appendix accompanying it, to determine the water boundary under the Oregon Treaty of 1846. A French translation also prepared; but the case for the arbitration and award of the Emperor of Germany, to whom it is to be submitted, should be in the English language only | 154 |
| 257 | Queen's Advocate | 12, | As to the reply to be given to Mr. Ashworth on subject of the claims of his clients against the United States for the seizure and destruction of cotton, and the claim of Major Longley on account of his arrest. The latter should lose no time in presenting his claim, but the former claims do not come within the scope of the Washington Commission | 154 |

VENEZUELA.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 258 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 3, 1871 | As to the instructions which should be sent to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas relative to the establishment of a war tax upon houses there, and statement of Señor Guzman, that foreigners were not exempt from that tax by privilege or any Treaty stipulation. The question of exemption should not be raised by Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires | 155 |
| 259 | Queen's Advocate | May 25, | On subject of the Decree issued by present Government of Venezuela, instituting a blockade of that part of the coast which remains in the hands of the party opposed to the Government. Want further information as to the blockade of coasts of the States of Cumona and Maturin being considered an effective blockade before he can report | 155 |
| 260 | Queen's Advocate | June 1, | As to the instructions to be sent to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas relative to British subjects resident there having been deprived of their certificates of nationality | 156 |
| 261 | Queen's Advocate | 15, | Approves draft of despatch to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas relative to the proceedings of the Venezuelan authorities in forcibly depriving certain British subjects of their certificates of nationality—as the certificate of British nationality has not been restored to Volcan, said to have been born in Jamaica | 157 |
| 262 | Queen's Advocate | 28, | As to the course to be pursued relative to the blockade of coasts of Venezuela, and seizure of the British vessel "Unison" by Venezuelan Government for breach of blockade, and of the British vessels "Helen" and "Sophie" by the insurgent Government. As the blockade has been duly notified by the President of the Republic, and the insurgents are entitled to exercise belligerent rights against British commerce, Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in objecting to the capture of British vessels on the high seas by the blockading squadron, but should insist on these vessels being sent before a Prize Court for adjudication | 157 |
| 263 | Queen's Advocate | July 4, | Advisability of publishing in the "London Gazette" an announcement that Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas has received a copy of a Decree of the Provisional President of the Republic of Venezuela, declaring the coasts of Cumona and Maturin to be in a state of blockade | 158 |
| 264 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 8, | As to the instructions to be sent to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires on the forcible seizure of a British subject named Peter R. Thorncroft, by Venezuelan authorities, to be recruited as a soldier in their army. If he owes no allegiance to the Venezuelan Government, and is by origin a British subject, his release may be demanded unconditionally, but inquiry must first be made | 159 |
| 265 | Queen's Advocate | 16, | Further opinion respecting the forcible enlistment of Peter Thorncroft, a British subject, in the Venezuelan army. As he is a native of Venezuela, although of British origin by his father's side, cannot claim any exemption of right from the obligation of military service unless under some special Treaty engagement | 159 |
| 266 | Queen's Advocate | 17, | If any further steps to be taken beyond those adopted by Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas relative to the issue of a Decree by the President of the State of Bolivia, compelling foreigners resident there to serve in armed patrols, the members of the Diplomatic Corps having protested against it. It would depend on the execution of the Decree, and whether a military character were given to patrols, to constitute a breach of the Treaty engagements | 160 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 267 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 17, 1871 | As to the arrest and subsequent release of a British subject named Luciano Agostini by the Venezuelan authorities. Her Majesty's Government would be justified in remonstrating against British subjects being held guilty of disrespect by disregarding the requisition of the authorities for him to furnish a baggage horse for army purposes. British subjects are exempt from such requisitions under the Treaty of the 18th April, 1825 .. .. .. | 160 |
| 268 | Queen's Advocate | Oct. 9, | Further respecting British subjects being deprived of their certificates of nationality under the present law. British subjects, born within Venezuelan territory, of whatever origin, are entitled to the status of natural-born Venezuelan citizens, and British subjects, under such circumstances, cannot claim to be treated differently from natural-born Venezuelan subjects. Suggestions when certificates ought not to be cancelled, and when parties born of British parents should have the option of remaining foreigners .. .. | 161 |
| 269 | Queen's Advocate | 23, | As to steps that should be taken by Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas relative to two outrages committed at the instigation of General Pulgar, President of the State of Zulia, and his brother, Don Rafael Pulgar, on Mr. Harris and Mr. O'Connor. The two cases dissimilar. Mr. O'Connor should obtain redress through the Venezuelan Courts, as the outrage was the act of one not in authority; but Mr. Harris was justified in seeking the protection of Her Majesty's Government, and instructions should be sent to Mr. Middleton to bring the case formally before the Venezuelan Government .. .. .. .. | 161 |
| 270 | Queen's Advocate | 27, | Not expedient for Her Majesty's Government to take any steps in the matter of the sale of the steam-tug "John Cumming" in the port of Trinidad, in the present state of Venezuelan affairs .. .. .. .. .. | 162 |
| 271 | Queen's Advocate | Nov. 13, | As to the issue of a Decree of the Provisional President of Venezuela, establishing a blockade of the coast embraced by the mouths of the Orinoco. Nothing to render it invalid, so long as it is effectively maintained according to the Declaration of Paris of 1856 .. .. . | 162 |
| 272 | Queen's Advocate | 25, | With respect to the claim of Pierre Soria, a native of Trinidad, against the Venezuelan Government, on account of losses by proceedings of the party in arms against the present Government of Venezuela. Her Majesty's Government cannot claim for him a more advantageous position than native Venezuelans as regards compensation, and he must look to the Venezuelan Government for protection .. | 162 |
| 273 | Queen's Advocate | Dec. 11, | Further relative to the Decree of the Venezuelan Government declaring the blockade of the mouth of the Orinoco. Approves publication of notification of the Decree in the "London Gazette" and of the prepared form .. .. | 163 |
| 274 | Queen's Advocate | 29, | As to the seizure and ill-treatment of the crews of certain fishing boats belonging to and manned by persons residing in Trinidad by an armed Venezuelan felucha. The fishing boats were liable to capture, as the indulgence granted in time of war is of ancient date and is now fallen into disuse. The ordinary fishing licences which they had would not warrant the crews pursuing their avocation within three miles of a coast under blockade .. .. .. | 164 |

ZANZIBAR.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 275 | Law Officers .. | July 31, 1871 | As to the legality of forms of contracts entered into by British-Indian subjects resident at Zanzibar for the hire of slave labour. Both are illegal, as they would show a dealing in slaves .. .. .. .. .. .. | 165 |

No. 1.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received February 23.)

My Lord, Temple, February 21, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres, relative to the losses inflicted on British subjects in Entre Rios owing to the civil war now raging in that province. Lord Enfield was also pleased to inclose a Memorandum, drawn up in the Foreign Office, showing the state of the province in question, and to state that, in view of the declaration of the Argentine Government that they will not entertain claims resulting from the war, unless substantiated by proper documentary evidence, your Lordship would be glad to be furnished with my opinion as to the course which Mr. Macdonell should be instructed to pursue towards that Government and towards those British subjects who have been the victims of the revolution.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. Macdonell should be instructed to ascertain from the Government of Entre Rios what is the nature of the documentary evidence with which it will require to be furnished in support of any claims which Mr. Macdonell may feel it to be his duty to bring to the attention of that Government, and upon obtaining that information Mr. Macdonell may properly direct all British subjects who may apply to him to advocate claims on their part to be compensated by the Argentine Government for losses inflicted upon them in the course of the civil war, to furnish him with the necessary documents to support such claims. If the requirements of the Argentine Government should on inquiry appear to Mr. Macdonell to be unreasonable, and such as the sufferers cannot be expected to satisfy, Mr. Macdonell should be instructed to report further to your Lordship, unless he feels himself to be in a position to remonstrate at once with that Government before reporting to your Lordship; but upon this point your Lordship will be better able to decide as to the degree of discretion to be exercised by Mr. Macdonell.

I have, &c.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received August 8.)

My Lord, Temple, August 7, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 21st February last, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying further despatches, to and from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres, upon the subject of the refusal of the Argentine Government to grant compensation to British subjects who have settled in Entre Rios for losses sustained by them in consequence of the revolution which took place in that province. Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that I would take these despatches into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the proper course for Her Majesty's Government to pursue in this matter.

1871

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Government would not be justified, in my opinion, in the absence of any Treaty securing to British subjects established in the Argentine territory a privileged status, in claiming for them any greater measure of compensation for losses incurred by them during the civil war than is accorded by the Argentine Government to loyal Argentine citizens. Unless, therefore, the Argentine Government should determine to compensate its own loyal citizens for losses incurred by them from requisitions made on their property by the rebel armies, I am of opinion that the proper course for Her Majesty's Government to adopt would be to limit its interference on behalf of British subjects established in the Argentine territory to cases where the troops of the Government hitherto recognized by Her Majesty's Government have made requisitions on their property. It would appear, however, that the Argentine Government is not indisposed to listen favourably to claims of this latter description, subject, however, to certain conditions as to proofs, which it may be impossible for British subjects in many cases to comply with. Under such circumstances, Her Majesty's Government would be, in my opinion, justified in interfering to obtain more equitable conditions for British subjects as regards the production of proofs to establish the integrity of their claims. In what particular manner the rules laid down by the Argentine Government should be modified is rather a matter of detail, upon which I cannot venture to advise your Lordship, and which your Lordship may probably think fit to intrust to the discretion of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TRAVERS TWISS.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received October 10.)

Temple, October 9, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed documents as marked in margin,* with respect to the claim of Mr. Williams to recover the value of some property which he stated was unjustly seized from his father-in-law by the Argentine Government, and which had formed the subject of a lengthened law-suit between himself and the Municipality of Buenos Ayres; and he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take the case into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in interfering in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, on carefully considering these papers, we have come to the conclusion that the decision of the Argentine Courts, whether or not it were venal, as Mr. Williams suggests, was manifestly wrong. If the question depended entirely on documentary evidence of title, we should hesitate to express ourselves so decidedly, although the inclination of our opinion would be strongly in favour of Mr. Williams. But, if it be an uncontroverted fact, as would appear from these papers, that Mr. Williams and those under whom he claims have held uninterrupted and unquestioned possession of the land, the subject-matter of the suit, for more than forty years before the passing of the Prescription Act, 29th July, 1867, the case appears clear.

Although we subscribe to the general rule, that the judgments of the Tribunals of civilized countries ought to be respected, still, assuming always the facts we have stated, the judgments in question appear to us so manifestly wrong (so wrong, indeed, as to give some colour to the suspicion of their bona fides), that we think Her Majesty's Government would be justified in making a representation on the subject to the Argentine Government: the form of that representation is rather a matter of policy than of law.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received March 9.)

My Lord, Temple, March 9, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter, with its inclosure, from the Board of Trade, respecting a question which has arisen as to whether Belgian mail-packets should be exempted, under the circumstances mentioned in the correspondence, from the payment of certain dues, to which English and French mail-packets are liable on entering Dover Harbour; and Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship, at my earliest convenience, with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the Board of Trade on this subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship ought not, in my opinion, to sanction the levying of port dues upon the vessels of the Belgian Government which carry the mails between Dover and Ostend, except under a Postal Convention with the Belgian Government. The distinction which is at present made between the vessels of the Belgian Government and the vessels of the railway companies, which use the port of Dover, is not founded upon the principle assumed in Mr. Farrer's letter of the 3rd March to the Secretary of the Treasury, that the former are improperly regarded as vessels of war, whilst the latter are treated as vessels of commerce, but upon the fact that the former are the property of the Belgian State, whereas the latter are the property of private companies, and the universal practice amongst nations is to admit the public ships of friendly States into their ports under a total exemption from the law of the territory.

I may take the liberty of inviting your Lordship's attention to the Postal Convention concluded between France and England on the 24th September, 1856 (10 Hertslet, p. 100), where the distinction is recognized between national vessels, the property of either Government, and vessels chartered or subsidized by either Government, the latter being declared liable to the payment of local port dues, whereas the exemption of the former is maintained.

My Lord, Temple, December 20, 1871.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a note and inclosure from the Belgian Minister at this Court notifying the arrest by the High Court of Admiralty of the Belgian mail-steamer "Belgique;" that that arrest was stated to be illegal under the terms of the VIIth Article of the Convention of the 19th October, 1844 (copy inclosed); and that your Lordship would be glad to learn our opinion on that case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That the arrest of the Belgian Government mail-packet by process of the Admiralty Court is illegal. It is in contravention of Article VII of the Convention of the 19th October, 1844, as well as of the general law of nations, which exempts ships under the public commission of a State from civil process within the ports of a foreign country. It is probable that on a representation being made by the Post-office authorities, the Judge of the High Court of Admiralty would at once direct the arrest to be removed, but the correct course of proceeding would be for the Belgian Minister to direct an appearance to be given under protest to the jurisdiction of the Court, and pray the release of the vessel upon bail, without prejudice to the question of jurisdiction. The vessel would thereupon be immediately released, and the agent of the Belgian Government will be at liberty to apply to have the bail discharged, with costs and with damages, if the service of her mails has been prejudiced by the arrest.

My Lord, Temple, October 10, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me, for any observations I might have to offer thereupon, a letter from the Bolivian Consul-General in London, inclosing a copy of a Decree issued by the President of Bolivia upon the subject of diplomatic reclamations in that Republic.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, as I understand the Decree of the President, it purports to lay down two rules:—

1. That in all cases where foreign subjects have claims of private interest, and the Bolivian Courts are open to them, they must prosecute their rights in those Courts before they have recourse to diplomatic reclamations, and that the latter will only be admitted where justice is delayed or has been denied by the Courts.

2. That where the claims of foreign subjects are at variance with the laws of Bolivia no diplomatic reclamations against the decisions of the Courts will be admitted on their behalf, except in cases allowed by the law of nations.

To the first of these rules I see no objection in principle.

With regard to the second Rule, if the 4th Article of the Decree may be rightfully interpreted as permitting diplomatic reclamations against the decisions of the Courts in all cases where such reclamations would be sanctioned by the law of nations, I think it rather an advantage that this admission of the Government of Bolivia should be officially placed on record by the Decree of the President.

I AM honoured with your Lornship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch, and its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Brazil reporting the circumstances under which Mr. Fox, Superintendent, and Mr. Fryer, Traffic Manager of the railway in the province of San Paulo, have been imprisoned by the Brazilian authorities on a charge of homicide in connection with an accident on the railway; and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon, and as to any steps which should be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio Janeiro should be instructed to watch the case and give any assistance in his power, if there should be occasion for it, to secure that Mr. Fox and Mr. Fryer shall have a fair trial. As I have no information as to the Brazillian law, I am unable to form an opinion upon the propriety of the proceedings of the Chief of the Police at San Paulo; but as they have been affirmed on appeal to a superior Court, the presumption is that the Chief of the Police is right in his interpretation of the law, as it applies to the early stages of the inquiry, although it may be ultimately established that neither Mr. Fox nor Mr. Fryer are guilty of the homicide imputed to them. When Mr. Cobbold shall have forwarded to your Lordship the answer which may be returned to his confidential communication with his Excellency, Dr. Corrien, I shall be better able to judge of the propriety of any further instructions being given to him.

WE are honoured with your Lordships's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro, inclosing a project of law for the abolition of slavery in Brazil, and inquiring whether it would be legal for a British subject to contract with a slave, under the provisions of Article IV., paragraphs 2 and 3, for the hire of his services during a term of years, for a sum of money to be applied in purchasing his freedom.

And that he was to request that we would be good enough to favour your Lordship with our opinion upon that question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have taken this question into consideration, and have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that British subjects may lawfully enter into such contracts, as such contracts are for the purpose of purchasing the immediate freedom of the slaves, subject however to the condition of the freed-man compensating the person, who may have purchased his freedom, by his unpaid services during a limited term of years.

A despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affairs at Rio de Janeiro, reporting the result of his inquiries on the subject, was also inclosed, and Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, together with the previous papers, some of which I have already perused, and which were also inclosed, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in instructing Her Majesty's Representative at Rio to interfere further in the matter.

My Lord, Temple, October 25, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro respecting an action brought by Messrs. Figueredo and Brothers, furniture dealers in that city, against the Queen Insurance Company, of Liverpool and London, to recover the amount of damages caused by the destruction of their property by fire. That I should perceive by Mr. Cobbold's despatch that judgment has been given against the Insurance Company in the Brazilian Law Courts, and that the acting agent of the Company, Mr. Lyde, has been imprisoned by order of the Judge, this decision being, in the opinion of several eminent lawyers, unjust, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these despatches into my consideration, and advise your Lordship as to the proper course to be pursued in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That this case is not free from difficulty, as, under the law which prevails in England, a foreigner, against whom an action is pending in an English Court, may be arrested upon an affidavit made before a Judge, that he is about to leave the country, and may be detained in prison until he finds security to satisfy the cause of action. Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio Janeiro states that, in the opinion of three eminent lawyers, the verdict of the Courts is not in accordance with law, and it appears that the case is appealed to the Supreme Court, but he does not state that the Judge's order for the imprisonment of Mr. Lyde is contrary to law.

I cannot, therefore, without further information, advise your Lordship to instruct Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio to interfere further than he has already done with the legal proceedings against Mr. Lyde.

With regard to the instructions with which Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires requests to be provided, as to how far Her Majesty's Legation may interpose against such frequent recurring infringements of the personal liberty of Her Majesty's subjects at Rio, no general instructions can well be given to Mr. Cobbold, as each case must depend upon its own peculiar circumstances, beyond authorizing him to interpose in all cases where such imprisonment is clearly contrary to Brazilian law.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 25th ultimo, he was directed to transmit to me the inclosed letter from the Chairman of the Queen Insurance Company in London, upon the subject of the judgment given by the Brazilian Law Courts in the action brought by Messrs. Figueredo and Brothers against the Queen Insurance Company, and the sentence of a year's imprisonment which has been passed by those Tribunals on Mr. Lyde, the Company's agent at Rio de Janeiro. Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this letter into my consideration, and inform your Lordship whether it contains any further information which might induce me to alter the opinion already expressed on this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the legality of the imprisonment to which Mr. Lyde has been condemned is a question of Brazilian law, in which your Lordship cannot properly interfere, at least at present. The circumstance that Mr. Lyde has no funds of the Insurance Company under his control at Rio does not appear to me to affect this question, and I see no grounds in the further information for altering the opinion which I have already expressed on this case.

No. 14.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received January 31.)

My Lord, Temple, January 30, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 5th May, 1870, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Mr. H. Goussen, inclosing legal documents, with translations, in support of his claim upon the Nicaraguan Government on account of monies which he has been compelled to contribute to forced loans by the authorities of that Republic; and he was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon. The previous papers were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That assuming that the statement of Mr. Hilario Goussen having been born within Her Majesty's dominions remains unimpeached, upon the assumption of which fact I reported to your Lordship on the 5th May last that he was entitled to the benefit of the Treaty privileges secured to British subjects residing within the Nicaraguan territory, I am of opinion that your Lordship may properly instruct Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Guatemala to demand from the Nicaraguan Government the reimbursement of all sums of money exacted from Mr. Hilario Goussen under the Decree of the Nicaraguan Junta of Calculations of the 27th June, 1869, with such legal interest as is current at Nicaragua, and also of the expenses to which he has been subjected in obtaining legal certificates, and which form the third item of his claim as submitted to your Lordship.

With regard, however, to his further claim for damage, on account of the forcible detention of himself and his family in his house for five days, in consequence of his refusal to submit to the Decree, I am not disposed to advise your Lordship to countenance such a claim.

I am of opinion that Mr. Hilario Goussen was wrong in the course which he adopted. He ought, in my opinion, after his claim of exemption had been overruled by the local authorities, to have paid the forced loan under protest, and referred the question of his exemption under the Treaty at once to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires.

My Lord, Temple, December 14, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 12th instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 30th January last, on the subject of Mr. Goussen's claim upon the Nicaraguan Government, he was directed to transmit to me a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Central America, from which I should learn the grounds upon which the Nicaraguan Government decline to comply with the demands made upon them on behalf of Mr. Goussen, and to request that I would take the case again into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to any further steps that can be taken in this matter. The previous papers were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That an important question is raised in the last paragraph of the despatch of the Nicaraguan Minister of Foreign Affairs, namely, whether Mr. Goussen, on the assumption that he is a natural born British subject, has not become a Nicaraguan citizen by marrying a Nicaraguan woman, and acquiring landed property in Nicaragua. Don Rafael Zurita contends, indeed, that Mr. Goussen, under these circumstances, has lost his primitive nationality according to the laws in force in Nicaragua, "to which Mr. Goussen submitted with the greatest willingness." Now, although Don Rafael Zurita may have formed too high a notion of the authority of the Legislature of Nicaragua in assuming that it could deprive Mr. Goussen of his primitive nationality, he may be justified in contending that under those laws Mr. Goussen has acquired the status of a naturalized Nicaraguan within the Nicaraguan territory, and in such character would be properly subject to the obligations of natural born Nicaraguans. Before Mr. Corbett proceeds any further in this case, it will be desirable, in my opinion, that he should be instructed to ascertain what are the facts as regards the alleged marriage of Mr. Goussen with a Nicaraguan woman, and his acquisition of landed property in Nicaragua, as well as the law of Nicaragua applicable to the facts when ascertained. It is probable that Mr. Goussen has, by his long residence in Granada, acquired an international domicile in Nicaragua, but whether he is a naturalized Nicaraguan, as Don Raphael Zurita contends, is a question of Nicaraguan law, respecting which I am at present unable to advise your Lordship with any certainty.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me, together with the previous papers on the subject, the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Central America, relative to a claim made upon the Salvadorian Government by Mr. Charles E. Comyn, on account of his arrest and detention by the Salvadorian authorities, on a groundless charge of conspiring to assassinate the President of that Republic; and to request that I would take the case into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Mr. Corbett with regard to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. Corbett may, in my opinion, be properly instructed to inform Mr. Charles E. Comyn that Her Majesty's Government cannot support his demand against the Government of San Salvador for compensation in so high a scale. It appears, indeed, from Mr. Gregory's letter of the 3rd August, that Mr. Charles E. Comyn has given himself up to a life of military adventure, and that he is now apparently in the service of the party which has come to power in San Salvador on the overthrow of Dueñas, the late President.

If Mr. C. E. Comyn was in any way mixed up with political parties in San Salvador at the time when he was arrested on the charge of a conspiracy against the life of the then President, whom I presume to be the President Dueñas mentioned in Mr. Gregory's letter, I think it open to doubt whether his arrest was not amongst the chances of the career which he has chosen, and I should be of opinion he would have a very faint claim, if any, for your Lordship's protection. Otherwise, I should be of opinion that he has some claim to compensation from the manner in which he was arrested, and the refusal of the authorities to allow him to communicate with the British Vice-Consul, but not on account of damage done to his character, of which he appears to have formed an exaggerated estimate.

Lord Enfield was also pleased to inclose a letter on this subject from the Registrar General, and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as the validity of the marriage in question.

In obedience to your Lordships's commands, I have the honour to report—

That the validity of the marriage in question is at least open to doubt. There may be circumstances in this case upon proof of which a Court might pronounce the marriage to be valid, but such circumstances are in my opinion not disclosed in the letter of Mr. Vice-Consul Schwager, which rather suggests that according to the law of Chili a civil ceremony ought to have preceded or followed the religious ceremony.

That Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires may be properly instructed to give to Messrs. In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it has been the long-established rule of the French Prize Courts not to allow the sale of an enemy's vessel to a neutral after the commencement of war to change its national character, so as to exempt it from capture on the high seas. The right of France to observe such a rule cannot be impugned, and the French Courts have acted upon it, both when France was at war with England in 1801 (the "Sechs Geschwestern," 4 ch. Rob., p. 100), and when France was the ally of England against Russia in 1854. Under these circumstances, although Great Britain may be content to observe a milder rule, as in the case of the "Ariel" (11 Moore, P. C., p. 119), upon which Mr. Rennie relied in advising Her Majesty's Consul at Shanghae, the rule of the English Courts is not binding upon France, and I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Consul at Shanghae made a mistake in protesting against the capture of the "Robert Rickmers" by the French Admiral.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Peking, with its inclosures, in regard to the status of Sister Louise, a native of Ireland, and one of the French Sisters of Charity, who were massacred at Tient-sin in June last; and he was to request that we would take this despatch into our consideration, together with Clause 14 of the Order in Council of March 1865, herewith inclosed, relative to the registration of British subjects in China and Japan, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the non-registration of Sister Louise at Her Majesty's Consulate does not affect her position as a British subject. A copy of the papers which have been presented to Parliament in connection with the Tient-sin massacre were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, the non-registration of Sister Louise, although it would have dis-entitled her from claiming protection as a British subject from Her Majesty's Consul at Tient-sin, if on application for his protection she could not have excused her neglect to his satisfaction, does not affect her international status as a British subject in any question which Her Majesty's Government may think fit to raise in regard to her treatment by the Chinese authorities.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received May 21.)

Temple, May 11, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Pekin, respecting a case which was tried before the Consular Court at Taiwan, the decision of which has been reversed by the Supreme Court at Shanghae. Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, together with the previous papers referred to by Mr. Wade, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the difference which exists between the Representative of Her Majesty at Pekin and Sir E. Hornby is rather one as to the spirit, in which proceedings, such as those of the British subjects who had been plundered of their camphor, should be regarded by the British authorities in China, than a difference as to the facts of the particular case. Mr. Wade is not prepared to differ from Sir E. Hornby's view of the facts, nor to question the correctness of his decision on those facts. We may say that we concur, on the whole, in the view which Sir E. Hornby took of the particular facts before him, and there does not seem anything to complain of in the language in which the Chief Judge conveyed his view. But Mr. Wade (judging probably from other cases and materials not before us) seems to apprehend some divergence of feeling between himself and the Chief Judge as to the leniency or stringency with which the English authorities, political or judicial, ought to deal with acts of a somewhat high-handed sort on the part of British subjects to redress undoubted wrongs committed on themselves in Chinese territory; the Chief Judge apparently thinking that to rely on the Chinese authorities is practically useless in such matters, the Minister thinking that on the whole and in course of time it is better for our interests to treat them as really civilized officials, and to rely upon the forms which have been found sufficient with other civilized countries. It is impossible for us, as Law Officers, to advise your Lordship which, as a matter of policy, is the better course to be pursued; as matter of argument it is obvious that much is to be said on either side. It might, however, be sufficient for your Lordship to say to Mr. Wade, if you think fit to do so, that you are advised that Sir E. Hornby's judgment does not appear to conflict either with the evidence in the case or with any known legal principle, but that you are very sensible of the importance of preserving, so far as possible, all outward respect and courtesy towards the Chinese authorities, and that you are not disposed to question the propriety of Mr. Wade's order to Mr. Hewlett not to publish Sir E. Hornby's decision in Formosa, nor, generally speaking, the wisdom of the principles on which Mr. Wade desires to act.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a note from the French Chargé d'Affaires at this Court, communicating a copy of a note addressed by the French Government to the Prussian Government on the question of the liability of the officers and crews of captured merchants vessels to be treated as prisoners of war, and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, the Comte de Chandordy is, in my opinion, justified in denying that the Declaration of Paris of 16th April, 1856, whereby "la course" is declared to be abolished, involves, as a question of principle, the abolition of the practice of treating the crews of enemy's merchant vessels as prisoners of war. The reasoning of Count Bismarck assumes that the crews of enemy's merchant vessels, when captured, have been hitherto treated as prisoners of war by reason of the vessels themselves being at any time convertible into privateers; but upon the same principle, the crews of neutral vessels, when captured, would have been liable to similar treatment. Neutral vessels might, according to the practice of nations, have at any time accepted letters of marque from the enemy. The true reason would seem to be that the crews of enemy's merchant vessels were regarded as enemies, precisely as the crews of neutral vessels, carrying contraband of war or seeking to break a blockade, were liable to be treated as prisoners of war, as being quasi-hostes as it were enemies by reason of their seeking to promote the interests of one belligerent to the disadvantage of the other.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 10th instant, stating:—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that in the course of an inquiry instituted by your Lordship into the Consular establishments in Turkey, it appeared that certain duties devolved upon the Legal Vice-Consul at Alexandria, an officer whose time was very fully occupied, which it would seem might be equally well performed by the Law Secretary.

2. That Mr. Lane, the Legal Vice-Consul at that place, was thereupon called on to report on the subject, and was instructed to specify the duties which he considered might be confided to the Law Secretary.

3. That the inclosed despatch contained his statement in reply; the Orders in Council under which he acted were also therewith transmitted, and Viscount Enfield was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether an authorization from your Lordship would be sufficient to enable the Law Secretary to perform any and which of those duties.

4. That if such authorization would not be sufficient, your Lordship would be glad to learn in what manner we think the requisite permission could be given, and that your Lordship was averse, however, to the multiplication of Orders in Council, except in cases of actual necessity.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have no information as to the authority under which Dr. Arpa holds the office of Law Secretary of Her Majesty's Consular Court of Egypt, nor as to the functions exercised by him.

We find no provision in the Order in Council of the 30th November, 1864, for the appointment of any such officer except in the case of the Supreme Consular Court of Constantinople.

Under these circumstances, as we are at present informed, we are of opinion that it will be necessary for an Order in Council to be passed, if your Lordship holds it to be desirable to relieve the Legal Vice-Consul in Egypt of a portion of the duties heretofore discharged by him and to impose them upon a Law Secretary, and that those duties should be specified in the Order in Council, as in the case of the Law Secretary of the Supreme Consular Court.

Temple, January 9, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating—

1. That, since the receipt of our Report of the 30th ultimo, respecting the proposed new telegraph cable between the French and English coasts, he was directed by your Lordship to inform us that it appeared from a communication made to the Foreign Office that day (i.e., the 6th instant) by Mr. Scudamore, the second Secretary to the Postmaster-General, that as the question appeared to be one of a pressing nature, the letter from the Post Office, of the 29th ultimo, which formed the subject of our Report of the 30th December, had been sent off without in the first instance being submitted to the Postmaster-General, who was absent from London at the time.

2. That Lord Hartington having since been made cognizant of that correspondence, had observed that the Department, acting on the advice of the Law Officers, given partly on the information contained in the Post Office letter, had, as your Lordship apprehended, arrived at an erroneous conclusion, or at least had come to a decision on incorrect grounds. That his Lordship apprehended that the tone of the Post Office letter had caused statements, which in themselves were accurate, to be altogether misinterpreted. That his Lordship observed that it was perfectly true that, but for the war, the proposal for the additional cable would not have been made by the French Government, or entertained by the Submarine Telegraph Company, and also that a single wire would be of great use to the Government, and but little to the public, but Lord Hartington doubted the accuracy of the assertion that it was "necessitated by the military requirements of the French Government," or, that it "would be employed almost exclusively for French military purposes." No doubt his Lordship observed the line might be employed, as suggested, as an indirect means of communication between the different armies of France, but Lord Hartington expressed his doubts whether this would have been its principal object. He observed that it was quite conceivable that the French Government might wish to be in direct telegraphic communication with this country, and through this country with the rest of the world for other than military purposes; that it was possible also that the post might be used for the purposes suggested, but that the Post Office had not hesitated to make the best arrangements in their power to restore communication which had been interrupted.

3. That Lord Hartington proceeded to say that, in his opinion, the prohibition which seemed to have been given was an unfriendly, and, as he should have almost considered, an unneutral act, and, in conclusion, the Postmaster-General, after again expressing his apprehension that the remarks contained in the Post Office letter had been misunderstood, requested that, unless any reasons existed which did not appear on the papers, for supposing that the cable was required for military purposes, the matter might be again taken into consideration.

That Mr. Hammond was accordingly to request that we would again consider this matter together, with the observations of the Postmaster-General as therein expressed, and that we would inform your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, whether we saw any reason to alter or modify, and, if so, to what extent, the opinion which we had already given on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have again considered this matter, and have the honour to report—

That the observations of Lord Hartington, as reported to us by your Lordship's desire, place us in some difficulty; for Lord Hartington observes that the statements in the last three paragraphs of Mr. Scudamore's letter are in themselves accurate, but that the tone of that letter has possibly misled us.

We are unable to distinguish between the statements in the letter and the tone of it, and it was upon the statements now said by Lord Hartington to be accurate that we based our Report. They appear to us still entirely to justify it. If indeed Mr. Scudamore has misinformed us, we shall of course be ready to change or modify our Report, but until we are informed in what particular his letter was inaccurate, we are unable to do so.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Bordeaux, inclosing a copy of a letter from Mr. Robert William Kirby, who appeared to be a British subject, and had for some time past been established at La Torté Imbault, in the Department of the Loire-et-Cher, and who complained of the ill-treatment experienced by himself and his family at the hands of German troops, not only in regard to requisitions levied by them, but also to acts of personal violence.

2. That Mr. Hammond inclosed a copy of a despatch which your Lordship proposed to address to Lord Lyons instructing his Excellency to inform Mr. Kirby of the reasons for which Her Majesty's Government do not consider themselves justified in interfering in this case, and which was founded upon the opinion contained in our letter of the 26th August last, in regard to the liability of British subjects to requisitions when residing in countries which were the scene of military operations, and that Mr. Hammond was to add that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion whether there was anything in the present case which should induce your Lordship to alter or modify the instruction which it was proposed to address to Lord Lyons.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there is nothing in the present case which in our opinion should induce your Lordship to alter or modify the instruction which it is proposed to address to Lord Lyons.

It is rather the Prussian Government than the French who should be addressed upon the subject; but if the Prussian Minister were applied to, he would reply with truth that things of this sort are inseparable from war, and that an English resident in France cannot, for these purposes, be distinguished from a Frenchman.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 30th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter from Mr. Peter A. Rickmers, a native of Heligoland, requesting the interference of Her Majesty's Government with a view to obtaining the release of his vessel, the "Sophie Rickmers," which has been captured and taken into the port of Saigon by French cruizers; and he was to request that I would take this letter into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship, at my early convenience, with my opinion whether any and what instructions should be addressed to Her Majesty's Consul at Saigon on this subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report—

That this is not a case in which your Lordship would be justified, from considerations either of municipal or of international law, in instructing Her Majesty's Consul at Saigon to intervene. The statement of Mr. Rickmers does not show that he was qualified to become the owner of a British ship on the 10th November last, when he alleges that he purchased the "Sophie Rickmers." Assuming him to be a natural born British subject, although he does not state that he was born within Her Majesty's dominions, I am of opinion that he disqualified himself to be the owner of a British ship by taking an oath of allegiance to the Free State of Bremen; and he does not show that he has complied with the requirements of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1854" (17 and 18 Vict., c. 104, s. 18), so as to regain a qualification. The Act 7 and 8 Vict., c. 66, to which he refers, has no application to his case; besides, it was repealed prior to the 26th July last, when he says that he conformed to its provisions. But upon the most favourable view which can be taken of Mr. Rickmer's title to be the owner of a British ship, and of the circumstances of the sale and the registration of the vessel, I am of opinion that, upon principles of international law, your Lordship would not be justified in intervening diplomatically on his behalf. It is for the Prize Court of the captors to determine whether the "Sophie Rickmers" is good prize of war; and I am of opinion that the French Prize Courts, if they observe their long-established practice, will not recognize the sale of an enemy's vessel made in a neutral port after the commencement of the war, the necessity of such sale being caused by the exigencies of the war, and the object of such sale being to defeat the exercise of belligerent right as regards the capture of enemy's property on the high seas.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letters, dated 22nd and 24th instant, and their inclosures, from Messrs. Montgredien, Ellerby, and Co., referring to a contract entered into by them with the French Government for a supply of flour for the revictualling of Paris, and the terms of which they stated had not been observed by that Government; and he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion upon the case as stated by the applicants, and also upon the steps, if any, which it would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to take therein.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Montgredien, Ellerby, and Co. should be informed that Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere in the present stage of their correspondence with the French Government. It does not appear that the French Government wishes to repudiate the purchase of the corn, but it declines to pay for it until after delivery; and we do not find amongst the papers appended to the first letter addressed to your Lordship by Messrs. Montgredien, Ellerby and Co. any undertaking on the part of M. Cuvillier that the payments should be made against delivery. We do not even find it distinctly stated that there was any verbal promise to this effect, though this seems to be implied by the language of Messrs. Montgredien, Ellerby, and Co. On the contrary, it appears from their own statement that they forwarded the corn to France, and handed over the invoices to M. Cuvillier, with a full knowledge that no credit had been opened for them by the French Government with Messrs. Rothschild and Co.

We are accordingly unable to advise your Lordship that there has been hitherto any breach of contract on the part of the French Government which would warrant the intervention of Her Majesty's Government.

Messrs. Montgredien, Ellerby, and Co. should be further informed that if they decline to adopt the course pointed out by the French Government in the telegram from Paris of the 23rd instant, they should take such measures as prudent merchants would take under similar circumstances where they had entered into a contract with a mercantile house, such, in fact, as they have themselves indicated in their letter to Paris of 21st February.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That your Lordship cannot, we think, at present lay down any general rule for the guidance of Mr. West, in the answer which should be returned to such applications, further than that Her Majesty's subjects resident in France, whose property has been destroyed during the war, cannot expect to be compensated on the ground of their being British subjects, for losses which the necessities of war have brought upon them in common with French subjects.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I see no objection to Her Majesty's Consul receiving the will for transmission to Her Majesty's Court of Probate, if the French Courts, upon the application of the executors, are willing to hand it over to Her Majesty's Consul for that purpose; but Her Majesty's Consul should not, in my opinion, make any application to the French Courts, nor intermeddle in any way, except Ministerially, to facilitate the transmission of the will, under the very peculiar circumstances in which the executors are placed by the occurrence of the war.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed to acquaint us that the following question will be asked in the House of Commons, on Friday, the 24th instant:—"Whether the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown has been taken upon the liability of the French Government to compensate British subjects resident in France for loss and damage to their property during the late war?" and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would report to your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, whether in our opinion the French Government is liable for such loss and damage to their property.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That British subjects resident in France would have, in our opinion, no just ground of complaint against the French authorities in the event of their property having been destroyed by the invading armies. Their losses, under such circumstances, would be amongst the inevitable consequences of war raging in a State within which they have chosen, as foreigners, to take up their residence. With regard to such losses, we are of opinion that British subjects would not be entitled to claim any compensation from the French authorities.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Mr. Malet, who is in charge of the British Embassy at Paris, referring to certain cases in which he had been applied to by Irishmen who had been serving in the French army, and had received their discharge, for assistance to enable them to return home.

That as Mr. Malet's despatch raises the wider question of whether British subjects who have voluntarily entered the French service are entitled, on the termination of such service, to be repatriated at the public expense, your Lordship would be glad if I would take this matter into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that the question raised in Mr. Hammond's letter is a question of circumstances, and that it would be unwise for your Lordship to lay down a rule that, under no circumstances should Her Majesty's Government assist a British subject in distress, who had violated the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870, to return to his native country.

Mr. Malet, however, may, in my opinion, be properly instructed that such assistance should only be given in the last resort, where it is established to his satisfaction that the applicant is bonâ fide desirous to return to his native country, and has no other means whatever to enable him to do so.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that Mr. Malet's certificate goes too far. He was, I think, justified in allowing Mr. Bartlett, under the circumstances to make the declaration before him which he countersigned, but he should have stopped there, the matter upon which the certificate bears being a matter of fact not within his knowledge, otherwise than by the declaration of Mr. Bartlett. I do not think that Mr. Malet will have incurred any liability on account of Her Majesty's Government in the event of his certificate being disregarded.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed correspondence which had passed between the Foreign Office and Mr. Charles Stewart* respecting the losses which he stated he had sustained by the occupation of his houses in Paris and the neighbourhood by French troops during the war.

2. That Mr. Stewart, as we would perceive, was answered, upon the receipt of his first letter, according to the terms of our Report of the 23rd ultimo; but he now submits that his case does not come within the terms of those which formed the subject of our opinion, inasmuch as there was "no destruction of property by invading armies," but that the damage was caused in consequence of the occupation of his property by French troops, which property had been vacated by orders of the French authorities themselves.

3. That Mr. Hammond was accordingly to request that we would take Mr. Stewart's case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Stewart should be informed that Her Majesty's subjects resident in France cannot of right claim to be in a better position in respect of their immovable property in France than French subjects; and that if Mr. Stewart has been correctly informed as to the law of France, the intervention of Her Majesty's Government will not be required to enable him to prefer a claim before the French authorities to compensation for any losses resulting to him from the occupation of his houses by French troops. But whether he has been correctly informed, or not, Her Majesty's Government cannot intervene if Mr. Stewart receives at the hands of the French Government the same treatment which French subjects themselves receive.

With regard to Mr. Stewart's allusion to the case of the British ships which were sunk at Rouen, we may observe that there is no analogy between ships and immovable property, and that we advised in that case upon the assumption, which we believe was correct, that the ships in question had gone up to Rouen to unload their cargoes, under a promise or understanding that they would be permitted to return in safety.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Mr. Malet, who is in charge of Her Majesty's Embassy at Paris, relative to an application which has been made to him by an English engineering firm for protection, in case they should be called upon by the Commune to manufacture arms. Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which Mr. Malet should be instructed to return to this application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that Messrs. Varral, Elwell, and Middleton will be entitled to claim for their persons, as British subjects, the protection of Her Majesty's Government, if they should be seized and imprisoned for a refusal to comply with an order of the insurgents to open their works, which I understand from Mr. Thomas Elwell's letter it was their intention to close on the 15th instant, but they would not be entitled to claim the protection of Her Majesty's Government for their property if the Commune should seize upon it.

Temple, April 29, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th instant, stating:—

1st. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Messrs. E. W. Johnson and Company, putting forward a claim to indemnity on account of a quantity of coals, amounting to 150 tons, forming part of a cargo shipped by them for delivery in Paris, and which had been seized by the insurgents in that city, and asking what steps it was necessary for them to take in order to obtain redress from the French Government.

2nd. That Mr. Hammond would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to the answer which it would be proper to return to Messrs. Johnson's letter, and, further, whethe the principle laid down in our letter of the 23rd March last, and in previous reports, to the non-liability of the French Government for injury sustained by British ects resident in France in consequence of the state of war existing between France Prussia, applied equally to those cases in which loss might have been sustained by British subjects either at the hands of the party now opposed to the recognized Government or in consequence of the hostile operations of those two parties.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the French Government cannot properly be held responsible to Her Majesty's Government for the injuries done to the property of British subjects in parts of France which are not under the political control of that Government, and therefore that Mr. Johnson has no claim of right against the Government at Versailles for compensation on account of injuries done to his property by the agents of the Commune at Paris.

Whether the French Government hereafter, or if it should succeed in re-establishing its authority in Paris and mastering the insurrection, will be disposed to compensate foreigners for requisitions made upon their property by the insurgents, is a question upon which your Lordship is better able to form a correct opinion than ourselves. But we would observe that a distinction may well be made by that Government between the losses which have resulted to British subjects in France from the invasion of that country by the German armies during the late war between France and Prussia, and losses resulting to British subjects from the civil war which at present exists in France, and that whilst the French Government will be justified in refusing to make the slightest compensation in the former case to British subjects for the destruction of their property by the subjects of other Powers, they may feel called upon in the latter case, but only as a matter of equity, to make some compensation to British subjects for losses inflicted upon them by French subjects, notwithstanding there has been no effort wanting on the part of that Government to put down the insurrection. We say "only as a matter of equity" because we think that when a Government has spared no effort on its part to control an insurrection, foreigners can have no claim of right against it for compensation on account of losses to which they have been exposed, in common with the subjects of the Government, and from which the Government has been powerless to protect its own subjects.

We should advise that an answer should be given to Mr. Johnson to the effect that your Lordship is not prepared to make any demand, as of right, against the French Government for compensation to be made to British subjects on account of injuries done to their property by the agents of the Commune, but that, in case the French Government should hereafter intimate its willingness to listen to any such claims, the good offices of Her Majesty's Government will be at the service of Mr. Johnson upon its having been established to the satisfaction of Her Majesty's Government that the interest in the goods when seized was exclusively British.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch and its inclosures received from Her Majesty's Ambassador in France, with reference to the arrest of Mr. George J. Spelman, a British subject, by the Communist authorities in Paris, whilst, as he states, he was proceeding to give an English lesson to one of his pupils in that city. That Mr. Spelman, as I should perceive, claims a pecuniary indemnity on account of this outrage, and the punishment of the principal parties concerned. Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this case into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris has taken a correct view of Mr. Spelman's case, and that your Lordship cannot properly make any demand against the French Government for a pecuniary indemnity to be made to Mr. Spelman for the indignities to which he reports himself to have been exposed at the hands of the insurgents in Paris. With regard to his suggestion that Her Majesty's Government should make a demand for compensation on his behalf against the Commune of Paris, I am of opinion that your Lordship cannot properly make any such demand, unless Her Majesty's Government has recognized the Government of the insurgents in Paris as a de facto Government, which I apprehend not to be the case.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Versailles, inclosing an application for his official intervention which has been addressed to him by Mr. J. R. Curtis, a British-born subject, naturalized in Prussia, Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course which Lord Lyons should be instructed to pursue in this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That his Excellency Lord Lyons is correct in his view that this is not a case in which Her Majesty's Government would be justified in intervening. Mr. J. R. Curtis should be informed by Lord Lyons that as Messrs. Porter and Co. have suffered, as he represents, by a wrongful judgment of an inferior French Court in a matter within its jurisdiction, they must proceed in the ordinary manner, as pointed out by the French Law of Procedure, to obtain a reversion of that judgment by the competent Court of Appeal.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Lord Lyons inclosing a copy of a letter addressed to him by Mr. Myers, who stated that he was a British subject, asking his Excellency's intervention to obtain for him compensation for the loss of merchandize burnt in the recent conflagration in the docks at La Villette.

2. That as Lord Lyons anticipated receiving other applications of a similar nature from British subjects who had suffered in consequence of the recent struggle in Paris and its neighbourhood, he was to request that we would favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Her Majesty's Ambassador in the present, and any cases of a like nature.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, before reporting to your Lordship on this case, as your Lordship's decision may govern many other cases, we should wish to be informed under what conditions the goods of Mr. Myers were received into the docks at La Villette.

Mr. Myers states in his letter to Lord Lyons of June 2nd that the goods were for the most part under the charge of the French Customs "en Douane," but he does not say for what purpose they were so under charge. We think it probable they were so under charge for the sole benefit of Mr. Myers, in which case, upon the ordinary principles of jurisprudence applicable to "deposits" the French authorities would only be answerable to Mr. Myers for gross neglect, whereas the destruction of the docks was brought about by fire in consequence of an insurrection, which the French Government could not control, notwithstanding its utmost efforts to master it.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, inclosing a copy of a letter from Mr. George Hewitt, inquiring whether he was entitled to compensation for the destruction of two houses belonging to him at Asnières, which had been burnt by shells during the late struggle between the French Government troops and the insurgents.

That Lord Lyons had been instructed in regard to the answer to be returned to claims for compensation for the destruction of the immovable property of British subjects during the late war between the German and French Governments, but since, as he observed, claimants would no doubt take a distinction between a regular war and a species of civil war such as had lately raged in and around Paris, his Excellency was anxious to be furnished with authoritative instructions upon that subject, and he (Mr. Hammond) was, therefore, to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Lord Lyons' despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the above despatch into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Mr. George Hewitt should be informed that, with regard to the destruction of his houses at Villette by shells during the contest between the troops of the French Government and the insurgents, he cannot claim to be in any better position than a French citizen.

That he must wait to see what course the French Government is prepared to adopt with regard to the destruction under similar circumstances of the houses of loyal French citizens; and that Her Majesty's Government is not disposed to claim, on behalf of British subjects who have established themselves in France, any privilege by way of compensation for the destruction of their immovable property under such circumstances which shall not be accorded by the French Government to loyal French citizens.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence with Messrs. Robert von Glehn and Sons, referring to the destruction in consequence of the recent fire at Villette of a quantity of coffee belonging to them, and then lying in the bonded warehouse of the Magasins Généraux, and inquiring whether Her Majesty's Government would take steps to obtain an indemnity for them from the French Government.

And that he was to request us to take the case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the applicants.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Robert von Glehn and Sons should be informed that British subjects cannot claim to be in a better position than French citizens in regard to any merchandize deposited on their account in the Magasins Généraux at La Villette, which has been destroyed in consequence of the recent fire; that they must wait and see what course the French Government will adopt in regard to the property of French citizens destroyed under similar circumstances. We have assumed that the members of the firm of Messrs. My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris inclosing correspondence on the subject of the imprisonment in the fortress of Bitche of Mr. Frederick John Apel, who claimed the intervention of Her Majesty's Government to obtain compensation from the French Government; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be sent to Lord Lyons respecting that case.

In obedience to youe Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the circumstances under which Mr. John Apel was captured and imprisoned in the fortress of Bitche are not, in our opinion, such as would warrant your Lordship in making any demand upon the French Government for compensation to be made to him for his imprisonment. It is admitted by Mr. John Apel that he was domiciled in Germany at the time when he set out from Neustadt; that he was travelling under the protection of German papers; that he was employed on an errand most hostile to the French, namely, in selling maps of the country to the German armies, and that when he was captured he was preparing to take a sketch of a French fortress, which had already been attacked by the Germans and was expecting a fresh assault and siege. Under these circumstances we are of opinion that the papers and employment alone of Mr. John Apel entitled the Commandant of the fortress to treat him as an enemy, and that, if Mr. John Apel had otherwise claims to your Lordship's protection as a natural-born subject of the Queen, he would have forfeited such claim in virtue of his hostile employment at the time of his arrest. We are further of opinion that the fact of Mr. John Apel's German domicile deprives him of any right which he might have had on the ground of his birth in this country to require the interference of Her Majesty's Government on his behalf.

We consider, therefore, that both of the questions submitted to your Lordship in Lord Lyons' despatch of the 14th June last should be answered in the negative.

to Mr. Myers' application for Lord Lyons' intervention to obtain compensation for him for loss of merchandize lately burnt in the docks of La Villette, and that he was then to transmit to us, together with previous papers, a despatch (further) from Lord Lyons containing the additional information supplied by Mr. Myers.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken Lord Lyons' further despatch into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears from the letter of Mr. Henry Myers of the 16th June, that his goods were in deposit in a bonded warehouse at La Villette, of which the Northern Railway Company was either the owner or the lessee, and that the Company was, in fact, the depository, upon whom the obligation of safe custody in respect of such goods would, in law, devolve. We do not think that the circumstance of the warehouse being under the surveillance of the French Douane constituted the French Government the bailee of the goods, so as to make them responsible to Mr. Henry Myers for their loss, even assuming that, under the circumstances, any responsibility for their destruction by fire would devolve upon the depositary.

F. Boyd, stating that he (Mr. Boyd) desired to make a claim against the French Government for the amount, not then ascertained, of a loss which he stated he had sustained in sending provisions to Paris at the period of the raising of the siege, and which he had forwarded on the faith of a notification published in the London newspapers on behalf of the French Embassy containing directions for the guidance of the British trade in sending provisions for the revictualling of Paris.

That Mr. Boyd's letter explained the circumstances under which, after communication with the French Agent at Dieppe, and, as it was stated, at his invitation, he had dispatched certain provisions, which, however, that agent ultimately declined to accept, and from which occurrence had arisen the loss for which Mr. Boyd desired to make his claim, and which he was desirous of having sent in through the Foreign Office.

And that he was to request us to take the case into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be retured to Mr. Boyd's application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the case into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Boyd should be informed that the proper course for him to adopt is to bring his claim to the attention of the French Government in the usual manner of merchants if he considers that he can establish a breach of contract on the part of an authorized agent of the French Government at Dieppe, from which damages have accrued. The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received July 20.)

Temple, July 19, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, inclosing a copy of a letter from a Mr. Stuart Mackenzie, who applies for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government to obtain compensation for the losses he sustained in consequence of having to lodge French troops during the war, and having had a store belonging to him plundered by them. Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and inform your Lordship whether there are, in my opinion, any special circumstances in Mr. Stuart Mackenzie's case which would justify interference in his behalf on the part of Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it would appear from Mr. Stuart Mackenzie's statement that he claims compensation from the French Government on two grounds: first, that he was compelled to find lodging for numerous troops; second, that his house at Asnières-le-Bourges was plundered by ill-disciplined soldiers. Upon the first ground I am of opinion that he has no title to compensation. The billeting of French troops under the circumstances upon the inhabitants of Asnières-le-Bourges was an inevitable incident of the war, to which French subjects seem to have been exposed equally with foreign residents. On the second ground, however, I am of opinion that Mr. Stuart Mackenzie has primâ facie a just claim on the French Government for compensation, inasmuch as the plundering of his house was not an inevitable incident of the war, but apparently the result of the lax discipline of the troops. Before, however, Lord Lyons is instructed by your Lordship to make any representation to the French Government in behalf of Mr. Stuart Mackenzie, I think it would be advisable that he should be required to furnish Lord Lyons with a more accurate statement, and to distinguish between the losses which he estimates himself to have incurred from the lodging of the soldiers, and the losses of which he is able to give evidence that they were the result of wanton plunder.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 20th ultimo, advising your Lordship that British subjects established in France could not claim any privileges in respect to compensation for the destruction of their immovable property during the late civil war, beyond those accorded by the French Government to loyal citizens, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Lord Lyons asking for instructions as to the answer he should give to applications from British subjects in regard to the destruction or plunder during the recent military operations of movable property belonging to them in houses hired by them. A letter respecting the case of Miss Galloway, who is stated to have been completely ruined by the destruction of her property, was also inclosed, and Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be sent to his Excellency, especially with regard to this case, and generally as to applications of a similar nature which may be made to him.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that Miss Galloway has no privilege over French subjects, and that she must ascertain and adopt the course which they pursue in claims like her own, and that Lord Lyons may properly inform her that he cannot undertake to bring any claim on her behalf to the notice of the French Government until he has been able to ascertain what course the French Government intends to adopt with regard to the claims of loyal French subjects, whose property has been destroyed under similar circumstances. We suggest that an answer to the like effect may be properly given by Lord Lyons to applications of a similar nature, subject, of course, to special cases being treated specially.

Geipel for compensation for a cargo of coals and coke belonging to them on board the "Anna Wilhelmina," which was captured by a French cruizer, and condemned by the French Prize Court. That it appears that the vessel was wrecked, and the coke sold for the sum of 270 fr. That Messrs. Geipel state that they addressed three letters to the French Prize Court, which were returned to them from the Dead Letter Office, and they then, on the 15th June, requested that their letter might be sent to the Prize Court through the Embassy, which was done; but it arrived after the decision of the Prize Court had been given, and M. Favre, in his note of the 24th ultimo (inclosed in Lord Lyons' No. 927), stated that the only legal course for them to pursue was to appeal to the Council of State. That Messrs. Geipel have applied to Lord Lyons to interfere on their behalf, and Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that I would take the papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be given to his Excellency on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the view expressed by his Excellency Lord Lyons in his despatch of 6th August, 1871, as to the proper course for Messrs. Giepel & Co. to pursue is, in my opinion, correct, and that Messrs. Geipel & Co. should be informed that it is for their interest to lose no time in making application according to the prescribed forms of French prize proceedings to the Conseil d'Etat, as pointed out by M. Jules Favre, and that they will have to establish to the satisfaction of that Court that they are the subjects of a neutral Power, and that the cargo laden on board the "Anna Welhelmina" was exclusively neutral property.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Calais, asking instructions with regard to an application made to him under the circumstances therein set forth for the celebration of a marriage, and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to this despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may properly direct Her Majesty's Consul at Calais to be informed that where a marriage has been solemnized in France between a British subject and a French subject, with a due observance of the forms prescribed by the lex loci, so that the marriage would be valid for all French purposes, the marriage will be valid for all English purposes, unless the British subject should, by English law, be disqualified from marrying with the French subject, in which case no valid marriage for English purposes could be contracted by the parties before the British Consul.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, forwarding copies of correspondence with Mr. Candwell, a British subject resident at Boulogne, who brings certain charges against the judicial authorities there in reference to a lawsuit in which he is concerned. Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that I would take the papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Lord Lyons upon the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Lord Lyons may be properly instructed to inform Mr. Candwell that, in your Lordship's opinion, there has been no such denial of justice to him on the part of the Tribunal at Boulogne as would warrant Her Majesty's Government in interfering diplomatically in his behalf, and that Mr. Caudwell must have recourse to his Avocat for advice as to the best course for him to pursue in accordance with the practice of the Tribunal to procure a decision of the question at issue between himself and Mr. Cohen with the least possible delay.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of the Treaty of Commerce with France of the 23rd January, 1860, with the Additional Article, and two Conventions supplementary thereto; and he was to request that we would take those papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion whether, under those Treaty stipulations, the French Government had the right to raise suddenly and enormously the duty on British mineral oil.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That in our opinion the French Government cannot, without the notice stipulated for in the XXIst Article of the Treaty of 1860, raise the ad valorem duty on British mineral oils beyond the 25 per cent. specified in the XVIth Article. The XVIth Article must, we think, be construed as having a general application. Ad valorem duties, in the language of the Treaty down to the XIIIth Article, mean those duties which were limited by the Ist Article to 30 per cent., and for which, by the XIIIth Article, a Tariff of specified duties was to be substituted. The XVIth Article appears to have been intended to apply to articles of commerce other than those dealt with in the Ist and XIIIth Articles of the Treaty. The duties on such articles of commerce would, or might, remain ad valorem; but it was stipulated that such duties, so far as they were ad valorem, should not be higher than 25 per cent. from October 1864.

If this be so, as it is in our opinion, then putting an end to the operation of this clause is putting an end to the operation of the Treaty, and would require the notice stipulated in the Treaty itself.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter from Messrs. Lawless, Nelson, and Jones, respecting a claim preferred by the owners of the British vessel "Dream," on account of damage sustained through a collision with the French steamer "Isère," and to request that I would take this document into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether the matter is one in which Her Majesty's Government can properly interfere.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Lawless, Nelson, and Jones may be properly informed that, so long as the French Courts are open to their clients, as appears to be the case, to sue the commander of the French transport "Isère" for the damage caused by that vessel when in collision with the "Dream," your Lordship would not be justified in intervening diplomatically in the case.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter from Mr. Henry Fairman, complaining of his arrest and imprisonment in Paris, together with two despatches to Lord Lyons, to whom the matter was referred, and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be sent to Lord Lyons on the subject.

I am also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, transmitting a further letter from Mr. Fairman on this subject, in which he brings forward a claim for pecuniary compensation against the French Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. Fairman is not free from blame, in my opinion, and although his imprisonment may have been unreasonably prolonged, considering the trivial nature of his offence, I am not prepared to advise your Lordship that he is entitled to claim any compensation on that account from the French Government, having regard to the exceptional circumstances under which the peace of Paris is at present maintained by that Government.

Temple, September 20, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Lord Lyons, inclosing correspondence respecting the case of Mr. John Hamon, a British subject resident at St. Malo, who claimed compensation on account of his imprisonment on a charge on which he was subsequently acquitted; and he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course that should be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears from the correspondence before us that Mr. John Hamon, who was in the employment of the London and South-Eastern Railway Company at St. Malo, was arrested by the French authorities in that town in November 1869, and tried before the Court of Assize at Rennes in August 1870, on a charge of being an accomplice, with his son, in a robbery or fraud against the Railway Company; that he was acquitted of the charge, but his son, who had absconded, was found guilty and sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment with hard labour. Mr. John Hamon complains of the proceedings of the French authorities against him, and in his letter of the 12th August to his Excellency Lord Lyons, suggests that "the matter was concocted against him in order to annoy British subjects," and that he was entitled to compensation, either from Her Majesty's Government or from the French Government. We need hardly inform your Lordship that Mr. John Hamon has no title whatever, in our opinion, to be compensated by Her Majesty's Government for his imprisonment by the French authorities, and with regard to any claim on his part for compensation from the French Government, we see no just grounds for your Lordship's intervention on his behalf. The charge appears to have been established against the son, as principal, and there may have been grounds of suspicion against the father, as an accomplice, which warranted his arrest; and with regard to the length of his imprisonment before that, no facts are stated by Mr. John Hamon which would lead us to believe that his imprisonment was prolonged unjustifiably and beyond what was required by the circumstances of the case, or that the proceedings were in any way contrary to what would have been the normal course if the accused parties had been French subjects.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 25th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the correspondence relative to a complaint preferred by Messrs. Smith, Fleming, and Co., respecting the enforcement of duty on a cargo of coffee at Havre in alleged contravention of existing Commercial Treaties; and he was to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and furnish your Lordship at my earliest convenience with my opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Ambassador in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it would seem, as far as I can gather from the concluding letter of the correspondence (No. 93), that Messrs. Smith, Fleming, and Co., were in error in stating that the circumstances of the "Anazi" calling at Falmouth affects this question, which appears to resolve itself into the simple fact that the coffee was not consigned to merchants domiciled in France, and on that account is held by the Director-General of Customs at Havre not to be within the exception made in favour of cargoes shipped for France before the change of duty. Upon this view of the case two points suggest themselves for consideration; (1) had the French Government a right to raise the duty on coffee during the period occupied by the voyage, and if so, (2) had they the right as regards cargoes shipped before the alteration of duty, to make a distinction in favour of cargoes shipped to France on French accounts, admitting them at the old rate, whilst cargoes not so shipped and imported into France were to be charged with the new duty? With regard to the Treaty of Commerce of 1860, I do not find coffee mentioned in it, and I should hesitate to say that Article XIX of that Treaty coupled with the French Decree extending the condition of the Portugese Treaty to Great Britain, would entitle Her Majesty's Government to claim the same privileges with regard to goods not specified in the Anglo-French Treaty as may have been granted to any third Power (No. 75). Before, however, I can safely advise your Lordship as to the instructions which should be given to Lord Lyons upon the objections raised against the decision of the French authorities, in Mr. Consul Bernal's letter of 15th September, 1877, I should wish to be favoured with the text of the law of 9th July last, under which the new duties have been imposed, as well as of the Portuguese Treaty and the Imperial Decree of 28th July, 1867.

Temple, September 28, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th instant, stating that in compliance with the request contained in my Report of yesterday's date respecting the enforcement of duty on a cargo of coffee at Havre in alleged contravention of existing Commercial Treaties, he was directed to transmit to me a copy of the French law of the 8th July last, under which the new duties are levied, together with a printed volume, at pp. 281 and 457, of which would be found copies of the Treaty between France and Portugal of 1867, and of the Imperial Decree of the 28th July, of the same year, and he was to request that these documents might be returned with my Report upon this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That coffee appears to be an article not mentioned in the Portuguese Treaty. The Decree, therefore, of the 28th July, 1867, under which the dispositions of the latter Treaty are extended to Great Britain would not apply to that article of commerce; nor do I find any provision in that Treaty which restrains the right of the French Government to augment the import duty on coffee, as it has done by the Decree of the 8th July, 1871. I have in my previous Report to your Lordship intimated my opinion, that as the article of coffee is not mentioned in the Treaty of Commerce of 1860, the French Government is at full liberty as regards its Treaty engagements with Great Britain to augment the duties on coffee imported into France, on the scale laid down by the Decree above mentioned. I do not discover anywhere in that Decree the exception which Messrs. Smith, Fleming, and Co., in their letter (No. 60) have stated to be made in favour of all cargoes shipped for France before the change, and the advantage of which exception they say has been unfairly denied to the owners and underwriters in the coffee per "Anazi." I am, therefore, unable to advise your Lordship that Messrs. Smith, Fleming, and Co., have been deprived of any advantage to which they are entitled under that Decree, and I beg to suggest that before any definite instructions are given to his Excellency Lord Lyons, it would be desirable that more precise information should be obtained as to the nature of the authority under which the distinction complained of has been made in favour of cargoes consigned to merchants domiciled in France to the disadvantage of merchants not so domiciled.

Temple, October 7, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 28th ultimo, respecting the enforcement of duty on a cargo of coffee at Havre in alleged contravention of existing Commercial Treaties, he was directed to call my attention to a law of the French National Assembly of the 12th July last, to which your Lordship has reason to believe that my attention had not previously been directed, which exempts from the operation of the Law of the 8th July articles imported by ships which sailed for France from the countries of which the articles are the produce, before the presentation to the Assembly of the Bill for raising new taxes could be known in those parts. The former papers, together with a further despatch from Mr. West relating to this case, were also inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would report to your Lordship whether the papers now inclosed induce me to alter the opinion already expressed by me in this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the coffee shipped on board the "Anazi" is in my opinion clearly not within the letter of the exception made by the Decree of the French Assembly of the 12th July, 1871, which I have now before me, nor does it come within the equitable construction put upon that Decree in favour of cargoes consigned to merchants domiciled in France (whether French or foreign), notwithstanding the vessels may have touched at a Portuguese or a British port of call. No question arises in this case in my opinion as regards the Portuguese Treaty, or the Treaty of Commerce between France and Great Britain. The substantial question is, whether the French authorities are interpreting the Decree of the 12th July unfairly in requiring evidence of the French destination of the cargo to be forthcoming upon the face of the ship-papers in each case. I cannot advise your Lordship that the course, which they are pursuing, is an unfair interpretation of that Decree, or is so harsh in principle, seeing that an opposite course might expose the revenue to great frauds, that your Lordship would be entitled to remonstrate against it. I assume from the last despatch of the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, that the limits of officious representation have been already reached.

1. That, with reference to our Report of the 5th July, on Mr. Boyd's claim against the French Government, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from that gentleman, stating that he had received no answer to the application which he addressed to the French Government, and requesting that Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris might be instructed to present his claim to them, in order that it might be duly taken into consideration, and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Boyd.

2. That the former papers were annexed for convenience of reference.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me two despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Paris, inclosing copies of a correspondence with Her Majesty's Consul at Charente, respecting two persons named Bocchini and Smart, who are now prisoners on a charge of being implicated in the late revolutionary proceedings in Paris, and who claim British protection on the grounds of being British subjects.

That your Lordship has requested Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Home Department to cause inquiry to be made respecting the truth of Bocchini's statements, Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the case of Smart into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether, though born in Paris, being of English parents, he would have a claim to the protection of Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that Mr. Eugène George Smart, having been born in Paris of parents who, although they may be British subjects, have clearly acquired a French domicile, has no claim to be protected by Her Majesty's Government against the operation of the law of France applicable to any criminal offence against the State of which he may be charged; but I think that your Lordship may properly sanction the intervention of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires on his behalf, so far as to secure for him a fair trial, and if that be impossible in the present condition of feeling, to obtain for him some remission of his punishment under the circumstances of his case, as detailed in the letter of Her Majesty's Consul at Charente of the 21st September, 1871. In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the letter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we have not before us the text of the concession intended to be made by France in favour of the produce of Alsace and Lorraine; we should not wish to commit ourselves to a definitive opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would not be justified, under the letter of the XIXth Article of the Treaty of 1860, in claiming similar privileges in favour of the produce of Her Majesty's dominions, but as at present informed, we are of opinion that such a claim might properly be contested by France as not within the spirit of the Treaty.

That the claims in question are included under three heads:—

1. Balance of accounts due.
2. Balance due for loss by exchange on negotiating the Treasury Bills; and—
3. Damages for non-acceptance of articles contracted for; and amount, irrespective of any damages the claimants may have to pay under a pending action against them, to the sum of 578,329 fr. 80 c. That the grounds of Messrs. de Mattos and Greene's application for assistance are: alleged inability to bring an action in the Courts of this country in this case, and to attach the defendant's property in case of a favourable verdict, and certain alleged impediments in the way of their proceeding against the French Government in the French Law Courts with any prospect of success. Temple, November 17, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter, with its inclosure, from Messrs. Rossel, Fehr, and Fromm, respecting their claim against the French Government for compensation on account of losses sustained by them through the increased duty charged on their mineral oils by the custom-house authorities at Dunkirk in alleged violation of the Treaty stipulations between this country and France; that the previous correspondence on this subject would be found in the accompanying volume. Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration with reference to the Report of the Law Officers, dated 15th September last, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Messrs. Rossel, Fehr, and Fromm's application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am unable to discover in either of the Tariffs annexed to the Conventions supplementary to the Treaty of Commerce of the 23rd June, 1860 (xii Hertslet, p. 183), any mention of English coal oil to support the statement in the letter of Messrs. Rossel, Fehr, and Fromm of the 20th July, 1871, that the article has passed through the French custom-house for many years on payment of the ad valorem duty of 5 per cent. in accordance with our Commercial Treaty. But I gather from the letter of Messrs. Fraser and Co. of the 30th September, 1871, that, in the French Customs Tariff heretofore in use, "essence de houille" is mentioned, under the heading of the Anglo-French Treaty, as paying a duty of 5 per cent. ad valorem; and the letter suggests that, as in the English printed copy of the Treaty, "chemicals not enumerated" are put down at 5 per cent., it would seem as if "essence de houille" was taken as included under that heading. It is possible that such may have been the view taken by the French custom-house authorities, but it is only matter of conjecture on the part of Messrs. Fraser and Co., and I am not prepared to advise your Lordship that Her Majesty's Government can of right insist on such a construction of the Tariff. I am, however, of opinion that Her Majesty's Government may with justice claim the observance on the part of the Director of French Customs of the stipulation in Article XVI of the Treaty of 1860, that no higher ad valorem duty than 25 per cent. shall be levied on any British product. This, as Messrs. Fraser and Co. have also pointed out, would allow a duty of 11 fr. 25 c. to be levied as a maximum duty on British coal oil, whereas an ad valorem duty of 37 fr. is, under the new regulations, now levied upon such oil. The Law Officers have already reported to your Lordship that, in their opinion, the raising of the duty on British mineral oil so enormously by the French custom-house authorities is, in fact, putting an end to the operation of the Treaty, and I see no reason for modifying that opinion, in which I concurred. With regard, however, to the answer which should be given to Messrs. Rossel, Fehr, and Fromm's application, much will depend upon the policy which Her Majesty's Government may resolve to adopt upon the general question. I should advise meanwhile that Messrs. Rossel, Fehr, and Fromm be informed that negotiations are pending at present between Her Majesty's Government and the French Government on the subject of the increased duties levied on mineral oils of British origin, and that your Lordship will bear in mind the statement submitted by them to your Lordship, and when the proper opportunity arrives will bring to the attention of the French Government the severe losses to which Messrs. Rossel, Fehr, and Fromm have been exposed, in common with other British merchants, by the sudden and excessive increase of duty upon these oils.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a correspondence relative to a complaint made by Messrs. Wade and Co., of Hull, respecting freight levied by the French Government on the cargoes of two German ships named the "Johanna" and "Stadt Frankfort" captured by French cruizers during the late war, and he was to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether Messrs. Wade's objection to the payment of the freight charge is well founded.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the objection of Messrs. Wade and Co. to the payment of freight is not well founded. It may be true that the practice of British Prize Courts is rather more favourable to the neutral owner of cargo captured in enemy's vessels, but France has only waived her right to make prize of such cargoes since the Declaration of Paris, and she is not bound under that Declaration to adopt the practice of British Prize Courts as regards the proportion of freight to be paid by the neutral owner of cargo under such circumstances.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th November ultimo, stating—

1. That with reference to our Report of the 21st June last, respecting the request of Messrs. Glehn and Co. that Her Majesty's Government should interfere to obtain for them compensation from the French Government for the destruction of their property at Paris during the operations against the Commune. Mr. Hammond was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. Glehn renewing their application for the support of Her Majesty's Government for their claim, and he was to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to that letter.

2. That the former papers were annexed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Messrs. von Glehn and Sons should be informed that your Lordship, assuming their information to be correct that the City of Paris is by the law of France liable to make good such losses as have been incurred by Messrs. von Glehn and Sons, is of opinion that they must have recourse to the ordinary Tribunals of France to enforce the liability of the City of Paris before they can properly request your Lordship to interfere diplomatically on their behalf with the French Government.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a letter from Mr. Kennelly, requesting, on behalf of Young's Paraffin Light and Mineral Oil Company, the assistance of Her Majesty's Government in support of the Petition addressed by him to the French Government, with reference to the losses entailed upon the Company in question and the impending legal proceedings consequent upon the increased duty levied upon mineral oils imported into France since the passing of the law of the 8th July last; and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship, at my earliest convenience, with my opinion as to whether the representation contained in Mr. Kennelly's Petition can properly receive the support of Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government may properly decline to give any official support to the Petition which the Agent of Young's Paraffin Light and Mineral Oil Company has addressed to the French Minister of Finance, and that Mr. Kennelly should be informed that in case of the French courts decreeing the performance of the contracts of the Company, under the altered system of import duties, he will be at liberty to make a further representation on that subject to your Lordship.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 13th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 11th instant, he was directed to transmit to me a further letter from the Agent of the Coatbridge Oil Company, stating that they have been sentenced by the Court of Douai to pay 2,700*l.* damages on a contract of 1,500 barrels, and are subject to further actions, entailing damages of not less than 7,000*l.*, besides law expenses.

Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would take this letter into consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion, at my earliest convenience, as to whether the decision come to by the French Court of Douai affords any grounds for remonstrance or other action on the part of Her Majesty's Government, and whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in making the application to the French Government asked for by Mr. Wilson, that the Company should be permitted to import under the old duty the barrels of oil which are stated to have been sold previous to the enforcement of the new Tariff.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That there are considerations of equity arising out of the recent decision of the Court of Douai, which will justify your Lordship, in my opinion, in using your good offices with the French Government in favour of the Coatbridge Oil Company, with a view to procure for that Company permission to fulfil its contracts, which the Court of Douai has pronounced to be binding upon it, under the same conditions as those under which they were entered into, the altered conditions of the import duties, to which they will otherwise be subject, being ruinous to the Company.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Lord Lyons, inclosing a copy of an application which had been addressed to him by a British subject, named Etherington, for assistance in obtaining from the French Government compensation for the losses and sufferings he had sustained in consequence of his arrest and imprisonment on the charge of having taken part in the insurrection of Paris; and that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request that we would take the matter into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Lord Lyons, for his guidance in that and similar cases.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Lord Lyons may be properly instructed to inform Mr. Etherington and other British subjects who may have been exposed to losses and sufferings arising out of the insurrection of the Commune against the Provisional Government of France, that Her Majesty's Government cannot claim for them to be treated in a more favourable manner than loyal French citizens, and that until the French Government finds itself to be in a condition to afford relief in the cases of loyal French citizens, Her Majesty's Government does not consider that it can press the claims of British subjects on its attention with any prospect of a successful issue.

We think it right, however, to point out that this may be the case of a foreigner, an innocent person, arrested bonâ fide, and imprisoned in the ordinary way, on an accusation of crime, he cannot complain that he is not better treated than the natives in a like case. It makes no difference that the arrest was under martial law, which had been proclaimed on account of an insurrection.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter and its inclosure from the Admiralty, relative to the coaling of two belligerent vessels—one the French vessel-of-war "Guyenne," and the other the North German vessel-of-war "Augusta." That it would appear that the operation of coaling the former vessel off Queenstown had been suspended, in consequence of orders issued by the Senior Naval Officer on the coast of Ireland, but that the French Consular Agent had, by desire of the French Captain, remonstrated on the subject, upon the ground that the "Augusta" had lately been allowed to take on board a quantity of coal in Bantry Bay.

A further letter from the Admiralty, inclosing a copy of one from the Inspecting Lieutenant of Coast Guard at Berehaven, explaining the circumstances under which the "Augusta" did receive 220 tons of coal at that port in the month of December last, was also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with any observations I may have to offer thereupon.

I obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the circumstances under which the North German vessel-of-war "Augusta" was allowed to take in a supply of coal in Bantry Bay, although they may be possibly not within the strict letter of your Lordship's Circular of 19th July last,—a question which would depend very much upon the relative distances of Madeira and the nearest Prussian port from Bantry Bay,—are, in my opinion, within the spirit of it, on the assumption of the good faith of the Captain of the "Augusta," in stating that she was short of coals to carry her to her immediate destination, Madeira.

With regard to the coaling of the French vessel-of-war "Guyenne," off Queenstown, it does not appear that she was in need of coal to take her to any French port, or other immediate destination. I am of opinion, therefore, that the stoppage of the coaling of that vessel by order of the Rear-Admiral of the station was proper and in conformity with your Lordship's Circular, and that there is no conflict of principle between the two cases.

That we cannot advise Her Majesty's Government to accede at once, and without further inquiry, to the demands of Mr. Bates. The question of whether any and what compensation is due to him depends upon whether the "Sharpshooter" was in fact detained to his injury by Her Majesty's Government: if it were so, we think he should be compensated, but if, as we gather, no hindrance was offered to her loading, and she went to sea in fact as soon as she would have done if no order to detain her had been given by the Government, no compensation would we think be due to her owner. On this subject a detailed and exact Report should be asked for, and upon the receipt of such Report Her Majesty's Government will be able to judge how far, if at all, Mr. Bates' demands should be yielded to.

2. That Lord Belmore stated in his despatch that there were two French steam dispatch-vessels on the station, and that the "Belliqueuse," a large iron-clad ship, had also lately arrived. That his Excellency wished to know whether if the last-named ship came for the mail she was to be treated as a mail-steamer, and also whether the limit as to time of stay was to hold good against the mail-vessels. That his Excellency added that owing to the presence of those armed French ships there were five German vessels in the port afraid to venture to sea.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the grounds upon which we reported to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies on the 6th October last in favour of the French postal packets being exempted in the ports of New South Wales from the restrictions imposed by Article 3 of your Lordship's Circular letter appear to us to justify their exemption from the restrictions imposed by Article 2 of that Circular.

So long as the postal packets are not diverted from their especial duty of conveying the mails we are of opinion that they are fairly entitled to the same hospitality in British ports as in a time of general peace, and we see no reason why they should be subject to any other requirement to leave our ports than those of the service of the mails.

With regard to the "Belliqueuse," which his Excellency describes as "a large iron-clad ship-of-war," if she should come for the mails, we are of opinion that she should not be exempted from the restrictions imposed by your Lordship's Circular letter upon the hospitality to be shown to belligerent ships-of-war, unless her Commander should be able to satisfy his Excellency that his instructions forbid her to be diverted from the especial duty of conveying the mails whilst she is on the station. Hillyer and Fenwick. The papers bearing on the subject were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Hillyer and Fenwick may be informed that, if due notice is given at the Foreign Office of the day and hour at which the suit in question will be heard in the Admiralty Court, your Lordship will authorize a gentleman from the Foreign Office to attend the Court and to exhibit the original copy of "the declaration made to the Senate and to the Corps Législatif in the sitting of the 20th July, 1870," which was communicated to your Lordship by the Marquis de Lavalette on the 22nd July last, and to leave a copy of it for the use of the Court.

With regard to the notice of "the days of grace," the extract from the official "Journal" of the 21st July is not exactly in the form in which it should be offered as evidence to a Court of Law. There can, however, be no objection to the same gentleman producing it in Court, and stating that it was communicated in its present form to your Lordship by Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris in a despatch which was received on the 22nd July last, and that it was stated by him to be an extract from the "Journal Officiel" of the 21st July last.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received March 1.)

Temple, February 28, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our report of the 18th ultimo, stating that a further report on the case of the "Sharpshooter" would be necessary to enable us to form an opinion as to Mr. Bates' claim for compensation on account of the detention of that vessel, he was directed to inclose a letter from the Treasury forwarding a Report from the Customs authorities on the subject, and he was to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the course that should be pursued with regard to the claim.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the statement in Mr. Bates' letter of the 10th November, 1870, that he could not allow the consignees to put cargo on board while the ship was under detention by the Government, conflicts in some degree with that in the Report of Messrs. Lilley and Gardner of the 19th December, that not only had Mr. Bates free access to the vessel, but "that cargo was put on board" during the time of her detention. But the expression that "cargo was put on board" is an ambiguous one, and may mean either that some small or even insignificant part of the cargo was put on board, or that the loading of the ship proceeded in the usual manner, which latter meaning would be wholly inconsistent with Mr. Bates' allegation, and would negative any claim on his part to damages.

This being so, we requested, in our letter of the 18th January, that Messrs. Lilley and Gardner should be desired to give a more detailed report of what occurred. We had in view further information as to the extent to which the vessel was loaded, whether the loading was continuous or occasional, and facts of that character, which we supposed easily ascertainable, and which appeared to us necessary to determine the question put to us. We are somewhat surprised to find that Messrs. Lilley and Gardner, instead of affording further information, or even, as it would appear, making further inquiries, content themselves with reporting that the opinions which they expressed remain the same. We have to observe that their opinions were not required, but facts, upon which ours might be founded. In the absence of further information, we do not feel able to do more than to advise generally, that if Mr. Bates' statement, that in point of fact he abstained from loading the vessel for a week in consequence of her detention, cannot be contradicted more directly by the Customs authorities, we think that, on the whole, it will be prudent to accede to his claim.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Board of Trade forwarding a Memorial from certain Scotch merchants relative to an alleged loss sustained by them in consequence of an erroneous official note which appeared in the "Edinburgh Gazette" of the 16th August last,* with regard to the blockade of Hamburg; and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to the Memorialists.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the merchants in question should be informed that there was no error on the part of Her Majesty's Government in the official notice which appeared in the "Edinburgh Gazette" of August 16, 1870, with reference to the communication which Her Majesty's Secretary of State had received from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin, and that Her Majesty's Government cannot be responsible for any inconvenience or loss which the merchants may have incurred from any error in the communication made to the Governor of Heligoland by the French Admiral as to the date of the commencement of the intended blockade.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received April 3.)

Temple, March 31, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 13th October, he was directed to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether, under the provisions of the Act 6 George IV, cap 87, and of the Naturalization Act of last Session, the contributions to British Consular Church Establishments abroad made by ladies of British birth who have married foreigners, can during the lifetime of their husbands or subsequently when they may have become widows, be looked upon as contributions to be classed amongst those to which Her Majesty's Government is empowered by the first-named Act to grant equivalents.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the question raised by your Lordship is not free from difficulty, as it may be open to argument; that the first paragraph of the 10th section of the Naturalization Act, 1870, was intended to confer a privilege, not to impose a disability upon married women, but looking to the definition of the term "disability," as explained in the 17th section of the Act, I am of opinion that the first paragraph of the 10th section was intended to preclude a woman, who may have been a natural-born subject of the Queen at the time of her marriage with the subject of a foreign State, from the further enjoyment of any privilege which may attach under British law to British subjects, so long as her husband continues to be a foreign subject, and that accordingly a lady of British birth, who may have married a foreigner, cannot during the lifetime of such foreigner be deemed to be a British subject for any of the purposes of the Consular Act (6 Geo. IV, cap. 87).

With regard, however, to any such lady, if she should subsequently become a widow, she will continue under such disability until she shall have availed herself of her statutory capacity to be readmitted to the status of a British subject, but even upon such readmission her status will be so far qualified, that she will not be entitled to be deemed a British subject within the limits of the State, of which her husband was a subject, unless the laws of that State allow her to renounce her allegiance to it, or she is entitled to renounce her allegiance to it in pursuance of a Treaty to that effect.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 10th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 31st ultimo, he was directed to request that I would also furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to how, under the Naturalization Act of 1870, a woman, by birth the subject of a foreign State, who marries a British subject and subsequently becomes a widow, is, during her widowhood, entitled to be considered (a) during her residence in the country of her birth, and (b) in any other foreign country, a British subject for any of the purposes of the Consular Act 6 Geo. IV, cap. 87.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that the national status of a British subject, which an alien-born woman acquires for British purposes upon her marriage with a British subject under the first paragraph of clause 10 of the Naturalization Act, 1870, is not affected upon her widowhood by any of the provisions of that Act, so as to deprive her of any privileges to which she may have become entitled upon her marriage under the Consular Act 6 Geo. IV, cap. 87, and that those privileges hold good whether she is resident in the country of her birth or in any other foreign country.

Secretary of State, conveys due authority to such Acting Consul to solemnize marriages under the provisions of the Act 12 & 13 Vict., cap. 68, a copy of which was also inclosed, in cases where the Consul who is on leave of absence is duly provided with a marriage warrant under that Act. A form of warrant now in use was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I incline to the opinion that the form of the despatch, being the usual form under which a person is authorized to act in the absence of any of Her Majesty's Consul's from his post, would satisfy the statute, but it would be less open to question if, instead of the words "approves of your placing," the words "authorizes you to place" were substituted in the despatch.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter from the India Office asking for information on certain points connected with the Neutrality Proclamation issued at the outbreak of the recent war between France and Germany, and your Lordship's Circular to Departments of 19th July, 1870, and he was to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer that should be returned to the India Office.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship, in answer to the letter from the India Office, may, in my opinion, properly reply, that you concur in the view expressed by the Government of India, in regard to troop-ships, that they ought to be considered as vessels-of-war within the meaning of Her Majesty's Proclamation of Neutrality; and that with regard to belligerent vessels-of-war calling at Aden on their way out to join a squadron, or returning to Europe from a distant station, they ought not to be exempted from the strict operation of the third of your Lordship's rules, which forbids the supply, without special permission, of coal to any belligerent ships-of-war until three months from the time when coal was last furnished to her in British waters.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received June 12.)

Temple, June 12, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence, marked in margin,* from which we would perceive that legal proceedings had been instituted by Mr. J. Pyne Yeatman, of No. 3, Pump-court, Temple, against Mr. Bonar, Her Majesty's Minister at Berne, in connection with a divorce suit, in which Mr. Yeatman was a party, in the year 1863, and that the motion for an attachment against Mr. Bonar was to come on for hearing on the 13th instant.

That Mr. Bonar's reply to Mr. Yeatman's allegations against him (Mr. Bonar) would be found in his despatch No. 52 of the 1st ultimo; and in his further despatch No. 68 of the 4th instant, he (Mr. Bonar) requested instructions as to his answering any summons which might oblige personal attendance at the Court on the suit; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us accordingly to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the instructions with which Mr. Bonar should be furnished on that subject.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose, for our information, a correspondence with Her Majesty's Mission at Munich respecting the case of "Yeatman v. Yeatman," including some Reports of the Law Officers respecting the suit out of which present proceedings have originated.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the whole of the papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the Court of Divorce has no legal power to issue an attachment against Mr. Bonar, as he is out of its jurisdiction, nor would that Court be likely to permit an attachment to issue without previous notice to Mr. Bonar, nor are there any facts in this case, as far as we are informed, which can justify Mr. Yeatman's application for an attachment against Mr. Bonar.

We think it probable that the Court, being acquainted with the previous history of Mr. Yeatman's case, will deal with his application in a manner which will save Mr. Bonar from any necessity of absenting himself from his post. With regard to any instructions to be given to Mr. Bonar as to the answer to be given by him to any summons from the Divorce Court, your Lordship may, we think, properly direct Mr. Bonar to make a further application to your Lordship, if he should receive any such summons, and meanwhile not to proceed to England without your Lordship's special permission.

That Lord Kimberley was desirous, as we would perceive, of obtaining an opinion as to the propriety of adopting sections 7 and 8 of that Draft Ordinance, which specially applied to foreigners; and as the Governor was anxious for instructions on that subject as speedily as possible, he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take the matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we see no objection to any part of the Ordinance. The wording of section 3 would be improved by substituting for "failure to pay" "the default of any person so convicted to pay;" but we do not think the amendment important.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Saigon, relative to the sale of the "Sophie" and "Robert Rickmers" at that port, and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon. A Parliamentary paper containing the previous correspondence respecting these vessels was also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the question of the propriety of the sale of the prizes in this case, whilst lying in the French port of Saigon, is a matter for the decision of the French Prize Court, and the claimant will be at liberty, if he should succeed in establishing his title, to have the vessels restored to him as neutral property, to claim damages in the French Prize Court, if they have been improperly sold and his interest has been prejudiced thereby. With regard to the suggestion of the masters of the two vessels, that, as peace has been concluded between France and Prussia, the vessels would, as a matter of course, be given up to them, they have misapprehended the effect of the termination of hostilities. No captures made after such termination of hostilities would be valid captures, but the re-establishment of peace will not divest the French captors of their interest in any prize captured during hostilities; and they will have a right to continue the proceedings, which I presume to have been commenced, before a competent Prize Court, for the adjudication of the vessels as lawful prize to them, unless there should be some provision to the contrary, of which I am not aware, in the Treaty of Peace concluded between France and Germany.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 25th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Treasury,* requesting to be informed whether, under the terms of the Convention of 1860 respecting the Greek Loan, it is not open to Her Majesty's Government to require that so much of the annual payment as is due by Greece should be remitted in bills for sums expressed in sterling instead of in francs.

A memorandum drawn up in the Foreign Office on the subject,† together with a printed copy of the papers relating to the arrangement referred to, was also inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which Her Majesty's Government would, under the circumstances, be justified in taking in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it is not open, in my opinion, to Her Majesty's Government to require the bills annually remitted by the Hellenic Government under the terms of the Convention of 1860 to be made out for sums expressed in sterling instead of francs. The loan itself appears to have been originally made in francs, and has been recognized as so made by more than one Act of Parliament; whilst the arrangements of 1860, under which the payment in question is now made, stipulate for a minimum sum to be annually paid on account of the loan in the same currency.

A letter which has been received from the War Office, to which Department Mr. Erskine's despatch has been referred, was also inclosed, and Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course which Mr. Erskine should now be instructed to pursue in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. Snelling having renounced his allegiance to the Queen, as far as in him lies, by deserting from Her Majesty's forces abroad, has, in my opinion, forfeited all title to Her Majesty's protection, and your Lordship may properly instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Athens to decline to furnish him with a British passport.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears from the letter of the 28th April, 1871, addressed by M. Sarpieri to Baron Galvagna, that the Company which has entered into a contract with the Hellenic Government, the true purport of which contract is under dispute, is a different Company from that of Hilarion Roux and Co., in which Mr. John Naegeley has shares, and that whilst the Compagnie Sarpieri has a direct grievance against the Hellenic Government, founded on an alleged breach of a contract with itself, the firm of Hilarion Roux and Co. is only indirectly prejudiced by the alleged bad faith of the Hellenic Government in consequence of the inability resulting therefrom of the Compagnie Sarpieri to fulfil its engagements. Under these circumstances, if I have rightly understood the case, I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government cannot properly direct Her Majesty's Minister at Athens to intervene officially with the Hellenic Government on behalf of the interests which Mr. John Naegeley has in the firm of Hilarion Roux and Co.

That however impolitic and inequitable may be the course adopted by the Hellenic Government in declaring the surface refuse of the ancient workings of the mines to be the property of the State, and not to be included in the Concession granted to Messrs. Sarpieri and Co., I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government cannot officially remonstrate against the interpretation put upon that Concession by the Hellenic Government. There is, strictly speaking, no British interest involved in that Concession, although the interpretation put upon it by the Hellenic Government may disable Messrs. A Memorandum on this point furnished by Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Guatemala, who is now in London, and the former papers in this case were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that your Lordship cannot properly accede to Captain Harris' request that Mr. Corbett should be instructed to call upon the Guatemalan Government for the amount of the expenses incurred by him in the arbitration. It must, I consider, be assumed in this stage of the case that the settlement upon which the arbitrators have agreed is an equitable settlement, and as the amount awarded by the arbitrators falls very much short of the amount claimed by Captain Harris, it would not be equitable, in my opinion, for your Lordship to insist upon the Guatemalan Government defraying Captain Harris' costs as well as their own.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 3rd ultimo, upon the subject of the San Geronimo claim, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Captain Douglas Harris, requesting to be informed whether any instructions have been given to Her Majesty's Representative in Central America for the payment to the claimants of the sum awarded, namely, 7,000 dollars; that I should perceive from the inclosed draft to Mr. Peatfield that that gentleman has been directed to retain the money in question in his own possession until he should receive further instructions, and he has accordingly lodged it in a strong commercial house at Guatemala. The former papers in this case were also inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take them into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course that should be taken in view of the latter part of Captain Harris' letter of the 13th April, in which he requests to be informed of the nature of the evidence required of his right to receive the two-thirds of the indemnity due to the parties resident in this country, and further offers to enter into, in conjunction with Mr. John Owen, a bond of indemity to Her Majesty's Government in the event of a claim being established by other parties to the two portions of the sum awarded.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it would be proper in my opinion for Mr. Peatfield to deduct from the gross sum of 7,000 dollars, which has been paid over to him by the Guatemalan Government, those expenses of the Commission, which should be properly defrayed by the parties for whose benefit the 7,000 dollars has been received by him, and to pay over the balance in the proportion of two-thirds to Captain Harris upon the bond of indemnity being given to Her Majesty's Government as proposed by Captain Harris, and the remaining third part to the third party resident in Guatemala on proof being furnished that the said party is entitled to receive the same.

My Lord,
Temple, July 8, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 20th ultimo, on the subject of the distribution of the San Geronimo award, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Mr. Corbett, requesting instructions as to the expenses which should be deducted from that award before the balance is handed over to the claimants; and, with reference to my previous Reports on this point, he was to request that I would furnish your Lordship at my early convenience with my opinion as to the precise directions which should be given to Mr. Corbett. The former papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. Corbett may, in my opinion, be properly directed by your Lordship to deduct from the award before it is handed over to the claimants the expenses incurred for legal assistance and for witnesses examined, but not the percentage on the whole sum awarded, which the claimants by private arrangement engaged to pay to the arbitrator.

My Lord,
Temple, May 6, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that, on the receipt of my Report of the 30th September last, your Lordship instructed Her Majesty's Acting Consul-General at Port-au-Prince to furnish the further information required by me in the case of the claim of Messrs. Williams and Knowles of Nassau to compensation for the seizure, on two occasions, and the subsequent condemnation and sale of the schooner "Belinda W." Mr. Hammond was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch (No. 7, March 31), which has been received from Mr. Byron in reply, and he was to request that I would take the same into my consideration, together with the former papers which were also inclosed, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions that should be given to Mr. Byron in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. Byron may be properly instructed by your Lordship to inform the parties who have applied to him on behalf of the owners of the "Belinda W.," that Her Majesty's Government declines to support any claim on their behalf for compensation from the present Haytian Government on account of the seizure and condemnation of their vessel. The "Belinda W." at the time of her capture was clearly engaged in a trade which was forbidden to foreign vessels by the laws of Hayti, and it was in my opinion competent for the Court, before which the capture was discussed, to enforce against her the penalties prescribed by the laws of Hayti.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatches from Mr. Byron and Mr. St. John respecting a claim of a British merchant, Mr. Charles Smith, on the Government of Hayti, in regard to certain duties charged on goods belonging to him. Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that I would report my opinion to your Lordship as to the steps which it may be proper to take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that Mr. Charles Smith has not any claim of right to be reimbursed by the actual Government of Hayti for the custom duties paid by him at St. Marc, inasmuch as his merchandize was reimported from a foreign port, and there does not appear to have been any violation of Haytian law on the part of the revolutionary authorities at St. Marc in requiring under the circumstances the payment of custom duties de novo upon the reimportation of his merchandize. I think, however, that he has an equitable claim against the actual Government of Hayti on two grounds: first, that both French and German merchants appear to have been permitted by the authorities at St. Marc to reimport merchandize into that port under similar circumstances free of duty, and secondly, that it was for the benefit of that part of the island which was then in the possession of the revolutionary authorities, who are now the actual Government, that Mr. Charles Smith so reimported his merchandize at a time when the adverse Government under General Salnave prohibited the direct transport of his merchandize from Port-au-Prince to St. Marc by the usual course of trade, under which it would have been exempt by Haytian law from any further payment of import duties.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed to acknowledge the receipt of my Report of the 23rd ultimo, stating that I was unable to perceive any sufficient grounds to warrant the claim advanced by the governing body of the Dominican College of St. Thomas Aquinas, at Rome, for British protection, and he was to request that I would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether I held the same opinion in regard to the Convent of the Minerva, to which, as it appears from Mr. Jervoise's despatch, it is locally annexed, though enjoying a distinct foundation.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the Convent of the Minerva at Rome is, in my opinion, not in any sense entitled to British protection, unless evidence is forthcoming to show that British subjects have proprietary rights in the Convent; and even in that case, as the rights of ownership in immovable property are exclusively governed by the Lex Rei Sitæ, the protection which Her Majesty's Government would be entitled to extend to British owners of such property in Rome will be of a qualified character, to be exercised rather in the form of good offices, and with the object of obtaining an equitable compensation from the Italian Government for any losses which may result to such parties from changes in the law of the place affecting their existing rights of ownership.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches, noted in the margin,* from Her Majesty's Consul-General at Venice relative to the circumstances under which the validity of a will executed by a Mr. Folliot Nash, a British subject, deceased at Venice, after his marriage with an Italian lady, had been disputed by the relatives of the deceased in this country, on the ground of an alleged former marriage; and he (Mr. Russell) was to request us to take the papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any and what instructions should be addressed to Her Majesty's Consul-General on that subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that the alleged previous marriage of Mr. Nash would not affect the validity of his will, inasmuch as the lady to whom he bequeaths his property is designated by name, and there can be no question as to the person for whom the bequest was intended. The will, indeed, deals only with property of the testator out of England, and does not revoke any previous wills which may have disposed of his property in England, and it is possible that such wills or will might be admitted to proof in this country. It would appear, however, sufficient to instruct the Consul that we see no grounds for doubting the validity of the will made in Venice.

My Lord, Temple, September 8, 1871.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a translation of a despatch from the Italian Minister for Foreign Affairs to the Italian Chargé d'Affaires at this Court, respecting the refusal of two Irish Religious Communities at Rome to make the declaration of their property for the application of the mortmain duty required by the law of 21st April, 1862, on the ground of their being foreigners, and he (Mr. Odo Russell) was to request we would take the subject into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to the Italian Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this subject into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it is an admitted principle of international law that the Sovereign Power of a State has a right to make laws to bind foreigners in relation to their property within its territory equally with natives, and we are unable to discover in the Law of 21st April, 1862, any such features of specialty as would justify the claim of the Irish Religious Communities in Rome, that their property situated within the Italian territory should be exempt from its operation, as we understand the law. The tax in question imposed by that law, as it is to be levied on all property held in mortmain by corporate bodies, whether Italian or foreign, may properly be regarded as a general tax, and so long as no other declaration or return for the purpose of assessment is required from the Irish Religious Communities in Rome than is required from Italian corporate bodies holding property under similar legal conditions, we are of opinion that the Irish Religious Communities in Rome will not be justified in refusing to make the declaration required from them.

With regard to the precise answer which it will be proper for your Lordship to return to the Italian Government, we are rather at a loss to advise your Lordship, as no direct question has been raised in the despatch of the Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs. We would suggest that your Lordship may properly inform Count Maffei that Her Majesty's Government sees nothing unjust in the property of foreigners, British subjects within the Italian territory being made subject to the payment of an annual tax, so long as the tax is reasonable in its amount and is levied at an uniform rate upon property of the same kind, whether held by Italian subjects or foreigners.

Sir,

WE are favoured with your letter of the 15th September ultimo, in which you stated—

1. That we were doubtless aware that, after the death of the Emperor Maximilian and the consequent overthrow of the Imperial Government established by him in Mexico, the Republican Government which succeeded refused to hold intercourse with the Powers who had recognized the Imperial Government, and repudiated all engagements of an international character which had theretofore existed between such Powers and Mexico.

2. That the British Chargé d'Affaires was accordingly withdrawn from Mexico, and from that time no diplomatic intercourse had been maintained between this country and Mexico, although a state of war did not ensue.

3. That the consequence had been that the operation of all Treaties and engagements of the like character between the two countries had been suspended, and among the latter certain official arrangements made for the assignment of a portion of the revenues of the custom-house at Vera Cruz for the payment of British claims, including those of the bondholders.

4. That the present Government of Mexico, however, though disclaiming any international obligation to provide for those claims, was understood not to disown the obligation of the National Treasury to provide for them.

5. That Her Majesty's Government in this state of things had hitherto considered it would be inconsistent with the dignity of this country to make any advances for a renewal of diplomatic relations with Mexico, and had required as the condition of their listening to any overtures from Mexico for that purpose that the Republic should either recognize all existing conventions and agreements with this country, or substitute others that might be mutually agreed upon for them.

6. That meanwhile, however, the money payments on account of British claims were in suspense; and the points on which you had to ask our opinion were: (1) whether the course taken by the Government of the Republic in repudiating its Treaty engagements with Great Britain is warranted by international law; and if not (2) what course Her Majesty's Government would be justified in adopting with a view to secure the observance of them.

7. That you inclosed the Treaty and agreements referred to, and also a Memorandum drawn up some time ago in the Foreign Office.

In compliance with the request contained in your letter we have the honour to report—

1. That the course taken by the Government of the Republic of Mexico in repudiating its Treaty engagements with Great Britain is in our opinion not warranted by international law.

2. That Her Majesty's Government has, we think, a strict right to adopt reprisals after a due summons to the Government of the Republic to fulfil its Treaty engagements, but the exercise of this right under the circumstances is a matter of policy, on which we do not presume to advise.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter and its inclosures from the River Plate Telegraph Company, claiming the interference of Her Majesty's Government in consequence of the alleged unjustifiable proceedings of the Uruguayan Government with regard to the representatives and property of the Company in that Republic, and he was to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to any steps which should be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am not perfectly informed as to the present condition of political affairs in the State of Uruguay, but I infer from the declaration of Mr. John Oldham of 29th November, 1870, that there is a rebellion against the Government recognised by Her Majesty, and that the rebels are in possession of the "Campana," and have interrupted the working of the line of telegraph between Monte Video and Buenos Ayres. Under these circumstances, the Telegraph Company have requested Her Majesty's Government to protect them, on the ground that they are a British Company with British representatives, and they rely on the 4th Article of the Concession granted to the Company by the Monte Videan Government, by which it undertook to protect the property of the Company "as far as lies in its power." I do not find any good grounds in the correspondence for supposing that the Monte Videan Government is able to protect the property of the Company from the Blanco party, which has evidently the command of the country between Monte Video and Colonia, and Her Majesty's Government cannot, in my opinion, properly interfere to control the action of the Blancos in the Campana if it be thought necessary by them in the interests of the rebellion to interrupt the telegraph wires, in order to prevent the use of the telegraph by the Monte Videan Government for political purposes.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received October 10.)

Temple, October 9, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 19th August on the claim of the River Plate Telegraph Company upon the Uruguayan Government, he was directed to transmit to me, together with the former papers in the case, a further letter from that Company, and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which it would be proper to return to them.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That before any definitive answer is sent by your Lordship to the further letter from the River Plate Telegraph Company, it would be desirable that the Secretary should be requested to furnish your Lordship with a copy of that part of the Concession to which reference is made in the letter of Mr. Oldham to Her Majesty's Acting Minister at Buenos Ayres, dated 19th January, 1871 (Excerpt p. 24), and with copies of the note addressed by the Ministro de Gobierno on the afternoon of the 6th October, 1870, to Mr. Oldham, together with Mr. Oldham's reply, unless your Lordship should think it more advisable to communicate with Her Majesty's Acting Minister at Buenos Ayres, and to instruct him to forward copies of the papers inclosed to him in Mr. Oldham's letter of the 19th January, 1871, and to report to your Lordship upon the occurrences in the months of October and December, 1870, when Her Majesty's Consul was called upon to intervene on behalf of Mr. Oldham. The latter would perhaps be the more satisfactory course, and if your Lordship should decide in favour of it, the Secretary of the Company may be informed "that as it appears from Excerpt p. 24, to which your Lordship's attention has been more particularly invited in the further letter from the Company, that the intervention of Her Majesty's Consul was invoked by Mr. Oldham on both the occasions referred to, your Lordship thinks it necessary to communicate with Her Majesty's Acting Minister at Buenos Ayres before any definitive answer can be given to the Company's further letter."

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th November ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying Memorandum, which had been drawn up in the Foreign Office, together with the original correspondence upon which it was founded, containing a statement of the complaints which Her Majesty's Government have against the Government of Uruguay, and for which, up to this time, they have been unable to obtain satisfaction, and Mr. Hammond was to request us to take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our early convenience, with our opinion as to the course which it would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to pursue to obtain redress for the pecuniary and other injuries inflicted on Her Majesty's Government and subjects.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, with the exception of the money due to Her Majesty's Treasury, the grievances complained of have reference to the treatment of Her Majesty's subjects, who have established themselves in the State of Uraguay, and whose condition would be rendered worse by a declaration of war on the part of Great Britain against that State. It is therefore extremely difficult to suggest to your Lordship any effective mode of enforcing satisfaction for the wrongs inflicted on British subjects, unless Her Majesty's subjects who may be established in the State of Uraguay have timely notice to withdraw themselves and their property, and comply with such notice. As regards, however, the money due from the State of Uraguay to Her Majesty's Treasury, we are of opinion that the most effective course to enforce payment of it will be to make reprisals, as was done by Her Majesty's Government in 1840, when the Neapolitan Government refused to make its grant of the sulphur monopoly to a French Company.

We must observe, however, that if Her Majesty's Government should order Her Majesty's fleet to seize and detain Uraguayan vessels until the just demands of Her Majesty's Government are satisfied, Her Majesty's Government must be prepared to declare war against Uraguay, if the Uraguayan Government should lay an embargo on British vessels, or sequestrate the property of British subjects.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Tangier, with its inclosure,* from the British Vice-Consul at Mazagan, dated the 7th ultimo, containing inquiries as to his liability to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Gibraltar, in regard to acts done by him in his official capacity, under the authority of the Order in Council of 1857, Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the replies which should be returned to the inquiries of the British Vice-Consul on this subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it does not appear from Mr. Vice-Consul Stokes' letter to Sir John Drummond Hay whether the Vice-Consul was or was not within the local jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Gibraltar, when he was served with the process of that Court on the 14th March, 1871. As far as I am able to inform myself, by reference to the Charter of Justice of the 1st September, 1830, under which the Supreme Court of Gibraltar was constituted, the local jurisdiction of that Court is conterminous with the garrison and territory of Gibraltar; and in order to found the jurisdiction of that Court in an action of trespass brought by Mr. John Haire against the Vice-Consul, it would be a condition precedent, in my opinion, that the Vice-Consul should have been within the local jurisdiction of that Court, when he was served with its process. There is nothing in the Order in Council of the 27th August, 1857, which would give effect to the process of the Supreme Court of Gibraltar within the territory of Morocco in an action or suit brought against Her Majesty's Consul, and I should be surprised to learn that the process of that Court has been served on Her Majesty's Vice-Consul within the territory of Morocco.

On the other hand it appears that the Vice-Consul has obeyed the citation issued from the Supreme Court of Gibraltar, and has so far placed himself within its jurisdiction. Whether he has appeared under protest to its jurisdiction, or in what manner he has objected to its jurisdiction, is not explained by him; I am therefore at a loss to advise your Lordship upon this part of the case without further information. Upon the question of time raised by Her Majesty's Vice-Consul, viz., that under the Order in Council of the 27th August, 1857, it is provided that "every action or suit brought against Her Majesty's Consul by reason of anything done under the authority of that Order shall be commenced within six calendar months next after the doing thereof, and not otherwise," it will be competent for him to raise that objection against the Supreme Court entertaining the suit if he has, in fact, placed himself within its jurisdiction.

I would, however, venture to observe on this provision of the Order in Council, that I have great doubts, as it differs from the provision of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, whether it would have any operation outside the limits of the territory of Morocco. The Queen is, for instance, authorized by the first clause of that statute to exercise within the territory of Morocco "the same power and authority as Her Majesty may exercise within any territory acquired by conquest or cession;" but she is not thereby authorized to control the exercise of jurisdiction by Courts within Her Majesty's dominions, unless there should be some further provision to that effect in the statute. The limitation, however, which is enacted by the seventh clause of the statute, falls short of that laid down by the Order in Council of 1857, as the statute enacts that the limitation of six months shall only be in force when the cause of action has arisen within Her Majesty's dominions, and, where it has arisen out of Her Majesty's dominions, an action may be brought at any time within six months after the plaintiff and the defendant shall have been within the jurisdiction of the Court in which the action shall be brought.

Your Lordship will perceive that, under this clause of the statute, the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Gibraltar may be operative, as regards time, in a manner not contemplated by Mr. Vice-Consul Stokes. I should suggest, as the case may be of importance as a precedent, particularly as the Order in Council conflicts primâ facie with the statute, that further and fuller information should be obtained from Her Majesty's Vice-Consul.

* Sir J. D. Hay, Separate, of July 7; No 26, Commercial, of August 29; to Sir J. D. Hay, No. 15, Commercial, of August 8, 1871.

Gibraltar had not power to issue process against persons not within its local jurisdiction, and, consequently, none in the present case to serve Mr. Stokes with a writ of summons, whilst he was within the Empire of Morocco. We may observe that the question arises not exactly as it is put in Mr. Hammond's letter as to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Gibraltar over British Consular Officers in Morocco; but as to the jurisdiction of the Court over British subjects in general, for Mr. Stokes is sued not in his character as Vice-Consul, nor for anything (on the face of the proceedings) done by him as such, but for ordinary trespasses. While we think it right to point this out, we do not think that the Supreme Court has other or exceptional jurisdiction as to the issuing of writs of summons against Consular Officers from the jurisdiction enjoyed by it over British subjects in general.

As far as we can judge from the papers before us, Mr. Stokes appears to have acted with perfect propriety, and simply in the execution of his judicial or quasi-judicial functions as Vice-Consul. And we think, therefore, that your Lordship would be warranted in taking such steps, or directing such steps to be taken, for his defence as the course of the Foreign Office sanctions in cases where Consular Officers are sued for acts done in the honest discharge of their duty. Should the judgment in the Court of Gibraltar assert the jurisdiction of the Court in a case like the present, it may be very fit to have the matter brought at once for decision before the Judicial Committee, and decided as a matter of law apart from the facts of the case. The facts appear, as far as we can judge, to afford a complete defence to Mr. Stokes; but it may be desirable, as a precedent, that the assertion of jurisdiction (if made) by the Court of Gibraltar should not pass unquestioned. There is nothing to show that Mr. Stokes has, by any act of his, waived the point of jurisdiction; but on this matter we desire to be understood as speaking with some reserve, from the fact that the technical forms of the proceeding are not before us.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received September 26.)

Temple, September 25, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Morocco relative to a question which has arisen between the British and United States' Consulates at Tangier in regard to the jurisdiction to be exercised over a British subject employed as interpreter at the United States' Consulate. A copy of the Order in Council for regulating jurisdiction over British subjects in Morocco was also inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take this matter into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That although Mr. Scott is not entitled to claim British protection by reason of his having neglected the duty of registering himself prescribed by section 35 of the Order in Council of 1857, nevertheless as a British subject, not having got rid of his nationality under the provisions of the "Naturalization Act, 1870," he remains in our opinion subject to the criminal jurisdiction of the British Consul, nor do we think his employment as interpreter to the American Consul entitles the American Consul to claim exemption for him from British jurisdiction. The question, whether Mr. Scott could get rid of his nationality by becoming a Moorish subject, will not arise until he is recognized as such by the Moorish Government, an event which does not seem probable; but we have to observe that should he become a Mahommedan and a Moorish subject, still under our Treaty with Morocco of December 1856 (Hertslet, vol. x., p. 903), the British Consul would be bound to entertain a civil suit brought against him by a Moorish subject.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received November 7.)

My Lord, Temple, November 6, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch with its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister at Tangier, respecting the attitude assumed by the Moorish Government in regard to the claims of British and foreign creditors on the estates of Moorish subjects, whose property has been confiscated by the Sultan of Morocco. Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether the claims of British subjects to payment under the circumstances referred to can properly be supported by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that the Ministers of the Sultan of Morocco will be justified in holding that all moneys raised by the Governors and Sheikhs, whether properly or improperly, by imposing taxes on the subjects of the Sultan, are the property of the State, and are not liable to the personal debts of the Governors and Sheikhs, if this is the question. But it appears to me probable that there are several questions involved in the dispute between the creditors of the Governors and Sheikhs and the Sultan's Government. I am also of opinion that the Sultan's Government will be justified in asserting a paramount lien on the property of the Governors and Sheikhs for any arrears of taxes due from them to the State to the exclusion of private creditors, and in such cases I am of opinion that the claims of British subjects to preference of payment cannot properly be supported by Her Majesty's Government. It will be convenient that Her Majesty's Minister at Tangier should report if there are other classes of claims, more particularly if there are any claims on the part of British subjects for moneys lent to the Sheikhs and elders of the tribes to pay taxes exacted from them by the Governors, whose effects have been confiscated.

My Lord, Temple, December 2, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch, which has been received from Sir J. D. Hay, inclosing copies of correspondence respecting an assault which has been committed on Mr. Robert Spinney, a British subject, in the neighbourhood of Mazagan, by a Moor; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this despatch, together with its inclosures, into my consideration, and that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be sent to Sir J. D. Hay upon the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Minister at Tangier has, in my opinion, adopted a sound view of the course which should be adopted by him in this case, namely, that he should insist upon the parties who assaulted and wounded Mr. Spinney being signally punished, but that he should not require the Moorish Government to make Mr. Spinney a pecuniary compensation. Under the circumstances that there was a "Moosem," or Moorish religious festival, being celebrated at the place where the market was held, as admitted by Mr. Vice-Consul Stokes in his letter of the 6th November, 1871, Mr. Spinney was not, in my opinion, justified in going there without giving notice to the local authorities, in accordance with the Circular notice of Her Majesty's Minister, in order that he might either have been warned not to go there, or have obtained a native guard to accompany him. Having neglected to observe the precautions pointed out to him in that Circular, he may, in my opinion, be justly allowed to suffer the consequences of his neglect, as also pointed out in the Circular. Your Lordship may, however, in my opinion, properly instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Tangier to follow up his demand for the punishment of the individuals who assaulted and wounded Mr. Spinney, but not to press any further on the Moorish Government Mr. Spinney's claim for a pecuniary compensation.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch and its inclosure,* from Her Majesty's Minister at Tangier, relative to a question which has arisen between Her Majesty's Court at that place and the Spanish Consul as to the nationality of persons born in Gibraltar of Spanish parents, and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion on the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the parties in question in this case appear to be subjects of Great Britain by birth and subjects of Spain by origin, and the point which is raised is whether Her Majesty's Consuls should extend protection to such persons against the Consular authorities of Spain when those authorities claim to exercise jurisdiction over them within the territory of Morocco, under Treaty engagements with that Power.

I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Consuls should not extend protection to such person, under such circumstances, against the Consular authorities of Spain, as the parties owe allegiance to Spain, and the Spanish Consular authorities in Morocco are empowered by Treaty to exercise jurisdiction over Spanish subjects within that State.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 26th April, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us accompanying papers respecting a rumour which had been alluded to in the Belgian newspaper the "Echo du Parliament," that the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg was about to enter the German Confederation, the Kingdom of Netherlands resigning the Grand Dukedom in favour of Prince Henry of the Netherlands; and that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether such a proceeding, if it actually took place, would be a violation of the Treaty respecting Luxemburg of 1867, to which Great Britain was a party.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have considered this matter, and have the honour to report—

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from the Acting British Vice-Consul at Batavia respecting the solemnization of marriages in the British Consular Chapel at that place. The Circular despatch referred to by Mr. Fraser was also inclosed, and Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that I would report my opinion on the points in regard to marriages solemnized in this chapel adverted to in Mr. Fraser's despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. Fraser should be informed that the course which your Lordship considers may be properly followed in cases analogous to that which is referred to in Mr. Fraser's letter of the 9th May last is the course which has been expressly sanctioned by Parliament in 1856 on the motion of the then Bishop of Oxford. That by the 19 and 20 Vict., c. 119, sect. 12, express permission has been given to any clergyman of the Church of England to read the marriage service of the Church of England, if parties, who have been married before the Civil Registrar, present themselves to him and express their desire to add the religious ceremony ordained by the Church; but the reading of such service is not to affect the marriage previously contracted, nor is it to be entered as a marriage in the Consular Register. That your Lordship sees no objection to parties who may have contracted marriage in a British Consulate without any religious ceremony, if they should afterwards desire to add the religious service in the Consular chapel, being allowed so to do, if the Chaplain is willing to read the service, but no entry should be made in any register book of such service. That, with regard to the two points upon which Mr. Fraser wishes to be favoured with your Lordship's opinion, he should be informed that the Consular Chaplain has no legal authority to publish banns of marriage in any such chapel; and that your Lordship cannot sanction the reading or celebration of the marriage service in the Consular chapel, except in the case of parties who may have contracted marriages without any religious ceremony at the British Consulate.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 6th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers as noted in inclosed list,* respecting the claim advanced by Messrs. Swanzy against the Netherlands Government for compensation for losses sustained by them on the occasion of an attack made on Dixcove by the Ahanta tribes in the month of June, 1869, and he was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the merits of Messrs. Swanzy's claim, and upon the course with respect to it which Her Majesty's Government should now pursue.

In compliance with your Lordship's commands we have taken the said papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears that the property in question in this case was destroyed by the attack of a hostile Ahanta tribe upon the town of Dixcove in the possession of the Netherlands Government. Upon a perusal of these papers we are prepared to advise that the charge of collusion against the Dutch Governor is not made out, and under these circumstances it appears that this is the ordinary case of destruction of property by operations of war, and that the neutral owner of that property has no title to compensation from the Government of the invaded territory.

2nd. That Messrs. Swanzy asserted that the Dutch soldiers joined the besiegers in plundering their property; and your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion whether, if this were proved, Messrs. Swanzy would not then have a valid claim against the Netherlands Government.

3rd. That Viscount Enfield returned for facility of reference the papers which had already been laid before us.*

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That assuming that it can be proved that Dutch soldiers took part in attacking the town of Dixcove and in plundering the stores of Messrs. My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing with other papers a letter from the Attorney-General of New South Wales, suggesting the extension to the Fiji Islands of the provisions of the proposed law for the Extradition of Criminals, and he was to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion on this suggestion.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think the evil pointed out by the Attorney-General of New South Wales cannot properly be remedied in the proposed manner. So long as no Government is recognized at Fiji the mutual surrender of criminals by independent and civilized communities is a principle to which the Fiji Islands must remain foreign. As repeatedly before, so here again, the importance of specific Imperial legislation on the subject of our relations to places like the Fiji Islands seems to be established by the facts brought to the Law Officers' notice in connection with them. But such legislation should not be by way of extention of the "Extradition Act 1870," the scope of which is wholly different. In any such legislation means might with propriety be taken to carry out the suggestion of Sir William Manning, mentioned in section 3 of the letter of the Attorney-General ot New South Wales.

on Her Majesty's Consul in the Fiji Islands powers under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act to deal with crimes and offences committed by British subjects within his Consular district.

2. That we should find among the correspondence copies of the Code of Laws supposed to be in force in Fiji, which are, however, stated by the Consul to be for all practical purposes a dead letter, and we should observe that Mr. March reported that the Chiefs entirely disclaimed any jurisdiction over foreigners, and looked to the Consul to exercise over his own countrymen the same power and authority that they do over the natives.

3. That those despatches also show that some more constituted and recognized authority than the Consul now possesses is required to enable him to deal with the cases which are constantly brought before him, and which are likely to become more numerous as the numbers of settlers increase, many of these cases embracing crimes and offences with which the Consul's present powers do not enable him legally to deal.

4. That under those circumstances your Lordship had thought it necessary to cause the inclosed draft Order in Council to be prepared and submitted to us, and Viscount Enfield was to request that we would have the goodness to favour your Lordship with our opinion—

1st. Whether Her Majesty has, under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, sufficient authority to issue the Order in Council; and 2ndly. If so, whether the proposed Order is right and proper, or whether we have any alterations to suggest in it.

5. That we should observe that a clause (No. 34) had been inserted for the purpose of making better provision for the regulation of the traffic in South Sea Islanders, and for the protection of those immigrants, to which Viscount Enfield begged to direct our particular attention.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we assume that there has been some sort of jurisdiction exercised by Her Majesty, at least by sufferance, in the Fiji Islands, so as to bring the case within the words of 6 and 7 Vict., cap. 94, and on that assumption we think that Her Majesty has sufficient authority to issue an Order in Council, under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, for the purpose proposed by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, but we would suggest to your Lordship that certain alterations should be made in the draft Order, so as to keep its provisions within the powers conferred on Her Majesty by that statute.

As we are of opinion that the powers so conferred on Her Majesty are limited to offences committed within the limits of the Fiji Islands, we should advise the words "or of kidnapping natives from other islands under false pretences" should be amended in Article 16 in accordance with an amended form of Article 34, which we subjoin, and which we think will sufficiently meet the evil intended to be remedied.

We suggest the substitution in Article 16 of the words "or of importing labourers into the Fiji Islands from other islands of the Pacific, in contravention of the provisions of the said Order as hereinafter mentioned."

We think it advisable to give to labourers so imported into the Fiji Islands in British vessels, by a separate Article, a form of which is subjoined, a remedy for recovering their wages and obtaining proper treatment, upon complaint to the British Consul.

With regard to the provisions of Article 25, we are of opinion that Her Majesty has not, under the statute, authority to give to the High Court of Sydney jurisdiction in respect of suits of a civil nature arising between British subjects within the Fiji Islands. We should advise the omission of this Article. We have also advisedly omitted in the amended draft of Article 34, the power given to officers of Her Majesty's Navy to board and search all merchant-vessels, as being also ultra vires. We have inserted in Article 22 the addition of the words "or against this Order."

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th March instant, stating that in our Report of the 17th ultimo, therewith returned to us, upon the proposed Order in Council for the regulation of Consular jurisdiction in the Fiji Islands, we suggested the omission of Article 25 of the Order because we considered that the Queen had not under the Statute authority to give to the High Court of Sydney jurisdiction in respect of suits of a civil nature arising between British subjects within the Fiji Islands.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased to say that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would have the goodness to advise you why it was not within Her Majesty's competency to grant to the Court at Sydney the same powers in civil as in criminal cases in which her right of jurisdiction is maintained, and why Her Majesty cannot confer upon the Court of a neighbouring Colony the same powers in civil suits that she has conferred in other similar cases upon the nearest British Court (for example, in the Zanzibar Order in Council, upon the Court at Bombay), and that he was also to inquire whether if Article 25 was to be omitted, Articles 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9, in which provision is made for reference on appeal in civil cases to the High Court at Sydney do not also require amendment, and, if so, Mr. Hammond further stated that he was to request that we would suggest necessary alterations.

Mr. Hammond was also pleased further to say that he was to ask our advice as to the amount of fine or term of imprisonment which should attach to a contravention of the Regulations affecting the importation of native labourers into the Fiji Islands, referred to in Article 34 as amended by us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That ever since the well-known case of Campbell v. Hall, 1 Cowper 204, it has been considered settled, as your Lordship is aware, that where a Colony has received representative institutions the power of the Queen to legislate for it jure coronæ is at an end. Sydney has received representative institutions, the Queen can, therefore, have no power to legislate for it, except what is expressly conferred upon her by Imperial Statute. The Statutes 6 and 7 Vict., cap. 94, sec. 4, gives her the power to direct persons accused of crimes committed in places out of her dominions to be taken for trial to some British Colony to be designated by Order in Council, and thereupon empowers the Supreme Court of such Colony exercising criminal jurisdiction to keep in custody, try, and punish the offenders; but it gives Her Majesty no power to direct that civil causes arising out of her dominions shall be determined by any Court of her Colonies. For this reason we advised that so much of the Order as purported to give jurisdiction to the Court at Sydney over civil causes arising at Fiji was ultra vires.

It certainly follows, as is pointed out by Mr. Hammond, that Articles 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9 require amendment; that amendment would consist in striking out so much of them as relates to the exercise of appellate jurisdiction by the Court of Sydney in civil cases.

We have to observe, with respect to the Order giving the Court of Bombay jurisdiction in certain civil causes arising at Zanzibar, that we are not fully cognizant of the circumstances under which that Order was made; it may be enough, however, to point out that Bombay is not a Colony with representative institutions.

With regard to the term of imprisonment and the amount of the fine to be inserted in amended Article 34, we think that the limit adopted in Article 3 may be followed in this Article, viz., imprisonment for a term not exceeding three calendar months, or a fine not exceeding 100*l*.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul in the Fiji Islands, reporting a violent boarding of the British ship "Oriti" in the Port of Levuka by certain parties, some of whom were British subjects, and his proceedings thereupon; Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the action which Her Majesty's Consul would be justified in taking in such cases.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it is desirable that I should have the advantage of conferring with the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General as to the best mode of dealing with this case and cases of a like character, in connection with the proposed Order of Her Majesty in Council for the regulation of the jurisdiction of Her Majesty's Consuls in Fiji.

Temple, May 18, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 3rd instant, stating—

1. That with reference to our Reports of the 15th February and 17th March last, respecting the proposed Order in Council for the regulation of Consular jurisdiction in the Fiji Islands, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, dated 15th April, 1871, approving the Order generally, but suggesting doubts both as to the power of the Supreme Court of New South Wales to try appeals or references in criminal cases, and as to the propriety of directing without previous reference to the Colonial Government, that persons guilty of crimes in the Fiji Islands should be deported for punishment to a British Colony.

2. That your Lordship apprehended that the objections raised by the Colonial Secretary on those points might be met by the insertion in Articles 13, 14, 15, 16, 21, and 22 of the provision to the effect that the consent of the Colonial Government should be obtained for hearing criminal cases on appeal, and for undertaking the custody of offenders deported from Fiji, before those clauses could take effect, and your Lordship directed him to return the Order in Council to us in order that we might make such alterations in it as we might think necessary to meet those objections.

3. That Viscount Enfield was to add that your Lordship thought it would be better, if possible, to pass the Order in Council as a whole, and not in part, as suggested by the Colonial Office.

---

* List, January 20, 1871.

1871

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That as regards the 13th Article, we do not think that the jurisdiction which it confers is strictly speaking an appellate jurisdiction; at the same time we think it advisable that Lord Granville's suggestion be adopted that the consent of the Colonial Government should be obtained to its provisions before they take effect.

As regards the remaining Articles to which Mr. Holland's letter refers, we entirely agree with your Lordship that it may be desirable on grounds of policy to obtain the consent of the Colony of New South Wales to the provisions contained in them which affect that Colony.

It appears to us that the best mode of expressing this in the Order would be the insertion of an additional Article thus worded: "Articles 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 21, 22, and 23 shall not take effect until the consent of the Government of the Colony of New South Wales shall have been obtained thereto."

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul in the Fiji Islands,* reporting a violent boarding of the British ship "Oriti" in the port of Levuka by certain parties, some of whom were British subjects, and his (the Consul's) proceedings thereupon; and that he was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the action which Her Majesty's Consul would be justified in taking in such cases.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the above despatch into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That cases like the present are attended with great difficulty not only from the strange and lawless character of the traffic in Polynesian natives (called passengers) which gives rise to them, such traffic being in some cases little better than a modified Slave Trade; but from the absence of all legitimate and enforceable authority in the Consul.

The Consul in this case has it appears done all that he can do, and has on the whole acted with sense and discretion. But he can have no real authority except such as is conferred upon him by Order in Council under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, and at present in such a case as this he has none. He can only interefere in such cases with the weight which his position and personal character may give him, and things will remain in this condition until he is clothed with some authority under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act. When the proposed Order in Council is passed, we think that it will be competent to him to deal with such a case as this summarily under Act. 12, and with more serious cases by the subsequent Articles.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received July 25.)

Temple, July 22, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signiffed in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 12th instant, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying copy of a despatch from the Governor of New South Wales, which had been forwarded to your Lordship by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, inclosing a copy of a communication from Her Majesty's Consul in the Fiji Islands respecting a Charter (a copy of which was inclosed) granted by the Chief Thakobau to the European residents at Levuka, and authorizing the formation of a Body Corporate "to frame and pass police, muncipal, and other regulations, and to recover such taxes, imports, &c., as may be necessary for the carrying out of such corporation."

2. That it would be seen that the Attorney-General for New South Wales was of opinion that the European residents at Levuka would not be justified in carrying out the provisions of such a Charter, and that any British subject taking the property or restraining the freedom of any person under the authority of the laws promulgated by any Fijian Chieftian would be liable to prosecution under the Act 9 Geo. IV, cap. 83; and Mr. Russell was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration and report to your Lordship whether we concur in the opinion of the Attorney-General of New South Wales, and in the event of our agreeing with that officer, that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion what steps it would be competent for the Chief of Fiji, or for the European residents there to take with the view to enforce obedience to any laws that might be made for the benefit of the community.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it is, in our opinion, within the competence of the sovereign power of any country to depute to others those powers, or any portion of those powers, of governing the residents in or immigrant into that country, which are possessed by that Sovereign Power. It is true that this country, or indeed any country would probably not recognize these powers as existing in fact in any Sovereign Power either too barbarous or too unstable to be capable of entering into business relations with other Governments. It is a question of fact whether the power of Thakobau, the Fijian Chieftain, is or is not of such a character; and it is probably a question of policy whether Her Majesty's Government choose to recognize his authority and to deal with him as possessing it.

If Her Majesty's Government choose so to recognize his authority and so to deal with him, we think the Charter in question is one the binding force of which, within the area of its operation, may properly be recognized; and if our opinion be desired as to whether in point of fact the power and character of this Fijian Chieftain be of such a sort as to warrant the British Government in according to it this sort of recognition, we can only say that the various papers which have come before us relating to the Fiji Islands in which this Chieftain has been mentioned do not lead us to reply to this question in the negative.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received August 29.)

My Lord, Temple, August 28, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that with reference to the Law Officers' Report of the 21st February last, herewith returned to me, relative to the claims arising out of the release of the "Daphne" by the Vice-Admiralty Court of New South Wales, preferred by the owners and others interested in the vessel for the payment of the passages of certain natives, whom they had imported as labourers into the Fiji Islands from other Islands in the Pacific, he was directed to transmit to me a letter from Mr. Smith, who describes himself as registered owner of the vessel, praying that the natives may be either transferred to the custody of the persons properly entitled to their services, or that the persons in whose custody the natives are placed may be called upon to defray the expenses of their passages, and to guarantee their wages and return passages home when their period of services shall have expired, or in default of this, that Her Majesty's Government will cause the owners to be compensated for the losses they have suffered in respect of these immigrants. The instructions that have been sent to Consul March upon this subject, together with the previous papers, were also inclosed, and Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship at my early convenience with my opinion as to the answer that should under the circumstances be returned to Mr. Smith's application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the prayer of Mr. Smith in his memorial to your Lordship is founded on the assumption that he and the other owners of the "Daphne" are under certain legal obligations towards the Islanders landed at Fiji, in consideration of which he claims that the owners of the "Daphne" should be re-imbursed the passage-money of the Islanders to Fiji under the Charter party with Mr. Ross Lewin. I am of opinion however, as at present informed, that the owners of the "Daphne" are under no such legal obligation. The agreements, such as they were, are stated by Sir Alfred Stephen in his judgment on the case in the Vice-Admiralty Court of Sydney to have been made between the Islanders and Mr. Ross Lewin, the charterer of the "Daphne," so that in strict law the Islanders would have no cause of action for breach of those agreements against the owners of the "Daphne;" on the other hand, as regards the question of fact, Her Majesty's Consul has made arrangements under which all legal responsibility for the payment of annual wages to the Islanders in question and their passage-money home has been undertaken by the parties to whose care and employment they have been transferred by Her Majesty's Consul. Under these circumstances I am of opinion that Mr. Smith has made out no case on behalf of the owners of the "Daphne" for payment of the passage-money of the Islanders to Fiji, and as regards his alternative prayer, that the Islanders may otherwise be transferred to the custody of the persons properly entitled to them, by which I presume him to mean Mr. Ross Lewin or his agents, I am of opinion that Mr. Ross Lewin has forfeited all title to the services of the natives by his violation of the terms of the licence granted to him by the authorities of Queensland.

My Lord, Temple, September 9, 1871.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Russell's letter of the 5th instant, stating that with reference to the Queen's Advocate's Report of the 28th ultimo, upon the subject of the claim preferred by Mr. Smith on account of the natives imported into Fiji in the "Daphne" and released by Her Majesty's Consul there, he (Mr. Russell) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a draft of the answer which, in accordance with the advice of the Queen's Advocate, it was proposed to return to Mr. Smith, and he (Mr. Russell) was to inquire whether we agreed in its terms, or whether we would suggest any alterations.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we, the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General, have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That not having been parties to the Queen's Advocate's Report of the 28th August, and not having had the advantage of seeing it amongst the papers now sent to us, we are unable to report "with reference to it," as your Lordship invites us to do.

As far as we can judge from the papers before us, however, we see no reason to doubt that the answer proposed to be sent by your Lordship to Mr. Smith is under the circumstances a proper answer.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received November 2.)

My Lord, Temple, October 31, 1871.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the correspondence respecting the case of the British vessel "Challenge," which was seized by Consul March, and sent to Sydney for trial on a charge of a breach of the laws relating to the Slave Trade, under the circumstances reported in his despatches. That as it appears that upon the refusal of the Governor of New South Wales to proceed against the vessel upon this charge in the Colonial Vice-Admiralty Court, she was restored to her owners, who have stated that they will hold the captors responsible for all loss or damage by her detention, Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion upon the proceedings of Consul March in this case; upon the course pursued by the Governor of New South Wales and the Commander of the "Blanche;" and as to the steps, if any, that should be taken in the event of the threatened proceedings being instituted against the captors.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears to us that Consul March did his duty, and no more than his duty, in seizing the "Challenge" and endeavouring to obtain her condemnation and the punishment of her captain and officers for breaches of the law against slave-trading; and that, so far as he requires it, he should be supported by Her Majesty's Government.

With regard to the conduct of the Earl of Belmore, it was very difficult for him to disregard the clear and elaborate opinion given him by the Attorney-General for the Colony. We think his determination is a matter to be regretted, but one which entails no blame upon the Governor himself, who acted upon his Law Officer's advice. The Attorney-General of the Colony thought that evidence of kidnapping natives, and treating them as they were treated in this case was no evidence of an intention to deal with them as slaves. Questions of intention are no doubt questions on which different minds may come to different conclusions, and we will say no more than that we should not have come to the same conclusion as the Attorney-General for New South Wales. But this is not a matter for which the Earl of Belmore can be considered responsible.

With respect to the conduct of the officers of the "Blanche," it appears to us to have been in all respects worthy of approbation, and that it will be proper for Her Majesty's Government at all events to hold them harmless for any loss or expenses they may incur in case of an action being successfully prosecuted against them by the owners of the "Challenge" for doing what seems to us to have been their duty.

We venture to add that this, with other cases on which your Lordship has done us the honour to consult us, seems to show the great importance of some interference on the part of the legislature of this country to protect the victims of kidnapping captains and to stop the growth of a Slave Trade in the Pacific, carried on chiefly by British subjects and in the supposed interests of British settlers.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 31st ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith two further letters from the Colonial Office inclosing despatches* from the Governor of New South Wales respecting the case of the British vessel "Challenge," from which we would perceive that the master of that vessel had been convicted in the Supreme Court of the Colony and sentenced to three years' imprisonment, and that the owners had taken possession of her again, and had sent to Captain Montgomerie, of Her Majesty's ship "Blanche," a claim for 700*l.* for damages and loss of profits, a claim of which that officer had, on the advice of the Attorney-General of the Colony, declined to take any notice, and that he was to request we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that the legal seizure of the "Challenge" must be held to have taken place when Captain Montgomerie, at the request of Her Majesty's Consul, took possession of her, and that if the owners of the "Challenge" should bring any action against Captain Montgomerie, the action should be defended by the Crown, and the privilege of seizors, under 5 George IV, c. 113, s. 45, should be claimed on his behalf.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Messrs. Valpy and Chaplin, inclosing Counsel's opinion upon claims put forward by their clients, Messrs. Percy Burrell and Henry Valpy, against the Government of the Republic of Paraguay for unpaid services and for injuries sustained by them while serving under the late President Lopez.

Previous correspondence which has taken place on this subject with Messrs. Valpy and Chaplin was also inclosed, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these claims into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

We are also honoured with Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th instant, transmitting a further letter from Messrs. Burrell and Valpy on this subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government may properly support the claims of Messrs. Burrell and Valpy against the Government of Paraguay for remuneration for the services performed by them to the State of Paraguay under their contracts with the late President Lopez, and also to a reasonable remuneration for their services during the subsequent period when they were accepted, and it may be said, required by the Government of President Lopez after the expiration of their contracts. We should not advise your Lordship to support any claim on their part for compensation on account of restraint or ill-treatment during the latter period, as there is nothing to show that the claimants suffered otherwise than in common with all the subjects of Lopez, and any case for diplomatic interference would not arise unless they had been treated differently in respect of compensation from other subjects of Paraguay, who have suffered wrongs of the same sort at the hands of the late President of that State.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion whether, under the circumstances therein set forth, the claim for compensation can be rightly pressed upon the Persian Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I do not find in the circumstances of this case any sufficient ground for pressing on the Persian Government a claim for compensation to be made by that Government to the wounded gunner of the British steamer "Nada," but I think there is sufficient ground for pressing on that Government, if the necessity should arise, the duty on its part of enforcing the fulfilment of the engagement into which the Persian subjects interested in the "Nada" have formally entered, to make compensation to the gunner.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 13th instant, stating—

1. That with reference to our Report of the 9th February last, respecting the proposed alterations in the draft Convention with Portugal providing for the abolition of the Slave Trade Mixed Commission Courts, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon, showing that the Portuguese Government agreed to the substitution of the procedure in cases of slave trading for the procedure in cases of maritime prize; but that they required further explanations of the proposed insertion which we advised at the end of Article 2 of the words "and the rules of evidence to be applied," as the principle involved appeared to them at variance with the general rule of law, which provides that the onus probandi should fall upon the accuser.

2. That Viscount Enfield was to request that we would be good enough to furnish your Lordship with such an explanation or declaration upon that point as might be satisfactory to the Portuguese Government.

3. That a copy of the corrected Draft Treaty, as submitted to the Portuguese Government, was annexed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Portuguese Government may be properly informed by Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon that the object of inserting the words "and the rules of evidence to be applied," as proposed in the IInd Article of the amended Treaty, is not to introduce any new principle into it which has not been affirmed by the Treaty of 1842, but to secure that the rules agreed upon under Article IX of that Treaty, as regards the

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 12th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 31st August, 1869, and to previous Reports of mine and my predecessors, upon the claim of Mr. F. Andrews to compensation from the Portuguese Government on account of losses sustained by him during the civil war in Portugal in 1833-4, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying further correspondence which has passed upon this subject between Mr. Mee Mathew, Mr. F. Andrews, Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon, and the Foreign Office. Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, together with the former correspondence, which was also inclosed, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in taking any further steps in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in urging upon the Portuguese Government any further consideration of Mr. Andrews' claim.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 21st instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 22nd April upon Mr. Andrews' claim on the Portuguese Government, he was directed to transmit to me a further letter from that gentleman on the subject; and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether it contains anything to induce your Lordship to alter the decision not to press Mr. Andrews' claim any further on the consideration of the Portuguese Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I have read with much attention the correspondence which has taken place on this case since I had the honour of reporting upon it to your Lordship on the 22nd April last, and I have considered very carefully Mr. Andrews' last letter of the 10th June, 1871, in which he has undertaken to present to your Lordship some "virgin" information, but I find nothing in that letter which induces me to alter the opinion which I have already expressed to your Lordship, that your Lordship will not be justified in pressing Mr. Andrews' claim any further on the attention of the Portuguese Government.

I may observe that Mr. Andrews appears to have put upon the conversation of Count d'Avilar with Mr. Lytton in 1865 an interpretation which is not warranted by the language in which Mr. Lytton described that conversation. I agree with the view taken of that conversation by Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon, that it was not a promise, but a courteous expression of a hope on the part of Count d'Avilar that the question might be settled in a manner not unsatisfactory to Mr. Andrews.

Temple, January 5, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Arthur Otway's letter of the 4th instant, stating—

1. That he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, a translation of a despatch from Count Bismarck, stating that, in consequence of alleged violations of neutrality by the Government of Luxemburg, the Prussian Government could no longer consider itself bound to any consideration of the neutrality of the Grand Duchy in the military operations of the German army and in the measures for the security of the German troops against the injuries inflicted on them from Luxemburg. That the Prussian Government, moreover, reserved to itself the prosecution of its claims against the Grand Duchy for the damages done through the non-maintenance of neutrality.

2. That Mr. Otway was also to inclose a copy of a despatch which had been addressed to Lord Augustus Loftus on the subject, and a translation of Count Bismarck's reply, together with a copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at the Hague (No. 110), forwarding the defence of the Luxemburg Government against the charges brought forward by Prussia.

3. That Mr. Otway was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion how far the facts as alleged and explained could be considered to justify the proceedings of the Prussian Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have considered the papers transmitted to us by your Lordship's directions. Assuming the whole of Count Bismarck's statements to be well founded in point of fact, some of them at least would appear to us to constitute a serious case of breach of neutrality against the Government of Luxemburg. And we are of opinion (always on the same assumption) that the reasoning of Count Bismarck and his claim to act upon existing military necessities could not fairly be controverted.

But, upon a perusal of the careful and elaborate answer of M. de Servais, it seems impossible to make this assumption. The paper of M. de Servais seems to us a complete answer and exculpation of the Government of Luxemburg from the charges brought against it by Count Bismarck, if the facts stated by M. de Servias are at all to be relied upon—facts, it is to be observed, many of them peculiarly within the knowledge of the Luxemburg Government, and as to which it was the peculiar duty of M. de Servais accurately to inform himself.

We cannot avoid remarking that Count Bismarck relies, for justification of proposed or possible present action on the part of his Government, upon matters which, even if correctly stated, have long since past; and, in particular, upon the supply of provisions to Thionville in September last, under circumstances, if M. de Servais be correct, which made such supply probably perfectly justifiable, and certainly deprived it of any character of hostility or bad faith as regards the Luxemburg Government. And, although we should agree with Count Bismarck's doctrine as to present military necessity, it is not, we observe, even suggested by him that at the present time any military necessity exists in fact, such as he relies upon in argument to justify his proposed or suggested course.

With respect to the hypothetical case as to the siege of Longwy, put by Count Bismarck, it is impossible for us to say whether circumstances which have not yet happened, and as to the precise character of which we are, therefore, necessarily ignorant, will or will not justify on the part of the Prussian Government some course which that Government has not yet taken. We can only report upon the present papers, that it is for Her Majesty's Government to determine whether they will or will not give credence in point of fact to the explanation of M. de Servais. If Her Majesty's Government do give credence to them, we are obliged to say that what we understand to be the threatened proceedings on the part of the Prussian Government would not, in our opinion, be justified.

My Lord, Temple, January 11, 1871.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Messrs. Digby and Son, representing, on behalf of the owners of the British collier "Chamois," the circumstances under which that vessel had been detained at Rouen by the act of the Prussian authorities, and that it appeared from that statement that the "Chamois" discharged her cargo at Rouen with the permission of the authorities, and was preparing to return, when it was found that the passage of the Seine was blocked by ships sunk across the channel.

That the captain, finding that it was impossible to prosecute his voyage, although, as he alleged, he had no notice of the intention of the Prussians to bar the channel of the river, had it appeared decided to discharge his crew, for whose wages the owners will be held liable as though the return voyage had been completed.

Viscount Enfield was pleased further to state that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in founding upon this case representations to the Prussian Government, and in claiming compensation for damages sustained by the owners and crew in consequence of the detention of the vessel.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That under the circumstances of the navigation of the River Seine being closed in consequence of the exigencies of war, Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in claiming from the North German Government compensation for any damages resulting therefrom to the owners and crew of the "Chamois" from their vessel being unable to descend the river.

My Lord, Temple, January 11, 1871.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 9th instant, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an accompanying translation of a note from the North German Ambassador, in which he complained that a Company had been formed, with the sanction of the French Government, for the establishment of a regular postal service between Calais and Cherbourg, and his Excellency stated that that Company had been formed under the auspices of British subjects; that British steamers had been fitted out for the service, and were employed in carrying it on under the French flag; and that the captains and crews were all British subjects under an engagement for home service; and his Excellency further stated that the fitting out of those ships was a breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act, and that the owners had rendered themselves liable to prosecution; and he called upon Her Majesty's Government to put a stop to the further employment of British vessels on such service, and to take steps to call to account the owners of those already employed.

2. That your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government should take any steps in that matter, and as to the answer that should be returned to the Ambassador.

In odedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the employment of these vessels in carrying the mails between Calais and Cherbourg does not, in our opinion, amount to a violation of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870. The North German Ambassador may, we think, properly be told that, although it is no doubt possible that the French Generals may, amongst others, exchange letters through the post, this does not, in our opinion, make the carrying of mail bags between two French ports an employment in the military service of the French Government.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received January 14.)

My Lord, Temple, January 14, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying translation of a note from Count Bernstorff, stating that the North German Government have decided to revoke their decision not to capture French merchant vessels during the present war, but that, out of regard to the interests of neutrals, who, in consequence of that decision, may have shipped cargoes in French bottoms, they will not make the latter liable to capture until the expiration of four weeks reckoned from the 12th of the present month. A despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin, in which was inclosed the Royal Ordinance of the 18th July last, which proclaimed the exemption of French merchant vessels from capture, and a copy of the Declaration of Paris of 1856 was also inclosed; and Lord Enfield was pleased to state that your Lordship would be glad to have my opinion generally with reference to the Declaration of Paris, upon the question of the renunciation and subsequent resumption by Prussia of her right to capture the merchant vessels of her enemy, and especially as to what answer should be returned to the Ambassador, and as to whether any notification founded upon his Excellency's present announcement should be inserted in the "London Gazette," and if so, what should be the nature of such a notification.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it would not be advisable, in my opinion, to insert in the Gazette any announcement on the part of your Lordship of the fact as communicated to your Lordship by Count Bernstorff, until a copy of the Decree, which I presume will be issued by the King of Prussia to suspend or revoke the Decree of the 18th July last, has been received from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin.

With regard to the Decree of the 18th July last, it does not, in my opinion, operate to bind the North German Government to refrain throughout the war from allowing its fleets to capture enemy's vessels. As long, indeed, as the Decree remains in force the Royal Navy of the Confederation would be bound to respect it, and the Prize Courts of the Confederation would be bound to refuse to give effect to any capture made in contravention of it, but upon its repeal the North German naval forces will, in my opinion, be at liberty to resume the exercise of the belligerent right of capture against enemy's vessels, precisely as if the Decree of 18th July last had never been issued. With regard to the operation of the altered resolution of the North German Government, as regards neutral commerce, it may, perhaps, deserve your Lordship's consideration whether, in acknowledging Count Bernstorff's communication and recognizing the desire of the North German Government to act equitably towards neutral merchants, as evinced by his announcement of its intention to suspend the execution of its altered resolution for four weeks, your Lordship should not call the attention of his Excellency to the case of enemy's vessels bringing neutral cargoes from Chinese or other distant ports, to which notice of the altered resolution of the North German Government cannot possibly be transmitted in time to prevent the shipment of such cargoes. Your Lordship may perhaps think it right to suggest to his Excellency that complete equity will not be done by the North German Government unless such vessels are allowed to carry forward their cargoes in all cases where they have been shipped by neutral merchants before the revocation of the Decree of the 18th July last; and your Lordship may remind his Excellency that the French Government, during the war of 1854, concurred with the English Government in allowing an extension of the term of grace to enemy's vessels bringing cargoes from the East Indian or other distant territories.

Temple, January 16, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 13th January instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that your Lordship would be glad to have our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified, under the circumstances detailed in the letter from a naturalized British subject named Barckhausen, inclosed in the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin, in making representations to the French Government respecting the condemnation by a French Prize Court of a cargo belonging to the firm of which Mr. Barckhausen is a representative, captured on board a German vessel bound from Rangoon to Europe.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That this is not a case in which your Lordship can properly interfere upon the present information furnished to your Lordship.

Mr. H. Barckhausen is described by Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin as a merchant of Bremen, who is co-partner in a firm at Rangoon with Mr. B. A. Dieckmann.

Mr. H. Barckhausen appears to have obtained letters of naturalization in India, which give him the privileges of a British subject within Her Majesty's Indian possessions, but not beyond those limits. He would, therefore, not be entitled to the character of a British subject in Europe, and he is probably enjoying the benefits of his native German character in the country of his birth. In fact, it would not be an unreasonable conjecture, from the description given of Mr. H. Barckhausen in the despatch of Her Majesty's Ambassador, that he is also carrying on the business of a merchant at Bremen.

We are not prepared to say that there may not be circumstances under which a natural-born alien, who has obtained letters of naturalization from the East Indian Government, and is resident within Her Majesty's East Indian possessions, would be entitled to claim the assistance of Her Majesty's Government for the recovery of his goods, if they had been captured by a belligerent cruizer on board of an enemy's vessel, as being the goods of a neutral merchant, but before saying so we should require to be satisfied that the claimant had divested himself entirely of his native character, especially if it should happen to be, as in this case, enemy character, and that the goods were not consigned to an enemy merchant, neither of which facts can be presumed from the information at present furnished to your Lordship.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Reeeived January 18.)

My Lord, Temple, January 18, 1871.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed to inform us that the North German Ambassador has recently called your Lordship's attention to the fact that, in September last, he made a representation to the effect that the blockade of the German Baltic ports was not carried on in a manner corresponding with the provisions of the Declaration of Paris of 1856, as the entry and departure of neutral merchant vessels was not effectively prevented by the belligerent forces of France stationed in the Baltic, and that his Excellency has observed that the North German Government hold that, if one of two belligerents should break any one of the conditions of the Declaration of Paris, that fact would release the other belligerent from the obligation to observe any of the conditions of that Declaration.

That the position thus assumed by the Ambassador appears to embrace two arguments: firstly, that stated above as to the effect upon the obligations of one belligerent which would be produced by a violation of similar obligations by his adversary; and, secondly, the assertion that the fact of a blockade having been instituted by a belligerent, which should in practice prove to be imperfect or ineffective, would constitute a violation by such belligerent of the fourth provision of the Declaration of Paris, even though that provision should be recognized as binding in the Prize Courts and by the Government of the belligerent, which should award damages to vessels captured for breach of blockade, and that your Lordship would be glad to be furnished with our opinion upon the two points thus raised by the Ambassador. For information, the note from his Excellency above alluded to, and a copy of the Declaration of Paris of 1867, was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the circumstances of the naval forces of France having neglected to establish a blockade of the North German ports in a manner which would make it binding on neutrals, in accordance with the conditions of the Declaration of Paris, does not, in our opinion, constitute any violation of that Declaration. It simply operates, in our opinion, to relieve the subjects of the neutral States, which are parties to that Declaration, from any obligation to respect the blockade, of which notice was given by the French authorities, whilst at the same time the omission of the French naval forces to make their blockade effective disables the French Prize Courts from enforcing any such blockade against neutral vessels which may be captured. The case, therefore, supposed by his Excellency of a breach of one of the conditions of the Declaration of Paris on the part of the French Government does not in our opinion arise; but assuming for the purpose of his Excellency's argument that one of the belligerents in the present war should break any one of the conditions of the Declaration of Paris, we are of opinion that such a fact would not operate to relieve the other belligerent from the obligation to observe any of the conditions of that Declaration. The observations of his Excellency on this point would imply that no obligations arise under the Declaration of Paris between the parties to it unless they are belligerents, and that the obligations of any such belligerents exclusively regard one another, whereas the object of the Declaration, as appears both from its preamble and the subject-matter of its articles, was obviously to define more precisely the mutual rights and duties of belligerents and neutrals, and to place on record an agreement between the parties to the Declaration, as to an uniform system of exercising the rights of belligerents in restraint of neutral commerce. It would, in our opinion, be contrary to reason to hold that because France had neglected to avail herself of the right to enforce a blockade of the North German ports by complying with the conditions of the Declaration, the North German Government had thereby acquired a right to enforce against neutrals a blockade of the French ports in utter disregard of the Declaration, but to such a conclusion the argument of his Excellency necessarily leads, if the North German Government is from the laches of France entitled to disregard any of the conditions of the Declaration.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 13th January instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter which had been received from the Treasury, inclosing a communication from the Commissioners of Customs, in which they inquire whether they would be justified in permitting the transhipment of cargoes from German into neutral bottoms at certain British ports under the following circumstances, viz.—

That it appears, that by an Order dated the 26th April, 1850, of which a copy is inclosed, the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury authorized the transhipment of cargoes from importing into exporting vessels on certain conditions, and, as the Commissioners of Customs state, at certain ports; that the Order was subsequently modified to the extent shown in the accompanying Memorandum and under the Order the Commissioners hold, that their permission is not required for the transhipment of cargoes in ports to which the regulations apply; but that their permission is necessary to authorize such transhipment in any other ports; that cases are now arising in which German vessels which have put into these latter ports and are unable to leave through fear of capture, are anxious to tranship their cargoes, in order that they may be secure of arriving safely at their destination; and the Commissioners inquire whether they would be justified in giving their permission.

Viscount Enfield was pleased to add that it was stated that the permission had already been granted in two cases in which the Commissioners satisfied themselves that the cargoes were the property of neutrals and not contraband of war, and obtained a Declaration to that effect, and that in 1864, during the war between Denmark and Germany, a similar course was adopted as regards a German vessel which put into Falmouth with a cargo for Altona, though it was not stated whether Falmouth is or is not one of the ports to which the Treasury Regulations apply.

Viscount Enfield was also pleased to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion; first, as to whether the Commissioners would be justified in giving permits at all for transhipment of cargoes from belligerent to neutral vessels; and secondly, whether such permits, if granted, should be confined to cases in which it should be satisfactorily ascertained that the cargoes are the property of neutrals and not contraband of war.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see not sufficient reason on grounds of international law why permission should not be given for the transhipment of all goods, except contraband of war, from German (or French) into neutral bottoms.

We would accept such goods as are clearly contraband, because although Her Majesty's Government does not undertake to prohibit contraband trade, on the other hand we think that it would be scarcely consistent with the Queen's Proclamation to afford any special facilities for carrying on that trade.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 17th instant, addressed to us and the Queen's Advocate, stating—

1. That he had the honour to inclose to us therewith a further note* from the North German Ambassador respecting the case of the "Frei," a German vessel, said to have been captured by the French man-of-war "Dessaix," in British waters off Dungeness; in which his Excellency reiterated his opinion that Her Majesty's Government should not leave that case to the decision of the French Prize Court, but should take steps by diplomatic means to secure the release of the vessel, and to obtain such other reparation as might be thought to be required; and Viscount Enfield was to inquire whether there was anything in the note which would alter or modify the opinion on the case expressed in our letter of the 29th November last, and also what answer we would suggest as a proper one to be returned to the Ambassador's representations.

2. That for our better information Viscount Enfield was to return to us our former opinion to which he had above alluded, and he was also to transmit to us all the papers on the subject which had been received both before and after the date of that opinion.*

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we, the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General, are not certain as to which of the Reports contained in the letter of the 29th November, 1870, Lord Enfield's question whether we are disposed to alter or modify the opinion expressed in that letter, refers; inasmuch as we recommended diplomatic intervention and submitted that only in that mode could the neutral rights of this country be asserted, whereas the Queen's Advocate was of a different opinion. We, the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General, retain the opinion we then expressed and which we had before expressed in our Report of the 21st November, on general principles, and it still seems to us that diplomatic intervention is proper in such a case as this. We are also inclined to think that the belligerent who suffers by the non-assertion of neutral rights has a fair claim at the least in international comity to call upon the neutral nation to assert them. We can only suggest that, in answer to the present despatch of Count Bernstorff, your Lordship should reply that you will direct Lord Lyons to call the attention of the French Government to the violation of the neutral rights of this country, which, on the assumption of the pilot's account being true, appears to be proved, with a view to requesting reparation. If, however, the French Government should dispute the truth of the pilot's account on reasonable grounds, different considerations will of course arise, and in that case we shall be glad if your Lordship will give us an opportunity of reconsidering this opinion.

---

* Count Bernstorff to Earl Granville.

[Translation.]

My Lord, Prussia House, January 13, 1871.

I have had the honour of receiving your Excellency's note of the 26th ultimo, wherein you informed me that, according to a telegram from Lord Lyons, the proceedings in the matter of the German ship "Frei," captured in British waters, would probably come on before the Prize Court at Bordeaux on the 28th of the same month, and in which you also mentioned to me an advocate at Bordeaux.

In expressing my best thanks to your Excellency for that communication, I cannot help returning once more to the legal question.

Now, there are Phillimore, Wheaton, and Ortolan, therefore an English, an American, and a French authority of the highest order, who are uniformly of opinion that the neutral State alone is entitled to contest the capture, on the ground that it took place within the marine jurisdiction of that State. Should this opinion also prevail with the French Prize Court, it is possible that the owner may be repelled with his objection, and that the ship may be condemned, even though the official deposition of the pilot, William Dennes, be not invalidated.

The Government of the King, my most gracious Master, is decidedly of opinion that Her Britannic Majesty's Government has a claim for satisfaction for the violation of English territory, and that that satisfaction must be first of all in the release of the ship. Such a claim, however, cannot be adjudged by the French Prize Court, neither is it to be prosecuted by legal process, but by way of diplomacy, if there has been no possibility of enforcing right on the spot, as was done, for example, by the Portuguese authorities, who forced a French man-of-war, which had captured a German merchantman in the waters of Terceira, to give up its prize. Now it certainly belongs to the Royal British Government alone to decide how far it will enforce its right for its own interests. In the present case, the Government of His Majesty the King considers it, however, to be its right that German ships in neutral territory should enjoy the full protection of the neutrality against every hostile attack. In this case that protection can only be of practical value if all the consequences of the disregard of English neutrality be made retrogressive. The fact of the violation itself is proved by the official evidence, at all events impartial, of the British pilot, and no doubt can be thrown upon its accuracy until it is invalidated by full proof to the contrary.

Your Excellency will agree with me that the principles of international law, which are just as much for the interests of neutrals as for those of the belligerent Powers, can only effectively bind the latter when they know that they are also supported by the neutrals in the practice of those rules which have been introduced for the interests of civilization. The French Government has repeatedly disregarded the principles of international law during this war, as, for example, in the non-effective blockade of the German ports. Nevertheless, the King's Government has, even to the present time, adhered to all the stipulations of the Paris Declaration of 1856. It will, however, be obliged to take into consideration whether by such regard for the neutral Powers it does not injure the interests of Germany, if it cannot reckon that the neutral Powers also will carefully watch over the maintenance of the principles acknowledged by them in common.

With, &c.

principles your Lordship would be justified in intervening diplomatically in this case, inasmuch as, according to the practice of this country in analogous cases of disputed prize, diplomatic intervention on the part of a neutral Government would not be admitted by Her Majesty's Government. But since the occasion of my last Report on this subject to your Lordship, I have had an opportunity of examining with some care various decisions of the Conseil des Prises, where claims of neutral territory have been made, and I have found several precedents which show that, although the captured parties themselves in each case made the claim of territory in accordance with the present practice in the French Prize Court, diplomatic representations were also made to the French Minister of Foreign Affairs by the Ambassadors of the neutral Powers, whose territory was alleged to have been violated by the captors, not, indeed, in the sense of claiming the restitution of the prize before the claim had been heard in the Prize Court, but in order to secure that due attention on the part of the Prize Court should be given to the claim of territory. On the authority of these cases, I think your Lordship may, without risk of establishing any inconvenient precedent against this country, intervene diplomatically in the present case so far as to authorize Lord Lyons to make a representation to the Delegate Government at Bordeaux, founded on the statement of the British pilot, and reserving the rights of Her Majesty's Government, as its advocate cannot be heard before the French Prize Court.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received January 25.)

My Lord, Temple, January 23, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 12th ultimo, on the subject of the claim of Mr. Renner, a British subject domiciled at Altona, to have his sons, who were born in that city, exempted from conscription, he was directed to transmit to me, together with the previous papers, the accompanying Memorandum containing some observations in reference to this case, and to request that I would inform your Lordship whether the views expressed in this Memorandum in any way alter my opinion as already set forth in my Report of the 12th December.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, I have the honour to report—

That the question whether your Lordship may properly ask the German Government to act in this particular case upon the German law of nationality must depend, in my opinion, upon the answer to the preliminary question, whether the German law of nationality has been promulgated at Altona. If the German law, by virtue of any Decree or otherwise, has superseded the Danish law of nationality, under which Mr. Renner took up his residence at Altona, and has acquired an international domicile there, and has had children born to him there who partake of that domicile, then I think your Lordship might, with reason, ask the German Government to apply the German law to the question of military service, and that it would be equitable, if the children of Mr. Renner have lost the benefits of their native status under the Danish law, that they should be exempt from any burdens which may attach to that status under new Ordinances. But if I do not misapprehend the purport of the reply of the Schleswig-Holstein authorities, it proceeds upon the assumption that the Ordinance of Christianborg of the 15th January, 1776, is still in force at Altona, and that the children of Mr. Renner, in virtue of their status under that Ordinance, are subject to military service according to the instructions for the Military Reserve of the 28th March, 1868. I am unable, therefore, after carefully considering the views expressed in the Memorandum of the 13th December, 1871, to advise your Lordship that you can properly ask the Government of Berlin to apply the principles of German law, as regards nationality, to the case of Mr. Renner's children.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received January 31.)

My Lord, Temple, January 31, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 30th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Admiralty, inclosing correspondence respecting the capture of the French merchant-vessel "St. Marc," by the German man-of-war "Augusta," and the circumstances attending her arrival at and departure from Plymouth with a prize crew on board, short of provisions and sails; and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with any observations which I might have to make on the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may, in my opinion, properly approve the proceedings of the Naval authorities at Plymouth in this matter.

My Lord, Temple, February 6, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, with reference to my letter of the 14th ultimo, in which I stated that it would not, in my opinion, be advisable to notify in the "London Gazette" the revocation by Prussia of her determination, signified in a Decree of the 18th July last, not to capture French merchant-vessels not carrying contraband of war, until the terms of the fresh Decree containing the notification should be in the possession of Her Majesty's Government; he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin, inclosing copy and translation of an Imperial Edict dated the 19th ultimo, by which the Decree of the 18th July is revoked from the 10th instant; and he was to request that I would furnish your Lordship, at my earliest convenience, with my opinion as to the form in which Her Majesty's Government should give publicity to this Edict. The former papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I have prepared a form of notification, which I beg to inclose to your Lordship, and which I think Her Majesty's Government may properly direct to be inserted in the "London Gazette," for the purpose of giving publicity to the Imperial Order of the 19th ultimo.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received February 13.)

My Lord, Temple, February 11, 1871.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, upon the receipt of our Report of the 16th ultimo, Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin was instructed to inform Mr. Barckhausen that, as his certificate of naturalization as a British subject had been granted to him in India, and was limited to India, and as there was nothing to show that he was not now resident in Germany, Her Majesty's Government could not interfere in respect to the cargo belonging to his firm at Rangoon, which had been captured on board a German vessel, and condemned by a French Prize Court.

That the Ambassador having made a communication to Mr. Barckhausen in the sense of his instructions, that gentleman has replied in a letter, which accompanies the inclosed despatch, that he is not resident in Germany, though he does not state equally positively whether he has renounced his German nationality, and claims that his Indian certificate, being granted to him in the character of a merchant, gives him equal rights with a native-born British merchant resident in India and trading to any part of the world. Lord Enfield was pleased to request that we would consider this letter, and inform your Lordship whether the facts and arguments adduced in it would in any way alter our previous opinion. The former papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it does not appear from Mr. Barckhausen's further letter that he has been divested of his native German character, either by forfeiture upon naturalization in a foreign country, or by authorization from the Government of his native country. There may be grounds, indeed, in his case, independent of any question of his naturalization, why his goods on board the captured vessel should have been held by the Prize Court at Saigon to be neutral property, namely, that his commercial domicile is Anglo-Indian; but all the facts upon which he relies for exempting his goods from condemnation should have been alleged in the Prize Court of the captors; and if the Prize Court at Saigon had improperly rejected his claim, he should have appealed to the Conseil des Prises.

Unless he has properly submitted his claim in the first instance to the Prize Court, and it has been improperly overruled, we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in intervening diplomatically on his behalf, independently of the question of his probably owing a double allegiance, of which the French Courts would be entitled to take cognizance, and refuse to restore his property. We may further observe that, as the consignees in the case appear to have been German merchants, the Prize Court might fairly act on the presumption, unless clearly rebutted, that the goods were enemies' goods, as we presume that the cargo was not shipped during peace.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received February 17.)

My Lord, Temple, February 16, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying papers relative to the destruction by the Prussian troops of the house and property of a British subject named Smith at the village of St. Ouen, near Rouen; and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in claiming in this case pecuniary compensation for the sufferer from the Prussian Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Her Majesty's Government would not be entitled of strict right to claim compensation from the Prussian Government for the destruction of the house and property of Mr. Lawrence Smith. It would seem, that although Mr. Lawrence Smith is an English subject, he has become the proprietor of a house and farm at St. Ouen, and has established his wife and family there.

Under such circumstances, I am of opinion that he has so incorporated himself into the territory of France as to render it unavoidable, that his family and property should be exposed, like those of native citizens of France resident in the same district, to the evils incident to a state of war. At the same time, as the case is at present represented, the destruction of Mr. Lawrence Smith's property would appear to have been an act of wanton violence on the part of the Prussian troops resulting from lax discipline, and not provoked by any misconduct on the part of the occupants of the house or farm. It would on this assumption be distinguishable from cases where the destruction of property has been an inevitable incident of war, and I think your Lordship may on this view of the case properly instruct Lord Lyons to bring the facts as represented under the notice of the Prussian Government, and to express a hope that they will think it fit to direct an inquiry to be made by the military authorities, and if the statement of Mr. Lawrence Smith should prove to be truthful, the justice of that Government will induce it to award compensation for the injury wantonly inflicted on him and his family.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received February 21.)

My Lord, Temple, February 21, 1871.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 17th instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 10th and 22nd November and 30th December last, he was directed to transmit to us herewith the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin and from Mr. Odo Russell bearing upon the case of Mr. Worth; the further papers were also inclosed; and Lord Enfield was pleased to request that we would furnish your Lordship with any observations we might have to make with respect to this case at its present stage.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That although it is not clear upon what precise charges Mr. Worth was tried before the court-martial, we think your Lordship is entitled to presume, from the despatch of Count von Bismarck of 3rd December, 1870, to his Excellency Herr von Thile, that there were two substantive grounds of suspicion against Mr. Worth which were to be investigated by the court-martial: first, that he was an accomplice in transporting over the German military lines a correspondence punishable by military law; secondly, that he was in the secret service of the enemy, and intended to use the knowledge which he had acquired of the German positions for the advantage of the enemy. Upon the more complete information which we now have of the circumstances under which Mr. Worth was captured, we consider that the German military authorities were justified in instituting a searching investigation on both these heads, and we see no grounds at present for advising your Lordship that the court-martial has in any way abused its powers in interrogating Mr. Worth. If it should be necessary hereafter for your Lordship to consider the use which may have been made before the court-martial of Mr. Worth's intercepted letter referred to in Mr. Harris-Gastrell's confidential correspondence with Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin, which, to say the very least, was calculated most seriously to compromise Mr. Worth in the judgment of the belligerent Power against whom the arms which he ordered were to be employed, we should be disposed, as at present informed, to advise your Lordship that the use made of it, as raising a presumption of unneutral animus on the part of Mr. Worth, and calling for explanation on his part, was perfectly legitimate.

Temple, March 23, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Mr. Kirkman Hodgson, M.P., inclosing a Memorial praying Her Majesty's Government to interfere to procure from the North German Government compensation for the loss of the British vessel "Gloucestershire," off the River Weser, in consequence, as is alleged, of her not having been able to procure a pilot, and having received wrong directions as to the course which she should shape from a German gun-boat; and to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether there are any grounds in this case for the interference of Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That if any constraint had been placed upon the master of the "Gloucestershire" by the captain of the Prussian gun-boat to pursue the course which led the "Gloucestershire" on to the Jahde Flats, there might have been equitable grounds for the owners of the "Gloucestershire" asking the North German Government to grant them some compensation; but as the master of the "Gloucestershire" was a free agent, and acted upon his own responsibility in shaping the course of his vessel after he had been advised, as he says, to steer for the pilot-boats, I am of opinion that he has no case against the North German Government, and that your Lordship would not be warranted in interfering to procure him compensation from that Government.

The previous papers were also inclosed, and Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would inform your Lordship whether I consider that Her Majesty's Government would be justified in placing such a claim before the German Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying papers respecting an application for advice which has been made to Her Majesty's Embassy at Berlin by a M. Debrunner, who claims to be a British subject.

That M. Debrunner rests his claim on the fact that he has been naturalized in India, and he appears further to state that he has renounced his original nationality as a citizen of Switzerland.

That your Lordship would be glad to be furnished with my opinion as to whether, under these circumstances, his claim to be considered a British subject, and as such to apply to the British Embassy at Berlin for advice and assistance in consequence of his imprisonment at Wiesbaden, can be held to be valid.

That if I should consider that he is entitled to British protection, your Lordship would wish to be further furnished with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the questions contained in M. Debrunner's letter to Lord Augustus Loftus inclosed in M. Petre's despatch No. 23 of the 24th ultimo.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That M. Debrunner should be informed that he is not entitled to the privileges of a British subject elsewhere than within Her Majesty's Indian Possessions, and that he is accordingly not entitled to claim the protection of Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin against an arrest for debt at Wiesbaden. The fact of M. Debrunner having, as he states by letter, renounced his Swiss nationality, is immaterial.

Temple, June 27, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 20th instant, stating that among the Bills submitted to the Reichstag by the German Government during the recent Session respecting the mode in which the war indemnity to be received by Germany from France should be apportioned was one which has been approved and passed, decreeing that a certain portion of the indemnity should be devoted to compensating the inhabitants of Alsace and Lorraine for war requisitions and for losses of property sustained by them during the war, he was directed to transmit to us a translation of this Bill as it was originally submitted and of the exposé des motifs by which it was accompanied. An extract from a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Berlin, reporting the nature of an amendment which was introduced into it in its passage through the Reichstag, was also inclosed. Lord Enfield was to direct our attention specially to the 4th paragraph of the 1st Article of the Bill as it stands in its amended form. That this paragraph deals with the question of foreigners resident in the provinces, and provides that while as regards war requisitions or losses of real property they shall be placed on the same footing as natives, they shall only receive compensation for losses of personal property, provided that the Government of the country to which they belong undertakes to ensure reciprocity to Germans under similar circumstances. Lord Enfield was pleased to request that we would be good enough to furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to whether this latter provision is in accordance with international law, and as to whether Her Majesty's Government, if called upon to give the required promise of reciprocity in order to enable a British subject to receive compensation, would be justified in complying with the request.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we understand that compensation in respect to personal property, as well as real, will be granted to all persons domiciled in the annexed territory irrespectively of their nationality by birth. This being so, we do not think that Her Majesty's Government could of right require that compensation in respect to personalty should be given to British subjects not domiciled in such territory, and that the German Government is entitled by international law to refuse such compensation either absolutely, or without an undertaking on our part of reciprocity to Germans under similar circumstances. In considering whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in giving such an undertaking, it is necessary in the first place to determine what is meant by such reciprocity. If it means that we are to undertake that in any territory which we may hereafter conquer we are to restore to all Germans non-domiciled therein all personal property which they have lost in the war, the undertaking would be much wider than that of the German Government which applies not to all the territory which they have conquered, but to that only which they have annexed. A reciprocal obligation, therefore, on the part of Her Majesty's Government, would be to restore personal property to non-domiciled Prussians in any territory which we might conquer and annex. It certainly seems improbable that we should ever be called upon to preform such an undertaking, yet, inasmuch as its performance would almost certainly involve a vote of money by Parliament, it would not appear to us safe for Her Majesty's Government to enter into such an undertaking without the sanction of an Act of Parliament. Whether the benefit to be gained is sufficient to require or justify the passing of an Act is a question for the consideration of Her Majesty's Government.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received July 20.)

Temple, July 19, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed to inform us, with reference to our letter of the 27th ultimo, that further despatches have been received from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Berlin inclosing the original text of the Law respecting compensation to residents in the provinces recently annexed to Germany, and a Proclamation explanatory of the law which has been issued by the Prefect of the Lower Rhine.

That it is clear from these papers that it is not intended under the provisions of the law to give compensation for personal property to foreigners not domiciled in the provinces on the 23rd July last, and that the condition of reciprocity on the part of the Government of the foreigner will be required in cases of application for compensation from foreigners, in addition to the condition of domicile required from natives. That the case, then, as it appears by the light of these papers, is this—that a British subject who, on the 23rd June last, declared his intention of making his domicile in Alsace or Lorraine, cannot receive compensation for loss of personal property during the war unless Her Majesty's Government are prepared to promise reciprocity to German subjects under similar circumstances.

That the opinion which we gave in our former letter was given under the impression that the provision as regards reciprocity was directed against non-resident foreigners, and that your Lordship would therefore be glad to be furnished with our opinion as to what answer should be returned to a British subject domiciled in one of the annexed provinces who should apply to Her Majesty's Government to give the promise of reciprocity which would entitle him to receive compensation.

For convenience of reference our previous Report was inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the obligation of reciprocity which the German Government determines to impose upon foreign Governments before compensating subjects of those Governments domiciled or declaring their election to be domiciled in the annexed provinces is an obligation which in this country could not be assumed by the Government without the sanction of Parliament as involving the payment of money, and it is for Her Majesty's Government to determine how far it is desirable to come to Parliament with a Bill for such an object.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence,* containing particulars respecting the expulsion of a Mr. Cohen from Odessa, and he was to request that we would take this case into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the case into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it appears that Mr. Cohen having taken up his abode in America, renounced his British nationality, and became a naturalized American citizen, was deported from Odessa, with the full concurrence, if not at the request, of the American Consul there, and prohibited to return.

---

* Mr. Cohen, June 15; Mr. Abbott, Nos. 29 and 31; to Sir A. Buchanan, No. 102; Sir A. Buchanan, Nos. 147, 150, and 158.

1871

We infer that in order to enable him to return in spite of this prohibition he made a declaration under section 6 of the Naturalization Act, 1870, and obtained a Foreign Office passport. We suggest that some inquiry should be made on this subject.

It is obvious that Her Majesty's Government have nothing to do with his first deportation, and that his remedy with respect to it, if he has really suffered any grievance, is by a representation to the Government of the United States.

With respect to his second deportation, undoubtedly Her Majesty's Government would be justified if they thought fit in complaining of treatment of a British subject which, if unexplained, would appear to be a breach of international comity, if not of international law; nevertheless, considering that the second appearance of Mr. Cohen in Odessa was in direct violation of a previous prohibition, which the Russian Government had in strictness a right to make, and which, for all we know, may have been justified by the conduct and character of Mr. Cohen; considering also, what appears tolerably evident, that Mr. Cohen's assumption of English nationality was but colourable in order to enable him to evade the prohibition, we do not think that Her Majesty's Government are called upon to interfere in his behalf. At the same time, we think that they are entitled to require, if they deem it advisable, some clearer statement than has been yet given of the grounds of Mr. Cohen's second deportation.

Buchanan into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the further despatches into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we do not think your Lordship can properly question the proceedings of the police authorities at Odessa on the occasion of Mr. Cohen's first visit to that port under the protection of an United States' passport, and as it appears clear that Mr. Cohen's object in conforming to certain loose provisions in the recent Statute of Naturalization was to obtain the protection of a British passport for the express purpose of violating the law of Russia, which he knowingly attempted to do, we are of opinion that your Lordship cannot properly object to the police authorities at Odessa restraining Mr. Cohen's conduct in this matter, notwithstanding he was the bearer of a British passport, and compelling him to leave the Russian territory a second time, there being an express declaration in the Treaty of Commerce (of the 12th January, 1859) that British subjects are not exempted from the Russian regulations of police generally applicable to all foreigners.

Shaen and Roscoe.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it does not appear from any of the papers before us on what grounds Mr. Scott received a pardon from the Crown. We are unable, therefore, to form any opinion whether Messrs. Shaen and Roscoe are correct in saying "that a grievous miscarriage of justice in his case has been admitted by Her Majesty's Government by the free pardon which Mr. Scott has received." But we do find it stated by Mr. Alabaster in his letter to Mr. Hammond of the 3rd February, 1870, that he had found "Mr. Scott's books to be false and fraudulent, that their character increased his difficulties in dealing with the estate, and that it might be necessary that they should remain in safe custody."

Under these circumstances, as Mr. Scott's books have been forfeited to the Crown, we are of opinion that it will be for the public interest that they should not be given up to him. We may add that Mr. Knox at an early period of the inquiry, in his letter of the 14th February, 1867, to Lord Stanley, stated that the convict had destroyed the most important of his books.

Temple, January 7, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Otway's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a correspondence relative to a claim preferred by Messrs. Wright and Co. against the Spanish Government, on account of certain fines which have been illegally and vexatiously levied on their vessel, the "Evening Star," by the custom-house officials at Havana, and to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to how far Her Majesty's Government would be justified in pressing upon the Spanish Government Messrs. Wright's claim for demurrage, and for other expenses arising out of the proceedings in question.

1871

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may in my opinion, if your Lordship thinks fit, hold the Spanish Government bound by the despatch of Señor Sagasta of the 20th June, 1870, in which he states that the administrative agent of the customs in Cuba exceeded his lawful powers in exacting the fine for the non-presentation of a third copy of the ship's manifest, and that he must therefore make good the damages and losses which the parties interested may claim. It must, however, be observed that the decree of the Regent, according to the statement of the agent of Messrs. Wright and Co. at St. Jago de Cuba in his letter of the 16th November, 1870, does not proceed upon the view of the case adopted in Señor Sagasta's despatch, as the decree is represented to be in the nature of a condonation or remission of the fine, "thereby of course precluding any claim for demurrage."

It would appear from this statement, that the Regent has held the fine to have been lawfully imposed, but that under the circumstances of the case it would be equitable to remit it. I am not prepared to advise your Lordship that the view of the case adopted by the Regent is untenable, as Mr. Consul Dunlop states, that there is a standing regulation in the island, which requires the masters of foreign vessels to make out and deliver a third copy of the ship's manifest, although such regulation is in his opinion obsolete, and has been superseded by other regulations since enacted. Assuming the existence of such a regulation, however harsh it might be for the Administrative agent at Cuba to put it in force in the case of the "Evening Star" without previous notice to the master or owners through the Spanish Vice-Consul at Leith, I cannot advise your Lordship that such an enforcement of the regulation would properly be matter for damages, even if the fine were subsequently directed to be remitted on appeal to the superior authorities.

Upon the facts of the case, therefore, I am of opinion that the Spanish Government would have a good answer to make to any application for the payment of demurrage and other expenses to the owners of the "Evening Star," and that your Lordship could not of right insist upon such payment unless your Lordship should hold the Spanish Government to be precluded diplomatically from objecting to such payment by the despatch of Señor Sagasta.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received January 23.)

My Lord,
Temple, January 21, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence relative to the employment of the steam-ship "Hercules" and other vessels registered at Gibraltar in towing out from that port vessels engaged in the contraband trade with Spain, and to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to any further steps that may be taken to put a stop to such proceedings.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the charges brought against the "Hercules" and other steamers registered at Gibraltar by the Spanish Government are far too vague to call for any action on the part of your Lordship, and even if it could be established that the "Hercules" is in the habit of towing out of the Port of Gibraltar merchant-vessels, which subsequently land contraband goods in Spain, there would be no legal offence in the owners of the steamers allowing her to be so employed, unless the trade in which the merchant-vessels may be engaged is in contravention of British law.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received March 20.)

My Lord,
Temple, March 17, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 15th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 20th December last on the subject of the detention of the vessel "Britannia" of Nassau by the Spanish authorities, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General at Havana, inclosing the explanations of the Marquis de San Rafael with regard to the grounds upon which the Prize Committee decreed the release of the "Britannia" and her crew without damages; and to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon. The previous papers relating to this case were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears from the despatch of the Spanish Admiral that the Prize Committee at Havana has held that the detention of the "Britannia" was justifiable on account of her papers being informal, but what was the nature of the informality is not stated by the Spanish Admiral, nor does Mr. Consul Dunlop furnish your Lordship with any information as to the state of the papers of the sloop. On the other hand, as Mr. Consul Dunlop does not suggest that the Prize Committee was in error in declaring the ship's papers to be informal, I must assume that the finding of the Prize Committee as to their informality was correct, and on that assumption I cannot advise your Lordship that the master and crew have any claim for compensation from the Spanish Government for their detention. They may indeed have been treated by their captors with unnecessary harshness, but the disturbed state of the Island of Cuba offers some excuse for it; and it cannot be impressed too strongly on the masters of these small vessels that if they go to sea without proper papers, or without a proper flag, the Spanish authorities will have a right to detain them if they are found by them in Spanish waters.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received March 21.)

My Lord,
Temple, March 20, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence respecting the seizure of the British vessel "John Gray" off the coast of Cuba by a Spanish gun-boat, and to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and inform your Lordship whether the additional information contained therein is such as to lead me to modify or alter my opinion of the case, as expressed in my Report of the 11th November last. The previous papers were also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it is to be regretted that your Lordship was not furnished in the first instance with the information now supplied in the papers from the British Vice-Consul at St. Jago de Cuba, inclosed in the Colonial Office letter of the 28th February last, from which it appears that the "John Gray" was furnished with a register, crew list, wrecking licence, and a letter from her owner, all of which were before the Havana Prize Court, and upon the vessel's release were delivered up by the Court to Her Majesty's Vice-Consul. The only defect, therefore, in her papers which could well be alleged against her was that she had no clearance for a Cuban port, but this could be satisfactorily explained by her having on board a wrecking licence, indicating her occupation to be such as would not require her to clear for any port. Under these circumstances, I am of opinion that the state of the "John Gray's" papers were such that their inspection ought at once to have satisfied the Spanish authorities of the good faith of the master and crew of the vessel, and that there were no reasonable grounds for imprisoning them and for detaining them for so many months to await a formal examination before a Prize Committee. As the vessel, however, had no national flag, and was in Spanish waters when sighted by the Spanish gun-boat, and endeavoured to avoid her, there may have been primâ facie grounds for detaining and sending her into a Cuban port to have her papers examined. I cannot, therefore, advise your Lordship that the "John Gray" was wrongfully detained by the Spanish cruizer in the first instance, but I think she was detained for an unreasonable length of time in the port of Baracoa, and if it could be established, which, however, seems only to have been assumed by the master and crew, that she had become wormeaten and unseaworthy from lying in the Harbour of Baracoa for so many months, the owner of the vessel would have an equitable claim upon the Spanish Government for compensation on account of the loss of his vessel.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received April 6.)

Temple, April 4, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed to acquaint us that the Spanish Minister at this Court having informed your Lordship that he was authorized to pay to Her Majesty's Government the sum of 1,500*l.* for distribution among the crew of the "Tornado," he has been requested to forward it to the Foreign Office.* A copy of a letter addressed by your Lordship's directions to the Board of Trade requesting their assistance for the distribution of the money was also inclosed.† Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose the letters,‡ which have been received from and on behalf of several of those parties, that the mate, Wyatt, also made a personal application a few days ago at the Office.

That Mr. Forbes Campbell has also claimed that the money, or at all events the larger portion of it, should be paid to him in virtue of a full power, which he holds from the parties claiming to share in the compensation awarded by the Spanish Government, of whom he has given a list, and that he refers to two letters§ from the Foreign Office of the 23rd December, 1869, and of the 28th January, 1870, as recognizing him as the representative of the parties, and, therefore, entitled to receive the money. That we should find these letters at pp. 33 and 36 of the accompanying papers.‖ Mr. Hammond was further pleased to inclose a letter from Mr. Forbes Campbell of the 4th July, 1870, inclosing a copy of his full power, and to request that we would advise your Lordship at our earliest convenience as to the course which it would be proper to pursue to ensure the distribution of the money to the parties entitled to receive it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the first question to be considered appears to be, whether Her Majesty's Government ought to recognize, or would be justified in recognizing, the alleged powers of attorney given to Mr. Forbes Campbell by the officers and crew. Mr. Campbell, writing on the 4th July, 1870, and requesting payment to him of the whole of the compensation money, says—"I inclose a copy of the full powers which I hold from the master, officers, and crew of the 'Tornado,'" and he incloses a copy of a power of attorney dated the 9th April, 1867, with these words at the bottom, "here follow the signatures:" the natural interpretation of this would be that all the officers and crew had signed that document. It now appears by Mr. F. Campbell's own showing that this was not so; it is certain that all did not sign that document, and uncertain how many did. For Mr. Campbell on the 3rd of this month incloses a list of signatures with the following heading—"List of members of 'Tornado' crew who have executed irrevocable powers of attorney in favour of Dugald Forbes Campbell, dated the 9th April, 1870, and the 20th July, 1867." Now for the first time Mr. F. Campbell mentions another power of attorney, the 20th July, 1867, to which he made no reference in his letter of the 4th July, 1870.

It appears that thirty-eight out of fifty-five of the crew executed one or other of these documents; but how many executed the first, how many the second, does not appear. Further, he describes both the powers of attorney as irrevocable; that of the 9th April, 1867, is certainly not irrevocable: what the nature of the second may be it is impossible to pronounce without seeing it, and we think it probable that Mr. Campbell must have had some motive for omitting to mention it before. We observe that Mr. McPherson in his letter to Mr. Grieve of the 30th March, 1870, speaks "of a condition of the power that if Mr. Campbell recovered compensation he was to receive one-third of the party's share." No such condition appears in the powers of the 9th April, 1867, of which alone Mr. F. Campbell has furnished a copy. Before proceeding further, we suggest that Mr. F. Campbell should be requested to furnish a precise copy of the signatures appended to the document of the 9th April, 1867, and further, a copy of what he calls the irrevocable power of attorney of the 20th July, 1867, together with the signatures appended to it. Until he furnishes this information we cannot advise with confidence whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in paying to him any portion or what portion of the money. We observe that a Mr. Samuel sends an order apparently in the handwriting of the captain for payment of his share to Mr. Samuel, which seems inconsistent with his execution of the powers of attorney, as alleged by Mr. Forbes Campbell. We suggest that Captain Collier, if his address be known, be communicated with and asked for an explanation of his executing two documents apparently inconsistent with each other, and what he knows, if anything, about the powers of attorney to Mr. F. Campbell.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received April 6.)

Temple, April 5, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that with reference to that part of my Report of the 11th November last, which refers to the treatment of the crew of the British vessel "John Gray" by the Spanish authorities at Baracoa, he was directed to transmit to me, together with the former papers in this case, a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General at Havana, inclosing a copy with translation of the explanation of the Spanish Admiral, in which that officer denies that the crew of the "John Gray" were subjected to ill-treatment during the period of their detention in Cuba; and to request that I would take this despatch into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the evidence on which the Marquis de Rafael relies in his letter of the 2nd March, 1871, addressed to Her Majesty's Consul-General at Havana, supplies, I think, a sufficient answer to the inquiry, which Her Majesty's Consul-General was instructed in your Lordship's letter of the 21st November, 1870, to address to his Excellency.

Your Lordship's letter, however, was, I presume, founded on my Report of the 11th November, 1870, which was drawn up in answer to a letter from Mr. Hammond of the 4th November, 1870, and your Lordship will preceive that my attention was drawn by the terms of Mr. Hammond's letter to the ill-treatment, which the crew had received at the hands of the Port authorities at Basacoa (Baracoa) to which my Report was confined. I ought, however, to have discovered on reading the protest of the master and crew of the "John Gray," then for the first time inclosed to me, that their more serious complaint referred to the ill-treatment, which they received at Santiago de Cuba, after they had been transferred to that city from Baracoa, as to which no instructions were given to Mr. Dunlop to make inquiry, and respecting which his Excellency has offered no explanation, probably on the grounds that the inquiries of Her Majesty's Consul-General were limited to Baracoa. Your Lordship will be best able to determine, whether it will be proper to instruct Her Majesty's Consul-General to make a further application to his Excellency on the subject of the crew being bound with cords, and imprisoned in the common jail at Santiago de Cuba. As far as I am able to form an opinion, I think the complaint of the crew as to the cords is frivolous. The men were in fact handcuffed two and two, as they marched through the streets. The complaint, however, as to the imprisonment, is primâ facie more weighty, as they appear to have been confined with common criminals, but this again may admit of explanation.

The point, however, on which the master and crew appear to have just grounds of complaints, is the great length to which the proceedings against the vessel were spun out, their imprisonment being maintained during the whole time of the inquiry, whilst the object of the inquiry itself was simply to verify the master's explanation why he had no British Ensign on board and no clearance for a Cuban port. But as regards this part of the case, the master and crew have in my opinion only an equitable claim against the Spanish Government on the grounds of their long detention being attributable, as far as at present appears, to the want of due and reasonable diligence on the part of the local authorities in bringing the inquiry to an end, the result of the inquiry being entirely favourable to their innocence.

Temple, April 29, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that with reference to our Report of the 4th ultimo, requesting to be furnished with further documents and evidence from Mr. Forbes Campbell with respect to that gentleman's wish that the indemnity granted by the Spanish Government in the case of the "Tornado" may be made over to him for distribution to the officers and crew of that vessel, he was directed by your Lordship to forward to us a copy of the signatures appended to the power of attorney given to Mr. F. Campbell on the 9th April, 1867, a copy of the power of attorney of the 20th July of the same year, inclosed in a letter from Messrs. Vallance and Vallance of the 14th ultimo, also a further letter from that firm requesting that Mr. G. Ryan's name be added to the list of Mr. F. Campbell's clients, as well as a further letter from Mr. Samuel respecting the share due to Captain Collier. Two further letters from the Board of Trade, in which that Board express their willingness to undertake the distribution of the money in question, and at the same time stating that they have already expended the sum of 400*l.* on account of the crew of the "Tornado," and suggesting either that application should be made to the Spanish Government for payment of this sum, or that the amount be deducted from the 1,500*l.* already granted by them, were also inclosed. That your Lordship conceives that it would be impossible to adopt either of these suggestions, inasmuch as the indemnity received was granted for a specific purpose, and Her Majesty's Government have moreover pledged themselves that the payment of the 1,500*l.* should completely put an end to any further reclamation on their part. That the second letter from the Board of Trade announces the death of Captain Collier, late master of the "Tornado," and of the second mate, Robert Napier. That in taking these various papers into our consideration, Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that, in addition to any general questions arising out of the disposal of the 1,500*l.* in question, we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the propriety of allowing the representatives of those who have died to share in the distribution of the indemnity.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the conduct of Mr. Forbes Campbell throughout these transactions has by no means been such as to create implicit confidence in him. The power of attorney of July 1867 is signed by McPherson alone, and the other powers appear to have been given under states of circumstances very different from that which now exists. It would we think be desirable that the Board of Trade should pay over these moneys to the persons entitled to them, or else obtain their sanction to paying them over to Mr. Forbes Campbell. Payment to Mr. Forbes Campbell would hardly in this state of facts be made by a private person, and there is no reason for applying a rule more favourable to him because the payment is to be made by the Government. We agree with your Lordship, both that the Board of Trade ought not to make the proposed reduction, and that further claims cannot now be made by Her Majesty's Government on the Government of Spain. The representatives of those persons who have died ought clearly to share with the survivors in the distribution of the 1,500*l.*

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 29th ultimo, on the subject of the distribution of the 1,500*l.* granted by the Spanish Government to the officers and crew of the "Tornado," he was directed to transmit to us the inclosed further letter from Mr. Forbes Campbell, protesting against the distribution of this sum by the Board of Trade, and to request that we would take this letter into our consideration and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Forbes Campbell. Copies of letters which have been addressed to the Board of Trade and to Mr. Forbes Campbell and other parties since the receipt of our Report of the 29th ultimo were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That for reasons which we gave before, and to which we could add others, we do not advise that any portion of the money be paid to Mr. Forbes Campbell, and we suggest that it would be enough to inform him that the Board of Trade are authorized to pay it to the survivors of the crew and the representatives of those who are dead.

Temple, May 27, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 17th instant, and to previous Reports with regard to the distribution of the money placed at the disposal of Her Majesty's Government for the officers and crew of the "Tornado," he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying two letters from the Board of Trade, the one inclosing a letter from Messrs. Vallance, protesting, on behalf of Mr. Forbes Campbell, against the course pursued by Her Majesty's Government in regard to this matter; the second, submitting a Memorandum prepared by the Board of Trade, containing the views of that Department with respect to the mode of allotting the sum in question. Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take these letters into our consideration and furnish your Lordship with our opinion as to the answers which should be returned to them.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we do not think it necessary to do more than to acknowledge the receipt of Messrs. Vallance's letter. We are of opinion that no reliance can be placed on any assertion of Mr. Forbes Campbell, and that no contract of any kind has been made by Her Majesty's Government either with him or with the officers or crew of the "Tornado." The 1,500*l.* has been placed at the disposal of Her Majesty's Government for distribution among "the sufferers." It is for Her Majesty's Government to determine who are "the sufferers," and in what manner the money may most properly be distributed among them. Mr. Forbes Campbell has no claim whatever to insist on a distribution pro ratâ, or on any other mode of distribution; his object obviously is to obtain possession of the whole, or as much as possible, of the money. Although we think that the principle of distribution pro ratâ might fairly have been adopted, we also think that the Board of Trade are by no means bound to adopt it, and have a perfect right to distribute the sum by equal shares, if they think fit, and that they may refuse to give any portion of it to the representatives of the master or McPherson, if they think that the master and McPherson were not "sufferers" in the proper sense of the term. We may add that we concur generally in the Memorandum of the Board of Trade.

Temple, June 19, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me some further papers having reference to the case of the "Eliza Walker," which do not induce me to vary in any way the Report which I have already drawn up, and others containing a Memorial of the South Shields Chamber of Commerce addressed to your Lordship, of the date of the 15th June, and to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That with regard to the prayer of the Chamber of Commerce of South Shields, that your Lordship would direct Her Majesty's Ambassador at Madrid to use every possible exertion to induce the Spanish authorities to modify their quarantine regulations, I venture to call your Lordship's attention to the fact that Spain did, I believe, send a delegate to an international conference held in Paris, the sittings of which (forty-eight in number) were prolonged from 23rd July, 1851, to 19th January, 1852. A Compte-Rendu of the deliberations of the Conference was, I believe, published at the Imperial Press in Paris, but I have not been able to procure it. A project of an International Sanitary Convention was also, on that occasion, prepared by the conference, and was, in fact, as I understand, ratified between France and Sardinia.

I have not been able to procure a copy of this Convention, but it may be useful to refer to as a precedent, and the Compte-Rendu of the deliberations of the conference will serve to show to what extent, if at all, Spain was disposed to relax her existing regulations. I may observe that the laws of quarantine are delicate matters at all times to handle internationally, as they are grounded upon a primary principle of international right, namely, that of self-preservation, and the presumption is that they are adopted in each case bonâ fide for the safety of the nation.

No. 189.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received June 20.)

Temple, June 19, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 13th instant, stating that the attention of your Lordship has been drawn to the rigorous action of the Spanish authorities in regard to quarantine in the case of British vessels arriving in Spanish ports from ports of the United Kingdom, and from certain ports of France and Africa where smallpox is supposed to be prevalent. That I should perceive, on perusal of the accompanying papers, of which a list was also inclosed, that the hardship and loss occasioned to British shipping by the quarantine regulations now enforced have been the subject of repeated complaint to the Spanish Government on the part of Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, and that the remonstrances which he has made on the subject have hitherto been unsuccessful in obtaining redress. That the cases which have been brought to your Lordship's notice may be divided into the three following classes:—

1st. That of British vessels arriving from British ports with a clean bill of health, and after a voyage of, in several instances, two or three weeks, which have been placed under a "quarantine of observation" of three days. That in connection with this regulation Mr. Odo Russell was directed to call my attention to Article 30 of the Sanitary Law, a translation of which was inclosed in Mr. Layard's despatch No. 37 of the 21st February last. That this quarantine of observation has been rendered in some cases more grievous, by the fact that it cannot always be performed in the port of destination. That, for example, vessels arriving at Palma in the Balearic Islands have been ordered to repair to a port in the Spanish peninsular for this purpose. That, moreover, quarantine of observation on suspicion of smallpox has been imposed in Spanish ports where that disease is notoriously epidemic, as, for instance, at Teneriffe, where the Consul has procured from the Alcade a certified Report of the existence of the malady, and the number of deaths it has occasioned.

2nd. That the next class of cases is that of vessels arriving from British or foreign ports in which smallpox prevails, and from which, consequently, clean bills of health cannot be procured. That such vessels have been subjected, even when there has been no sickness among the crew, to a quarantine of seven or ten days, and this quarantine must be performed in ports where a Royal Lazaretto is established. That thus a vessel arriving in Bilbao is sent to Santander, a distance of over 100 miles, to remain idle and useless for seven or ten days, paying a fee to the local authorities of $\frac{1}{4}$ real per register ton per day (equal on a vessel of 800 tons to 2*l*. a-day), and then has to return to Bilbao to discharge.

3rd. That the most serious cases, however, as involving the greatest hardship, and apparently an absolute disregard by the local authorities of the municipal laws of their own country, are those of British vessels which, on first arrival, have been placed in quarantine of observation for three days, and have been subsequently dispatched to perform full quarantine elsewhere. That two examples of this description are that of the "Favourite," which occurred as far back as January of this year, and that of the "Janie," which occurred as recently as May. But that probably the case which shows the most inconsistency on the part of the Spanish authorities is that of the "Eliza Walker," which vessel had actually discharged her cargo in the port of her destination, San Sebastian, after a quarantine of observation of three days, and which, when sent in ballast to Bilbao, was dispatched from thence to Santander to perform full quarantine of seven days, because the bill of health given in Liverpool for the voyage, which terminated at San Sebastian, was foul. Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to state that he was directed to request me to take all these cases, and others of which details will be found in the papers transmitted herewith, into my consideration, and in view of the fact that Mr. Layard, in his most recent despatch (No. 115 of the 8th instant) states that he has hitherto failed in all his endeavours to obtain redress from the Spanish Government. Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to beg that I would, at my early convenience, furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the steps which Her Majesty's Government may properly take in the matter, first, with respect to any claims for compensation which may be rightly preferred, and secondly, with regard to further remonstrances on the subject with the Spanish Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That quarantine regulations are a branch of municipal law, in regard to which each State is supreme, so long as it does not seek to enforce them beyond its territorial jurisdiction. Such regulations may be vexatious or unreasonable, but so long as all States have notice of them, the merchant-vessels of other States come within the jurisdiction of the State which imposes them, under an obligation to conform to them. There is, however, one condition to which the administration of such laws is subject, namely, that they shall be enforced against the merchant-vessels of every nationality alike, if they come within the jurisdiction of the State which imposes them, under the same circumstances. (1) The owners of British vessels would accordingly, in my opinion, suffer no international wrong if their vessels should be subjected in Spanish ports to no other detentions or delays under the pretext of protecting the public health than French or German vessels would be subject on their arrival from the same ports; and as regards vessels arriving from British ports where the smallpox prevails, if all such vessels are at present subject to an observation of three days for sanitary purposes on their arrival in a Spanish port your Lordship would, in my opinion, have no right to complain of British vessels being equally subject to such an observation. The case, however, would be different if British vessels are subject to any exceptional treatment in this respect, as that would constitute an unfair administration on the part of the Spanish authorities of their own municipal law in reference to British subjects, and would be a just matter of complaint, and might give rise to claims for compensation. The circumstance that smallpox is epidemic at Teneriffe, although it may render a quarantine of observation unreasonable, if such quarantine were intended to prevent the introduction of the disease into the island, does not affect the right of the Spanish authorities to impose such a quarantine, and it may not be altogether vexatious if it is intended to check the increase of the disease. (2) With regard to vessels arriving in Spanish ports with a foul bill of health, the requirements of Spanish law may be burdensome, but if vessels of every nationality coming from the same ports are equally required to perform a quarantine of seven or ten days in ports where a Royal Lazaretto is established, I am of opinion that no international wrong is done in enforcing the same requirement against British vessels. (3) Cases of wrong, however, may arise from the wilful administration by the Spanish local authorities of their quarantine regulations in the case of British vessels, and several complaints have been addressed to your Lordship, the circumstances of which are mentioned in Mr. Odo Russell's letter, and which I shall proceed to examine.

I have not before me any extracts from the Sanitary laws of Spain except Article 30 and a Circular of the Spanish Minister of the Interior of the 16th January, 1871, both of which are inclosed in Mr. Layard's despatch of 21st February, 1871. The latter does not appear to apply to vessels coming from British ports, whilst Article 30 applies to all vessels coming from abroad with a clean bill of health, which vessels are to be admitted forthwith to free pratique, unless some contagious disease has developed itself at the place or port wherever the vessel came. It is obvious that under this law British vessels coming from British ports where the smallpox prevails would not be entitled to free pratique, notwithstanding they have on board a clean bill of health. There would, therefore, be no maladministration of the law by the Spanish local authorities, if they have been in the habit of refusing free pratique to British vessels coming from British ports where smallpox prevails. Whether those authorities are empowered by some other law to impose a quarantine observation of three days in such cases I am not informed, nor am I informed as to the provisions of the 38th Article of the Spanish Sanitary Code, which the Chairman of the North of England Steam Shipowners' Association asserts to be violated by the modern practice of the Spanish authorities sending their vessels, in consequence of smallpox prevailing at Shields, to some port where a Royal Lazaretto is established, for seven days strict quarantine. With regard to the three cases mentioned in Mr. Odo Russell's letter, if it is correctly stated by Her Majesty's Consul at Bilbao, as I presume to be the fact, that the 38th Article of the Spanish Quarantine Law enacts, with regard to the diseases of smallpox and typhus, that vessels having no sickness on board are only to be subjected to three days' observation in the port at which they arrive, I am of opinion that the conduct of the Spanish authorities at Bilbao in constraining the master of the British vessel "Favourite," after he had fully satisfied the above provision of the Spanish Municipal Law, to proceed with his vessel to Santander and perform full quarantine, is primâ facie a case of maladministration on the part of the local authorities, which would warrant your Lordship in claiming compensation from the Spanish Government for any losses incurred by the owners of the "Favourite" in consequence of the perverse conduct of the local authorities at Bilbao. As regards the second case of the "Eliza Walker," I am not quite satisfied at present that her owners are entitled to compensation for any losses which they may have incurred by their vessel being placed in full quarantine. It appears that the "Eliza Walker" arrived at San Sebastian with a foul bill of health from Liverpool, notwithstanding which she was admitted to free pratique after three days' observation, and she was allowed to discharge her cargo. That she thereupon proceeded in ballast to Bilbao with her foul bill of health on board, in consequence of which she was placed in full quarantine at Bilbao. The question which at once suggests itself is by whose fault did the master of the "Eliza Walker" omit to obtain a clean bill of health for his vessel before leaving San Sebastian for Bilbao? It is not stated that the master applied for a clean bill of health, and that his application was rejected by the local authorities. The fault may have rested with the master of the "Eliza Walker" in neglecting to apply for a clean bill of health, and unless the owners of the "Eliza Walker" can satisfy your Lordship that the fact of the "Eliza Walker" proceeding from San Sebastian to Bilbao with her foul bill of health still on board was the fault of the local authorities at San Sebastian, and in no way the fault of the master of the vessel, I should hesitate to advise your Lordship that the enforcement of full quarantine against this vessel on her arrival at Bilbao with a foul bill of health would entitle her owners to claim damages from the Spanish Government. The third case is that of the "Janie." It is not stated by Her Majesty's Consul at Bilbao whether this vessel had a clean bill of health on board or not on her arrival at Bilbao, but merely that she was ordered to the quarantine station to undergo three days' observation, and on the following day was ordered away to Santander to undergo strict quarantine. This is not an identical case with that of the "Favourite," in which the quarantine of observation and the full quarantine were accumulated, the latter being ordered after the first had been completed, whereas in this case the full quarantine was substituted for the quarantine of observation. If the facts of this case, when more fully reported to your Lordship, should bring the "Janie" within the class of cases provided for by the 38th Article of the Spanish Sanitary Law as recited by Her Majesty's Consul at Bilbao, and which recital appears to me on the face of it to be imperfect, I should be of opinion that there has been an abuse of authority in this case on the part of the Local Board of Health at Bilbao, and that the owners of the "Janie" will be entitled to compensation for their maladministration of the law; but fuller information is desirable.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received August 29.)

My Lord, Temple, August 28, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 24th instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 19th June upon the subject of quarantine imposed upon British vessels in Spanish ports, he was directed to transmit to me herewith a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Consul at Bilbao, containing further details upon the points with which I desired information. Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that I would at my early convenience furnish your Lordship with such observations as I might have to offer upon the inclosed papers, and especially with my opinion as to any illegalities on the part of the Spanish local authorities which would justify Her Majesty's Government in making an official remonstrance to the Spanish Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That there appears to have been a harsh administration of the law as regards the "Favourite," but I am not prepared to advise your Lordship that as regards that vessel or the "Janie" the conduct of the Spanish authorities in enforcing a full quarantine against those vessels was in excess of the requirements of their own municipal law. A clear distinction, however, exists in my opinion between the case of these two vessels and that of the "Eliza Walker." It may be fairly contended by the Spanish authorities that the preliminary detention of the "Favourite" and the "Janie" at Bilbao, before they were sent to Santander, was deliberative, and ought not properly to be regarded as a quarantine of observation, whereas in the case of the "Eliza Walker" the certificate of the port authorities at St. Sebastian is conclusive that her detention in that port was a quarantine of observation, which was complete in all its formalities, upon which she was admitted to free pratique and discharged her cargo. I am of opinion that Her Majesty's Government will be justified in bringing this case officially to the notice of the Spanish Government, as it is clear, from the second indorsement on her bill of health, that the port authorities at Bilbao reported to the Director-General of Health that the "Eliza Walker" had not undergone a quarantine of observation at Santander, contrary to the fact as certified by the authorities of the latter port. I am also of opinion that Her Majesty's Government will be entitled on principle to remonstrate against a British vessel, which has once been admitted to free pratique and allowed to discharge her cargo in a Spanish port, being compelled on arriving at another Spanish port to undergo a full quarantine, as if she came direct from an infected port, provided always that meanwhile she has not exhibited any symptoms of infection. There are circumstances also, as regards the "Favourite" being compelled to put to sea in boisterous weather, when she was not in a seaworthy state, which may I think be properly made a subject of official remonstrance to the Spanish Government, as such a proceeding, seeing the vessel was not infected, was under the circumstances a violation in my opinion of the spirit if not of the letter of the 38th Article of the Organic Sanitary Law of the 28th November, 1855.

Temple, September 8, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence* respecting the case of the "Tyne Queen," a British vessel, to which, under the circumstances therein set forth, pratique was refused at Huelva in October last, and he was to request that I would take these papers into consideration, and report my opinion as to the course which it would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to take in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it would be desirable, as the Board of Health at Huelva ignores the act of the Carabinero who refused free pratique to the "Tyne Queen," that some declaration should be obtained from the Spanish pilot who had charge of the "Tyne Queen" to the effect that the Carabinero in question was an officer of the Board of Health, and that it was in consequence of his orders to the master of the "Tyne Queen" that she was taken out to sea again by the pilot. The agent of the owners at Huelva ought to have no difficulty in ascertaining the name of the pilot, as I presume he must have given a receipt to the master for his pilotage fee, as the master states that he was excused paying for a pilot a second time. Assuming that it can be established beyond dispute that the Carabinero in question was an officer of the Board of Health at Huelva, I am of opinion that the authorities at Huelva are responsible for his refusal, as recorded in the ship's protest, to look at the ship's bill of health, and for his mistake, if he made it, in supposing the "Tyne Queen" came from the Levant. With regard to compensation, I am of opinion that the owners of the "Tyne Queen" may properly ask for compensation from the Spanish Government for the direct losses entailed upon them by the unjustifiable conduct of the Carabinero, for instance, for the loss of time and the expenses of the vessel (including coal consumed) in going to Cadiz and returning to Huelva, and for the port charges and expenses in Cadiz; but as regards the other items of loss set out in the master's protest, a claim for compensation on their account may with some show of reason be disputed by the Spanish Government, and I should not advise their being pressed. With regard to extra coals, the proper measure of compensation, in my opinion, will be the quantity, as already suggested, actually consumed in the extra voyage to and from Cadiz, which, if not already included, may be properly added to the account, in place of the item for coals as subsequently purchased in Huelva.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the inclosed despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Port-au-Prince,† reporting the particulars of a gross outrage committed by a Spanish ship of war on the English sloop "E. Beckwith" within Haïtian waters, and forwarding copies of the correspondence which has passed between him and the Spanish Consul in Haïti upon the subject, and to request that I would take this matter into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the proper course to be pursued by Her Majesty's Government in this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship is, in my opinion, entitled to demand from the Spanish Government some apology or expression of regret for the conduct of the Commander of the Spanish war-steamer. It is an axiom of the law of nations that no belligerent right of any kind can be exercised against an enemy's vessel within neutral waters. A fortiori this is true as regards a neutral vessel, and there is this further difference, that whilst in the former case the exercise of belligerent right is only an outrage against the sovereignty of the neutral Power within whose waters it takes effect, in the latter case it is an affront both to the territorial Sovereign and to the sovereignty of the nation under whose flag the vessel is sailing. Both the one and the other, in the latter case, are, in my opinion, entitled to resent it.

Baring Brothers and Co., respecting a claim of the latter firm on the estates of Don Miguel de Aldama, which have been confiscated by the Spanish Government, and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid on this subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may, in my opinion, instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid so far to support the claim of Messrs. Baring Brothers and Co. officiously, as to request that the legality of their claim may be inquired into with as little delay as possible. I have not sufficient information at present as to the circumstances under which the property of Señor Aldama has been taken possession of by the Spanish Government, so as to be able to advise your Lordship whether that Government is entitled to repudiate all claims of creditors upon it.

Temple, November 20, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the correspondence marked in the margin* relative to the salvage of the British ship "Saxony" and its cargo at Garrucho, and questions which have arisen in connection therewith, and he was to request that I would take the inclosed papers into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the merits of the case, and the course which Her Majesty's Government should pursue with regard to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the case is extremely complicated. The first question, however, and that which lies at the root of the case, appears to me to be whether the local Judge of Garrucha had or had not by Spanish law jurisdiction on questions of salvage. If he had such jurisdiction, then I think it is to be regretted that Her Majesty's Vice-Consul at Garrucha did not defer to the citation of the Judge to attend at what is termed in the Report to the Spanish Ministry of Grace and Justice (No. 4 in Mr. Layard's No. 125) the "Acto de Conciliacion," even if he appeared under protest. The latter, in my opinion, would have been the proper course for Her Majesty's Vice-Consul to have adopted if he deemed himself to be improperly cited before the Judge. The further question as regards Her Majesty's Vice-Consul, whether he was properly fined by the Judge for contumacy, appears to have been carried by Her Majesty's Vice-Consul by appeal before a Superior Court; but it may be observed that there is a further question underlying the legal question of the Judge's authority, which it may be important for Her Majesty's Government to raise, if the Court of Appeal should pronounce for the Judge's authority, namely, whether that authority was not exercised by the Judge without due regard to comity, considering the official character of Mr. Pecket.

Thus much I venture to submit to your Lordship as regards Her Majesty's Vice-Consul's conduct. I do not know under what authority he may have acted in this case, or whether Her Majesty's Consular Officers have any general instructions from your Lordship to interfere on behalf of British interests in cases where British vessels are stranded or cast away within their respective districts. Mr. Pecket seems to have acted for the best, as he believed, in order to protect the property of British subjects, and I think he so far deserves your Lordship's support, more particularly if there is a confederation of parties at Garrucha, as he represents, to prevent the due administration of justice in this case by the local Judge.

The question of salvage remains, which is a question apart from the conduct of Her Majesty's Vice-Consul, and, as I understand from the letter of the Board of Trade, will have to be determined ultimately by a Spanish Tribunal. I concur in the opinion of the Board of Trade* that the property should not be abandoned to the parties who have appeared before the local Judge at Garrucha, and asserted that they have a right to the vessel and her cargo, on the ground that they had saved her when derelict.† Upon no principle of salvage law, as administered inter gentes, can such a claim be successfully maintained. It may be just, indeed, that a higher remuneration than 50 dollars, as agreed by parole, should be awarded to the salvors, for it appears from Mr. Pecket's letter of 16th December, 1870, inclosed in Mr. Layard's No. 113, Commercial, that the work of salvage was both difficult and dangerous. The most advisable course, in my opinion, for Her Majesty's Government to pursue in this case will be to instruct Mr. Layard to concert, if possible, with the Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs, that an end shall be put to the proceedings as regards Her Majesty's Vice-Consul, on the ground that, assuming the jurisdiction of the local Judge at Garrucha over the question of salvage to be well founded, he did not exercise his authority with the comity due to the official character of Mr. Pecket; and that the question of the proper remuneration due to the actual salvors of the "Saxony" shall be referred without delay to the proper Tribunal for adjudication; meanwhile, Mr. Pecket to hold any proceeds which he may have from the sale of the hull or cargo of the "Saxony," subject to the salvage award.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the correspondence relative to a sum of money improperly levied by the Customs Authorities of Cuba, by way of duty upon Messrs. Morrison Brothers, and subsequently returned, and in regard to which a claim for interest is now made by Messrs. Morrison for the period during which the money was retained by the Cuban authorities, and Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether Messrs. Morrison's claim for interest can properly be supported by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that the claim of Messrs. Morrison Brothers for interest may be fairly pressed on the Spanish authorities by Her Majesty's Government, as Messrs. Morrison Brothers would have had the benefit of that interest, if they had not been deprived of the use of their capital by the wrongful exaction of the Spanish Custom-house Authorities.

Temple, December 10, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM favoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of to-day addressed to me and Mr. Solicitor-General, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from the Spanish Minister at this Court with the answer returned to it respecting information that had reached him of a vessel being fitted out in some port of the United Kingdom for the service of the insurgents in Cuba.

2. That the Board of Treasury were immediately requested to cause inquiry to be made, and on Saturday evening the letter sent therewith was received from the Treasury, containing a police Report respecting a suspicious vessel in the River Thames.

3. That this morning, however, Mr. Hammond had received from one of the Commissioners of Customs the inclosed copy of a Report from the Customs Authorities at Dundee, calling attention to a vessel named the "Francesco Calderon" recently sold to foreigners, and about to proceed from that port to Shields, if she had not already done so.

4. That as a measure of precaution, orders had been sent this morning to Shields by telegraph desiring the Customs Authorities not to permit any packages or goods to be shipped on board the "Francesco Calderon" till further orders.

5. That Mr. Hammond was directed to request that we would take the papers and the circumstances which he had stated into our immediate consideration, and report our opinion as to the course which it would be proper to take to prevent any violation of the Foreign Enlistment Act, if such should be contemplated.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have taken the papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it is impossible to say that with regard either to the "Francesco Calderon" or the scud, there is within the fair meaning of section 23 of 33 and 34 Vic., cap. 90, reasonable and probable cause for believing that a ship is about to be dispatched contrary to the Act. The information of the Spanish Minister is vague, and apparently from the importance of the subject is clothed in exaggerated language; nor does the evidence furnished to the Treasury from the Custom-house officer amount to any real or substantial evidence against either ship. The Government will probably have to pay damages for the detention of either ship, or both if it is determined to detain them. If, however, the Government have no objection to run the risk, which it is undoubtedly considerable, it may be well to detain the "Calderon" at any rate for a few days, that further inquiries may be made concerning her. There is one circumstance connected with that vessel, her being built for extreme speed, which, as she is professedly a trader, certainly seems to show that she is built to be employed for some questionable object. This detention must be the act of the local authority, as I am unable to advise the Secretary of State that he could say that at present there was reasonable cause for his warrant. The warrant, as has been more than once done, may be issued afterwards under section 24.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Cadiz, inclosing a declaration which he was instructed to procure, in accordance with the suggestion in my Report of the 8th September, in order to establish the fact that the officer who ordered the "Tyne Queen" to leave Huelva, notwithstanding her clean bill of health, was acting under the orders of the health authorities.

That I should perceive that the declaration is not made by the pilot who had charge of the vessel, as suggested by me, but by the Captain of the Port.

Lord Enfield was also pleased to inclose a further letter from Messrs. Girvin and Slater, from which it appears that the refusal to allow the "Tyne Queen" to remain at Huelva was occasioned by a mistake in certain written orders issued by the Lieutenant-Colonel of the Coast-guard to the officer in command of the detachment at the entrance of the river.

1871

The other papers connected with this case were also inclosed, and Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would again take it into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion whether I consider the preliminary point of the responsibility of the health authorities for the occurrence in question sufficiently established to warrant a claim for compensation to the extent pointed out in my Report being made on the Spanish Government by Her Majesty's Government, on behalf of the owners of the "Tyne Queen."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the declaration of the Captain of the Port of Huelva renders it unnecessary to obtain a declaration from the pilot, as it establishes the fact that the "Tyne Queen" was ordered by the corporal of carabineers to go to a lazaretto of observation, contrary to what was required by the sanitary regulations then in force at that port. I am of opinion that your Lordship may properly instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid to make an official representation to the Spanish Government on the subject, and to claim compensation for the owners of the "Tyne Queen" to the extent pointed out in my Report of the 8th September last past.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 19th instant, stating that, with reference to my Reports of the 8th September and the 12th December, he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, dated the 9th December, 1874, inclosing a copy and translation of a note from Señor de Blas, stating that the captain of the "Tyne Queen," having left the port of Huelva, when ordered away by the health authorities, without entering into explanations as to the port from which he sailed, is not entitled to receive any compensation for the detention caused in this case. That it is to be remarked, however, that in the protest of the captain, a copy of which would be found inclosed in Mr. Layard's despatch of the 2nd November, 1870, it is stated that the officer who ordered the "Tyne Queen" out of the river, refused to inspect the ship's papers or to listen to any explanations, Lord Tenterden was pleased to request that I would take Mr. Layard's despatch into my consideration, and inform your Lordship whether the note of Señor de Blas causes me to alter my opinion as to the nature of the instructions which should be sent to Mr. Layard.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That assuming the facts of this case to be correctly stated in the protest of the master of the "Tyne Queen," I am of opinion that the letter of Señor de Blas does not furnish a sufficient answer to the complaint of the master; but as it raises an issue of fact it would be of importance, I think, that the evidence of the pilot who was in charge of the "Tyne Queen" should be obtained to settle that issue before Mr. Layard presses any further on the Spanish Government the claim of the owners of the "Tyne Queen" to be indemnified for the wrongful act of the officer who ordered the "Tyne Queen" out of the river.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us herewith the accompanying correspondence, which has passed between the Foreign Office, the Board of Treasury, and the Spanish Minister at this Court, with reference to two vessels now lying in the Mersey, and which it is supposed may be intended for the service of the Cuban insurgents, Lord Tenterden was pleased to request that we would take these papers into our immediate consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion at our earliest convenience, as to whether Her Majesty's Government can take any, and, if so, what measures, with regard to these vessels.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there are not, in our opinion, sufficient grounds at present for your Lordship to issue a warrant under the 23rd Section of the "Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870," to seize and detain the two steam-vessels, which, from the Spanish Minister's letter of the 22nd December, 1871, appear to be lying in the Birkenhead Docks, and not in the River Mersey. We presume, from the Reports of the Custom-house authorities at Liverpool, that the two vessels are not in a fit condition to go to sea, and that it is contemplated removing them from the docks to a building-yard, for the purpose of making certain alterations in them. Your Lordship may, in our opinion, immediately on such removal of the vessels being reported to your Lordship, issue a warrant under the 25th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act, and authorize inquiry to be made as to the destination of the two vessels, with a view to their being detained if the Report should be unsatisfactory. We ought, however, to add that your Lordship, before issuing the warrant, must be satisfied that, in the words of the Act, the vessels "appear to you to be intended to be employed in the naval service of a foreign State," contrary to the Act. For ourselves, we should have some difficulty, upon the present information, in saying that we were so satisfied; but this is a matter for your Lordship rather than for us.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day's date, stating that, with reference to our Report of this date respecting the ships at Liverpool suspected of being about to be dispatched contrary to the provisions of the "Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870," he was directed to transmit to us the copy of a letter, which he has in consequence addressed to the Collector of Customs of Liverpool, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request our opinion at our earliest convenience: whether the Collector of Customs might not be instructed, even in the present stage of the business, to ask the parties connected with the vessels in distinct terms for what purpose or employment they are designed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we see no objection to the Collector of Customs of Liverpool being instructed to make the inquiry suggested in Mr. Hammond's letter of this day. He should make it, however, as from himself alone, as there is nothing in the "Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870," which authorizes him to put such a question as a matter of law.

That the Board of Trade, as I should observe, at the same time require similar information with regard to the crew of the vessel "Britannia," of Nassau, on which case I reported on the 17th of March last, and also with regard to the schooner "Star," belonging to the Cayman Islands. A Memorandum relating to these cases, together with all the correspondence, was also inclosed, and that I should perceive that, as regards the "John Grey" and "Britannia," the cases as regards the owners have been satisfactorily arranged. That the case of the "Star," however, is still in abeyance, and has not, as yet, been referred to me. Lord Tenterden was pleased to request that I would take the question of the expenses incurred on account of the relief of the crews of the two former ships into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the Board of Trade.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That a claim may, in my opinion, be properly made against the Spanish Government for the recovery of the expenses incurred by Her Majesty's Vice-Consul on account of the crew of the "John Grey," by reason of their prolonged detention. With regard to the master and crew of the "Britannia," I am of opinion that no claim can properly be made on their account against the Spanish Government. With regard to the master and crew of the "Star," I am not informed of the precise circumstances under which that vessel was detained by the Spanish cruizers.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us an accompanying letter from Mr. Gould, now Her Majesty's Secretary of Legation at Berne, inclosing a copy of a letter which had recently been addressed to him by the solicitors of Dr. William Stewart, late of Paraguay, calling upon Mr. Gould to give evidence in a suit to be tried before the Court of Sessions in Scotland, the questions drawn up by Dr. Stewart's solicitors as the subject for his examination having reference to political matters in which Mr. Gould was engaged in his official capacity, whilst employed on a special Mission at the seat of war in Paraguay in the year 1868.

2. That Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take that application, on the part of Dr. Stewart's solicitors, into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which should be pursued by Mr. Gould under the circumstances, and keeping in view the fact of his official position, which alone had connected him with the transactions to which the suit in question relates.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it appears to us that the questions bear upon matters with which Mr. Gould has only become acquainted through his official position as British Chargé d'Affaires to the President of Paraguay. Some of the questions are clearly improper in themselves, and it appears to us that it would be prejudicial to the public service for Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to answer at all upon matters which are really not of a private character, and with which he has only become acquainted in his official capacity.

My Lord, Temple, February 10, 1871.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a despatch which your Lordship had received from Mr. Bonar, Her Majesty's Minister at Berne, inclosing correspondence which has taken place with the President of the Swiss Confederation respecting a British subject, John Scott, whose extradition is claimed by the French Government on a charge of theft said to have been committed at Dijon, and to request that we would furnish your Lordship with our opinion at our earliest convenience as to the course which should be pursued in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that no objection should be raised by Her Majesty's Government to the extradition of Scott. A British subject voluntarily taking up his residence in a foreign country subjects himself to the laws of that country, and among them to its extradition laws. We may add that, inasmuch as the offence charged against Scott is not one of those for which, though committed abroad, a British subject is triable in this country, to prevent his extradition, would be merely to secure impunity for his crime.

Temple, February 20, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Berne, inclosing a copy of one from the Acting Consul at Geneva, in which it is stated that among the officers and soldiers of the French army escaped into Switzerland are several British subjects. That Mr. Bonar is anxious to know what is the position of such persons as regards any application they may make for passports or visas to enable them to leave the country, or any claim they may advance to the protection or interference on their behalf of Her Majesty's Legation or Consulate.

Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would take this matter into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion as to whether these persons have, under the circumstances, forfeited their claim to British protection.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may, in my opinion, properly distinguish, as regards the operation of the Foreign Enlistment Act, between the case of British subjects, who have voluntarily sought service in the French armies during the present war, and those who being resident within French territory have been liable by the law of France to take part in the defence of the country. The former may, I think, be properly held by your Lordship to have forfeited all claim to British protection, whilst the war lasts, but the latter can hardly be held to have contravened the statute, unless by a strained interpretation of its provisions. On the other hand, as regards both of the above classes of British subjects, your Lordship may, I think, properly instruct Mr. Bonar that a passport should not be granted, whilst the war last, to any British subject who was serving as an officer or soldier in the French army when it escaped into Switzerland, and has been interned.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Gronville.—(Received May 6.)

Temple, May 5, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch, which your Lordship has received from Her Majesty's Minister in Switzerland, relative to the claim made by the authorities of the Canton de Vaud to succession duty on the property of Miss England, deceased, at Lausanne, not only on that part which at the time of her death was within the canton, but also upon that part (being the bulk of the property) which was in this country. That on this subject he was to refer me to my Report of the 14th September, 1869, in which, with reference to an application from Messrs. Dawes and Son, stating that, although Miss England had resided in the Canton de Vaud for many years, she had never lost her original domicile as an Englishwoman, I gave it as my opinion that as this was a conclusion of law depending upon a variety of facts, Messrs. Dawes and Son might properly be required to satisfy your Lordship that their view of the law, as applicable to Miss England's case in regard to her domicile, was well founded. That it would be in my recollection that Messrs. Dawes and Son subsequently proposed to your Lordship that, with a view to meet the case of Miss England, Her Majesty's Government should sign with the Swiss Government a declaration on the subject of the property of subjects and citizens of either country dying in the other, similar to one which had been signed between the Swiss and Russian Governments. That acting on the opinion stated in my Report of the 28th September, 1870, that such a declaration would not meet cases of this description, your Lordship declined to adopt that course, and since then Her Majesty's Minister in Switzerland has been in communication with persons of influence in that country, with a view, if possible, of discovering some method of arranging this difficult question. That it would, however, appear, from Mr. Bonar's recent despatch, that the local authorities of the Canton de Vaud had in years past actually abandoned their claim to imposts on Miss England's fortune or income, because she maintained that she was not domiciled there. That under these circumstances, your Lordship would be glad to receive my opinion, whether your Lordship could properly make a representation to the Federal Government of Switzerland on behalf of the estate of Miss England, on the ground that the authorities of that part of the Canton de Vaud where she resided had admitted her claim as non-domiciled, and that, therefore, a claim cannot properly be made to succession duty on any part of her property beyond that which was in the canton at the time of her death. The former correspondence was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the fact of the local authorities of the Canton de Vaud having on the occasion mentioned in the letter of Advocate König admitted the claim of Miss England to be non-domiciled in Switzerland would not be in my opinion a conclusive argument against them, if it stood alone, that Miss England was not domiciled in the Canton de Vaud at the time of her death. But as it is coupled with the fact that the same authorities never made any further attempt to tax her during her life-time, I think it is a conclusive argument that they accepted her protest as rebutting any presumption of an intention on her part to change her domicil arising out of her modus vivendi in Switzerland. Your Lordship may therefore in my opinion properly make a representation to the Federal Government on behalf of the estate of Miss England, grounded upon the double fact of the authorities of the Canton de Vaud having deferred to her protest, and having made no further attempt to tax her down to the time of her death.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received August 18.)

Temple, August 17, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 11th instant, stating that, with reference to the claim of the authorities of the Canton de Vaud to succession duty on the property of the late Miss England, which formed the subject of my Report of the 5th May last, as well as that of the 14th September, 1869, he was directed to transmit to me some further correspondence which has taken place upon the subject between your Lordship and Her Majesty's Minister in Switzerland. That I should perceive that Mr. Bonar, in his despatch No. 73 of the 27th June last, has submitted a draft of declaration to be proposed to the Swiss Government for the regulation of the question of succession duty on the property of subjects of the one country dying in the territories of the other, with a view of preventing the tedious and costly litigation which now arises from time to time in consequence of claims advanced by the authorities of the Canton de Vaud to succession duty on the entire property, wherever situate, of British subjects dying in the Canton de Vaud. That such duty, at all events, in respect of property not situate within the canton, could (if your Lordship rightly understands the question) be claimable only in case the legal or principal domicil of the deceased had been established in the Canton de Vaud at the time of his death, and that, from Mr. Bonar's despatch No. 75 of the 29th June, it appears that the law of the Canton de Vaud requires that, in order to constitute legal domicil, certain conditions must be fulfilled; that is to say, the intention to create in the canton the fixed (principal) establishment must have been formally declared to the authorities, or, that fixed (principal) establishment must have been virtually already transferred to the canton for the space of an entire year. But that, in the case of Miss England, the claim to duty on the entire property of the deceased was advanced by the authorities of the canton, notwithstanding these conditions, prescribed by their own law, had not been fulfilled. That a declaration such as that suggested by Mr. Bonar would probably put a stop to such claims, and be satisfactory as far as regards British subjects in the Canton de Vaud. But that your Lordship feels doubt whether Her Majesty's Government could engage that the "same principles" should be applied in the case of a citizen of the Canton de Vaud dying in this country; and your Lordship would be glad to be furnished with my opinion on this point and on the draft of declaration generally.

1871

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That there would be a difficulty in the way of Her Majesty's Government giving effect on precisely the "same principles" to the proposed Convention, as regards the property of citizens of the Canton de Vaud dying within British territory, inasmuch as, according to the decisions of British Courts, it would not be requisite for a citizen of Vaud to have made a formal declaration before a British authority as a condition precedent to his acquiring a British domicile for testamentary purposes. A citizen of Vaud might have acquired such a domicile by residence alone in the United Kingdom, coupled with the intention of abandoning his native home, and such an intention may properly be inferred from circumstances given in evidence after his death. There might also be a difficulty as regards a citizen of Vaud dying within a British Colony, as in such a case the Colonial Treasury might put in a claim for legacy duty on the ground of the deceased having a colonial domicile, such a distinction being admitted by the British Courts. The only way by which reciprocity of obligation might be made the basis of a declaration between the two Governments, as the law of England now stands, would be by adopting words of a more general character. I have drawn up a draft of such a Convention to be submitted for your Lordship's consideration, and I should observe that the preamble of the draft Convention, as proposed, requires some modification, as the Convention is to regulate the succession or legacy duty to be levied on the property of the citizens and subjects of either of the contracting parties dying within the territory of the other, when not domiciled therein.

Inclosure in No. 207.

Draft of Declaration.

THE Government of Her Britannic Majesty and the Federal Council of the Swiss Confederation, acting in the name of the Canton de Vaud, have agreed to apply the following principles to the succession or legacy duty, to which the property of a subject or citizen of either of the two contracting parties dying within the territory of the other contracting party, when not domiciled therein, shall be subject.

Section 1. The domicile of a subject of Her Britannic Majesty shall not be considered to be established in the Canton de Vaud unless such British subject shall have complied with all the requirements of the law of the said canton applicable to domicile; and reciprocally the domicile of a citizen of the Canton de Vaud shall not be considered to be established in the dominions of Her Britannic Majesty unless such citizen of the Canton de Vaud shall have complied with all the requirements of the law of such dominions applicable to domicile.

Sec. 2. In the event of the decease in the Canton de Vaud of a British subject who shall not have complied with all the requirements of the law of the canton necessary to establish his legal domicile therein, succession or legacy duty shall be levied only on the property, real or personal, which the deceased may, at the time of his death, have possessed within the canton, but shall not be due on any property whatsoever situated out of the territory of the canton.

Sec. 3. It is likewise understood that in the event of the decease within Her Majesty's dominions of a citizen of the Canton de Vaud, who shall not have complied with all the requirements of the law of such dominions necessary to establish his legal domicile therein, succession or legacy duty shall be levied only on the property, real or personal, which the deceased may, at the time of his death, have possessed within such dominions, but shall not be due on any property whatsoever situated out of such dominions.

Sec. 4. All the other cantons of Switzerland may adhere to the present declaration by a declaration made to that effect, which the Federal Council of the Confederation will communicate to the Government of Her Britannic Majesty.

Temple, August 30, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 28th instant, stating that with reference to former cases of demands made by the authorities of the Canton de Vaud for succession duty on the property of British subjects dying in the canton, he was directed to transmit to me a despatch which your Lordship has received from Her Majesty's Minister in Switzerland* respecting a demand made by the authorities of the Canton of Geneva upon the widow of Mr. Reynolds, late British Vice-Consul at that place, for a return of the property left by her husband, for the purpose of its being submitted to succession or legacy duty. Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion, whether on any of the grounds stated in Mr. Bonar's despatch, Mrs. Reynolds can object to furnish the required return, and whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in interposing in the question. The Consular Convention between Switzerland and Brazil, to which reference is made in Mr. Bonar's despatch, was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the grounds upon which legacy duty is claimed by the authorities of the Canton of Geneva in this case is, as appears from the Report of the Director of Registration inclosed in Mr. Bonar's despatch, that the late Mr. Vice-Consul Reynolds was domiciled at Geneva at the time of his death. If this fact be established, I am of opinion that his character of British Vice-Consul would not exempt his widow from making the required return. No such exemption would be admitted in England as regards the personal property of a foreign Consul or Vice-Consul dying in England whilst in active service, if he was domiciled in England at the time of his death.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 30th August last, on the subject of a demand made by the authorities of the Canton of Geneva upon the widow of Mr. Reynolds, late British Vice-Consul of that place, for a return of the property left by her husband, for the purpose of being submitted to succession or legacy duty, he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Berne, replying to the despatch that was addressed to him in the sense of that Report, and to request that I would take the same into consideration, together with the previous papers, which were also inclosed, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to any further instructions which should be sent to Mr. Bonar on this matter.

---

* Mr. Bonar, No. 83, August 14, 1871.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That upon the facts stated in Mr. Acting-Consul Auldjos' letter of 20th September, 1871, assuming that evidence will be forthcoming as to the intention of Mr. Vice-Consul Reynolds to resume his residence in England, I am of opinion that an English Court would adjudge Mr. Vice-Consul Reynolds not to have abandoned his domicile of origin at the time of his death, and would hold his property to be distributable according to English law. I should observe, however, that the English Courts have regard always to domicil according to the law of nations, whereas the Swiss Courts, in causes of succession, would probably hold themselves bound by the definition of domicil given by the law of the canton, which, if I mistake not, constitutes residence de facto for a certain number of years, irrespective of intention, the criterion.

Assuming such to be the case, there can be no valid objection to the Swiss Courts applying their municipal law to property which is within their jurisdiction, but the Genevese authorities claim to apply their municipal law to all the personal property of the deceased in this case, wheresoever situated; and this, I apprehend, they are not entitled to do upon the plea of the deceased having died domiciled in the Canton of Geneva, according to their municipal law, except that law coincides with the law of nations.

I should advise your Lordship that Mr. Bonar should be instructed to inform the proper Swiss authorities that he does not make any claim of immunity as regards the requirements of Genevese law, for the property of Mr. Vice-Consul Reynolds, on the ground of his official character, but that he asserts the right of his widow to open the succession in England.

That as regards the statement in the Report of the Genevese Director of Registration, that Mr. Vice-Consul Reynolds had no other known domicile than that which he had acquired by his residence with the Canton of Geneva for a certain number of years, he may observe that residence alone, without an intention to abandon his domicile of origin, would not be sufficient to divest Mr. Vice-Consul Reynolds of his English domicile according to the law of nations, and to withdraw his personal property from the jurisdiction of the English Courts. Mr. Bonar may further state that in asserting the right of the widow of Mr. Vice-Consul Reynolds to open the succession to her deceased husband's property in England, he claims no more than would be granted by an English Court to the widow of a Swiss citizen dying in England under similar circumstances of residence, without the intention of abandoning his native country.

Temple, December 26, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 23rd instant, stating that with reference to my Reports on the subject of the claims raised by the authorities of the Canton de Vaud to succession duty on the property, wherever situate, of British subjects dying in the canton, and more especially to my Reports of the 30th August and 9th October last, he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Switzerland, inclosing the draft of a declaration which the Federal Government are willing to sign with him for the settlement of the question. Lord Tenterden was pleased to request that I would take the same into my consideration, and report to your Lordship my opinion whether Mr. Bonar may be instructed to sign the proposed declaration, and a similar one with regard to the Canton of Geneva, if it can be obtained.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That there is no objection in my opinion to the declaration which the Federal Government is willing to sign.

With regard to the declaration which Mr. Bonar proposes to sign, I would suggest that an uniformity of expression should be maintained throughout as regards the acquisition by citizens of Vaud of a domicile in Her Majesty's dominions, and that in lieu of the varied phraseology which is employed in Article I, "shall have complied with the requirements of the law of such dominions applicable to domicile:" and in Article II, "shall not have complied with all the requirements laid down by the law of such dominions necessary to establish his legal domicile therein;" and again, in Article II, "unless he shall have fulfilled all the conditions required by the laws of these dominions necessary to establish his legal domicile therein," there should be substituted an uniform phraseology, viz., "unless he shall have fulfilled (or shall not have fulfilled, as the case may be) all the requirements of the law of such dominions necessary to establish his legal domicile therein." I may add that there is apparently a slight clerical error in Article II, which should be amended, and in the place of the words "the formal declaration here aforesaid," "the formal declaration hereinbefore mentioned" may be used.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a correspondence* with Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Tunis, relative to the right of the Bey of Tunis to the proceeds of fisheries of sponge and polypi beyond the distance of three miles from the shore. That I should perceive that the question was first raised by a British firm as affecting the payment of dues levied by the Bey, Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that I would take the matter into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Wood on the subject.

1871

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That there is no objection on principle to the Bey of Tunis asserting an exclusive right to the fructus of the banks off the coast of Tunis, to which sponges and polypi attach themselves, although the banks in question are at a greater distance than three miles from the coast line, provided the Bey can show a prescriptive enjoyment of such fructus. Vattel, l. 1, c. 23, s. 287, admits that nations may acquire a right of property in such fructus founded on long-continued and exclusive enjoyment, and there are on record many instances of the enjoyment of such right of property. Amongst others Her Majesty's Government exercise at present such an exclusive right as regards the fructus of the pearl fisheries off the coast of Ceylon, having received it as a tradition from the previous Sovereigns of the island, notwithstanding the principal bank to which the pearl oyster attaches itself is at a distance of more than twenty miles from the coast. The prescriptive use on the other hand of such a right is a question of fact which must be established, or may be impugned, like other facts. If it can be shown, indeed, that within the memory of living persons fishermen of various nationalities were accustomed to take sponges and polypi from the banks in question freely and without the permission of the Bey of Tunis, I should be of opinion that the claim of prescriptive right on his part failed, but this, as I have observed, resolves itself into a question of fact. With regard to the exclusive right of the Bey to the fructus of any banks which are inclosed within a line drawn across the mouths of bays, the headlands of which are not more than ten miles apart, I am of opinion that the Bey is justified in asserting an exclusive right to such fructus.

My Lord, Temple, March 27, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter from Mr. Joseph Williams, requesting the assistance of Her Majesty's Government in procuring the revision of a sentence of imprisonment for fifteen years, pronounced against him by a Turkish Tribunal for the manslaughter of a watchman at Constantinople. Two despatches from Her Majesty's Consul-General and Judge of the Supreme Court at Constantinople reporting his opinion on the case were also inclosed, and Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, together with the previous papers, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the validity of the sentence recorded against Joseph Williams, and as to the instructions which should be sent to Sir P. Francis, if I should coincide in his opinion as to the illegality of the judicial procedure in this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the trial of Mr. Joseph Williams has not been conducted in accordance with the capitulations between Her Majesty and the Porte, and the sentence pronounced upon him involves, in my opinion, a breach of the capitulations. Further, it is open to Her Majesty's Government to contend that the preliminary inquiry conducted in the Court of the "Zaptieh," upon which the sentence of the Supreme Council was founded, has not been conducted in accordance with the Firman of the Sultan of February, 1854, and is therefore invalid according to Turkish law.

The trial and condemnation of Mr. Williams would thus appear not merely to involve an international wrong, but an irregularity as regards the law regulating the procedure of the "Zaptieh," which vitiates the proceedings and will entitle Her Majesty's Government to protest against them as altogether invalid. Under these circumstances Her Majesty's Government would be entitled, in my opinion, to demand of strict right that a new trial of Mr. Williams should be had according to the capitulations between Her Majesty and the Porte, the binding effect of which is recognized in the Firman of the Sultan; and it will be for your Lordship to consider whether it would not be proper, as a warning to the Turkish authorities against repeating such glaring violations of their Treaty obligations, to demand, as suggested by Sir P. Francis, that Mr. Williams should be handed over to the British authorities, there being a precedent for such course, and it being contrary to British principles of criminal jurisprudence, when the proceedings of a Court of Justice in a criminal trial have been found to be invalid, for the accused party to be placed a second time in peril of his life for the same offence.

1. That with reference to our Report of the 19th ultimo, respecting the right of a Mixed Commission which had been formed for the improvement of the navigation of the Pruth to levy certain dues on vessels frequenting that river, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying Memorandum, which had been drawn up in the Foreign Office, on a question which had been raised, whether, as no reference was made to the affluents of the Danube in the XVth Article of the Treaty of Paris of 1856, which applied the Vienna regulations to that river, they might be considered to be applicable to the Pruth.

2. That your Lordship requested we would take that point into our consideration, and inform you whether, in our opinion, the Pruth was intended to be included in the wording of the XVth Article of the Treaty of 1856, which declared that the principles of the Congress of Vienna of 1815 respecting the navigation of rivers was to be applied to the Danube and its mouths.

3. That Mr. Hammond also inclosed copies of the Treaties of Vienna, Paris, and London, together with Colonel Stokes' despatches Nos. 16, 17, and 19, on which our Report of 19th April was founded; also two further despatches from that gentleman, (Nos. 21 and 22); and one from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Bucharest (No. 40), inclosing copies of the Convention for the navigation of the Pruth, together with Protocols of the Mixed Commission of the Pruth, and the Regulations and Tariff exacted by them.

4. That Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations which we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the XVth Article of the Treaty of 1856 declares that the principles established by the Act of the Congress of Vienna for the regulation of the navigation of rivers which separate or traverse different States "shall in future be equally applied to the Danube and its mouths." Amongst those principles we find it laid down in Article CX of the Act of Vienna that "the system which shall be established, as well for the levying of dues as for the maintenance of the police, shall, as far as possible, be the same for the whole course of the river, and shall extend, unless there be particular circumstances in the way, to those of its branches and confluents which in their navigable course separate or traverse different States."

We are, on the whole, of opinion that the Treaty of Paris brings the River Danube and its mouths within the principle laid down in the above Article, and that unless there be particular grounds for excepting the Pruth from the operation of that principle of which we are not aware, we think that the Pruth, as a navigable confluent of the Danube separating different States, falls within it. We have assumed that the Pruth separates or traverses in its navigable course Turkish or Roumanian, Russian, and Austro-Hungarian territory.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received July 18.)

My Lord, Temple, July 17, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence which has taken place between the Foreign Office, the parties concerned, and Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Bucharest, relating to a claim of Messrs. Ward and Rivolta against the Roumanian Government for the restitution of the caution money deposited by him in 1864, to obtain a concession from the Moldo-Wallachian Government for the construction of railways in Wallachia.

That I should perceive from the correspondence that the steps taken by Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Bucharest have failed to obtain a satisfactory settlement of Messrs. Ward and Rivolta's claim, and that Mr. Green states that unless stronger measures are taken, he sees no prospect of obtaining any settlement. That under these circumstances Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course which should now be taken in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the question of right in this case depends upon the conditions of the concession, whether, according to those conditions, the Roumanian Government was entitled, on the 10th May, 1865, to annul the concession and declare the caution money to be forfeited to the State. There is no copy of the concession amongst the papers submitted to me, and Mr. Ward does not appear to have prepared any memoir in support of the claim of himself and Mr. Rivolta to have the caution money refunded to them, notwithstanding Mr. Green's request at an early stage of the proceedings.

On the other hand it would appear from the memoir drawn up in defence of the course pursued by the Roumanian Government, which is inclosed in Mr. Green's despatch of 18th March, 1870, that the Roumanian Government* justifies the course which it has adopted by reference to Articles 7 and 8 of the Concession. As far as I am at present informed, I am of opinion that the Roumanian Government have the letter of the Concession in their favour, and that Her Majesty's Government cannot claim of right on behalf of Messrs. Ward and Rivolta that the caution money should be refunded to them.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 29th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 26th June, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying Report from Mr. Consul-General Eldridge, relative to Mr. Vice-Consul Mercer's application for permanent protection to his adopted son.† That Mr. Eldridge's previous despatch was likewise inclosed. Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would take this matter again into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course which it would be proper to pursue with regard to this application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That under the circumstances of this case, as the adoption of children amongst the Christian inhabitants of Tripoli is fully recognized by the Lex Loci, I am of opinion that your Lordship may properly extend to the adopted son of Mr. Mercer the same degree of protection which would be granted to a natural son of a British subject born within the Ottoman dominions.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us for consideration at our early convenience, with the papers inclosed in his letter of the 21st ultimo, a futher letter from Sir E. In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That if we are to regard Sir E. Hornby's letter as submitted to us in connection with the papers on the Turkish order in Council and rules, on which we have lately advised, it does not appear to us that as far as that Order and those rules are concerned, we need trouble your Lordship with any further observations. The letter, however, raises large and important questions of a general character, not confined to one country only, which our own knowledge and the information now before us are not sufficient to enable us usefully to discuss; against the general good sense and prudence of Sir E. Hornby's recommendations there seems nothing to be said, but we need more local and detailed information to be able to say how far they can be practically applied, as he desires, with a prospect of good results. We would suggest that before anything is done in the way of drafting either an Order in Council or Rules of Procedure, the gentlemen or some of them mentioned by Sir E. Hornby should be consulted, and their opinion obtained as to the course proposed by him. Expense, and in the end time, will probably be saved by doing this in the first instance. We may perhaps properly inform your Lordship, that as to those of the gentlemen mentioned by Sir E. Hornby, with whom we are acquainted, we entirely concur in his estimate of them, and with some we have not the honour of being acquainted.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received September 8.)

Temple, September 7, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 1st instant, stating that in reference to our Report of the 30th August, 1871, he was directed by your Lordship to state that your Lordship also wished to obtain our opinion, whether the information in the possession of the Foreign Office, as shown in the inclosed papers, was sufficient to deal in a satisfactory manner with the questions therein adverted to as to irregularities of Judicial proceedings and charges on the part of British Vice-Consuls in Turkey, and complaints as to the Consular Court system, or whether further inquiry was needed; and if so, in what manner we would recommend it should be made.

And that now the subject was under consideration your Lordship wished that it should be placed on a throughly satisfactory footing; and that he (Mr. Odo Russell) was to request that we would be so good as to take this point into consideration and favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this point into consideration and have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the information in the possession of the Foreign Office is not sufficient to enable your Lordship to deal in a thoroughly satisfactory manner with the questions adverted to in the inclosed papers. We think it would be desirable for your Lordship to require a return from each Vice-Consul in Turkey of the number and nature of the cases, in which he has been called upon during the last three years to exercise jurisdiction, distinguishing where he has been required, as he conceives by custom, to exercise jurisdiction in invitos, and where he has exercised it with consent of parties. Your Lordship will thus be enabled to ascertain what are the requirements of British subjects in Turkey, as regards the action of British Vice-Consuls in settling their disputes, and when those requirements are ascertained, we shall be better able to advise your Lordship both as to the nature of the jurisdiction, if any, which should be conferred on Vice-Consuls, and the charges which may be properly imposed upon those who may have recourse to it.

No. 222.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received September 23.)

My Lord, Temple, September 23, 1871.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 7th instant, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour you with our opinion upon the merits of the existing controversy between the Rouman Government and the holders of Rouman railway bonds.

2. That the questions in dispute are based upon a Convention signed in 1868, by which a concession was granted to Dr. Strousberg and his associates, who undertook to construct, within three years, certain lines of railway. The capital for the construction of the lines was to be provided by the issue from time to time, in exchange for certificates showing sums actually expended upon the works, or upon other conditions specified in the Convention, of bonds bearing interest at the rate of 7½ per cent., such interest being as the bondholders hold, immediately, or as the Rouman Government hold, provisionally, guaranteed by Roumania.

3. That the three years specified in the Concession have now expired; the works of the railways have been only partially and imperfectly executed; the Concessionnaires, notwithstanding this, have succeeded, owing to the complicity, it is asserted, of the agent appointed in the interests of Roumania, in issuing bonds to the full value of the capital estimated for the whole amount of the lines, completed and uncompleted; the interest upon these bonds has not been paid; and the bondholders have called on Roumania to act upon her guarantee. This appeal has been met by the passing of a law the effect of which is to repudiate all responsibility for the interest, and to offer to the bondholders, in liquidation of their claims, the value of the completed works.

4. That the case of the Rouman Government would be found amply detailed in the Memorandum furnished by that Government to the Porte, which accompanied the inclosed despatch from Sir H. Elliot (No. 307). The case of the bondholders is sketched in the Memorandum communicated by the German Chargé d'Affaires, which was transmitted therewith.

5. That there is a further point connected with this controversy upon which your Lordship would also be glad to be favoured with our opinion.

6. That the bonds that were issued were principally taken up in Germany, though a certain portion of them found their way to this country and elsewhere. The German Government has taken up the case in the interests of its subjects, and holds, as we would see from the Memorandum above referred to, that as the Rouman Government has no international status, the remedy of the bondholders would lie in an appeal to the Porte as Suzerain.

7. That in a despatch therewith inclosed (No. 71), which Mr. Odo Russell addressed to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Berlin, he pointed out that if the Porte, in answer to such an appeal, were to intervene in the matter, she could not support her intervention by force without the consent of the Powers parties to the Treaty of 1856; but the point has also to be considered whether the case might equitably be met by an action brought by the representatives of the bondholders in a Turkish Court of Law, and it is upon this point that your Lordship would wish to have our opinions.

8. That in order to put us in possession of the sources of information upon which a judgment could be formed, Mr. Odo Russell transmitted to us—

(1.) The Capitulations between Great Britain and Turkey, signed in 1809, in which he would specially call our attention to Article 24.

(2.) A Memorandum drawn up in the Foreign Office relative to the application to Roumania of Treaties between Turkey and foreign Powers.

(3.) The Treaty of Paris of 1856.

(4.) The Convention of 1858 relative to the organization of Roumania with.

(5.) An Annex to that Convention signed in 1864.

(6.) The Treaty of Commerce between Great Britain and Turkey concluded in 1861, by which existing Capitulations or Treaties were confirmed.

9. That Mr. Odo Russell observed that as Germany has engagements with Turkey equally binding as regards the interests of her subjects with those held by this country, the position of German and British bondholders in this case would be in the main identical.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That upon the general question submitted to us in Mr. Odo Russell's letter, we beg to report to your Lordship that the Roumanian Government may, in our opinion, be properly held to have guaranteed, under the terms of the Concession voted by the Roumanian Chambers in 1868, the payment of interest to the bondholders at the rate of 7½ per cent. annually from the date of the issue of each bond.

We agree also in the view taken of this guaranty by M. de Krause, that the Roumanian Government cannot with right claim what civilians term beneficium ordinis et excressionis; in other words, cannot require that each bondholder shall sue to judgment the parties in whose names the bonds are issued before he can claim from the guaranteeing Government payment of the interest in accordance with the notification on the face of each bond.

Upon the particular question raised in Mr. Odo Russell's letter, whether the case might equitably be met by an action brought by the representatives of the bondholders in a Turkish Court, by which we presume Mr. Odo Russell to mean by a suit brought at the Sublime Porte under the provisions of Article 24 of the Capitulations of 1809, to which our attention has been specially invited, we are unable to advise your Lordship with any confidence, as we have not any certain information as to the privileges and immunities of the two Principalities as guaranteed by the parties to the Convention of Paris of the 19th August, 1858. In the absence, however, of such information, we are disposed to advise your Lordship that it would be a violent construction of the 24th Article of the Capitulations of 1809 to seek to apply the letter of it to the present case. We consider that the intention of that Article was to protect British subjects from unfair litigation on the part of Ottoman subjects as plaintiffs, and that if the latter part of the Article has not fallen into total disuetude, it would be a disadvantage to British merchants resident within the Principalities for Her Majesty's Government to maintain that it applies to all cases where they may have causes of action as plaintiffs against Roumanian merchants for an amount exceeding the value of 2,000 aspers. We think it right also to point out to your Lordship that as the bonds in question are limited in value to 100 thalers, which is specified in the notification on the face of them, it might possibly be contended by the Roumanian Government that if the bondholders should seek a remedy at law against that Government on its guaranty, they must sue separately on each bond, which would take their case entirely out of the scope of the 24th Article of the Capitulations of 1809 as regards the right of being heard at the Sublime Porte.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th September instant, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers respecting Mr. Petherick's claims against the Egyptian Government arising out of certain measures adopted by the Governor-General of Soudan in 1863, which compelled him to break up his trading establishments on the White Nile, and entailed serious loss upon him. The answer of the Egyptian Government to the representations made to them on Mr. Petherick's behalf was that the measures of the Governor-General were directed against the Slave Trade, in which Mr. Petherick (as they alleged) was extensively engaged, and that they therefore repudiated his claim entirely.

2. That we would observe that for some time Her Majesty's Government declined to lend their official support to Mr. Petherick's claim, but that in 1867 the present Lord Derby, then Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, after an investigation of the whole case, and in consultation with the Law Officers of the Crown, determined to support his claim for the modified amount of 3,839*l.* 13*s.* 5*d.*, as a fair assessment of his losses, with interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum till such time as the claim was satisfied.

3. That after considerable pressure the Egyptian Government have now lodged in the hands of Her Majesty's Government Bonds to the value of 5,151*l.* 16*s.* in satisfaction of this claim, together with copies of the evidence upon which they rely

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a letter from Messrs. Lake and Co., requesting that certain documents, forming part of the archives of the Foreign Office, may be produced at a trial which is about to take place in connection with the affairs of Mr. Finn, late Her Majesty's Consul at Jerusalem; and to request that I would furnish your Lordship, at my earliest convenience, with my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Messrs. Lake's application. The correspondence above referred to was also transmitted.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Lake and Co. should be informed that, upon due notice, a gentleman will attend from the Foreign Office to exhibit the original letters referred to, but that no person can attend, as requested, to prove Mr. Finn's handwriting to other documents.

for the substantiation of their allegation that Mr. Petherick was concerned in the Slave Trade, on the understanding that Her Majesty's Government would adjudicate upon the case, and deal with the money in accordance with the decision they might arrive at.

4. That Mr. Hammond was accordingly to request that we would examine into the whole case, and into the evidence for and against Mr. Petherick, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, whether or not the Egyptian Government had successfully established their charges against Mr. Petherick, and with the reasons for the decision at which we might arrive; or if we required any further evidence from Mr. Petherick, Mr. Hammond was to request that we would indicate the points upon which he should be required to furnish further information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That if the evidence is to be taken as uncontradicted, the Egyptian Government have in our opinion very clearly established their case against Mr. Petherick, but it seems to us to be only just that Mr. Petherick should, before your Lordship arrives at any determination of the case, be furnished with copies of the evidence in support of the charges made against him by the Egyptian Government, and be invited to send at his earliest convenience to your Lordship such observations, if any, as he may think proper to make upon that evidence, and any evidence which he may be able to furnish in refutation of the specific charges.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 30th instant, stating that with reference to previous correspondence on the subject of the claim of Messrs. Ward and Rivolta against the Roumanian Government, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying further letter received from Mr. Rivolta, inclosing a statement of particulars relating to the Railway Concession granted by the Roumanian Government in April 1864 to himself and his associates; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would acquaint your Lordship whether there is anything in the papers now laid before me which would cause me to alter the opinion expressed in my Report of the 17th July last. The previous papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That in addition to the information already supplied Mr. Rivolta should be requested to furnish your Lordship with copies of Articles 8 and 10 of the Concession, the latter being the Article under which the Roumanian Government claimed the right of forfeiting the caution money for the non-observance of Articles 7 and 8, and also with a copy of the petition presented to the reigning Prince by Mr. Ward, referred to in the Journal of the Council of Ministers of the 4th June, 1868. It would be desirable, in my opinion, for your Lordship to have a copy of the latter petition before you with a view to consider whether it will afford just ground for instructing Her Majesty's Agent to press upon the attention of the Roumanian Government the fact that the appeal in the action-at-law against the Roumanian Government was stayed by Mr. Ward on the faith of the Decree of the Council of Ministers in answer to his petition.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received December 5.)

My Lord,

Temple, December 4, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 31st ultimo, on the subject of the claim of Messrs. Ward and Rivolta against the Roumanian Government, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from Mr. Rivolta, forwarding the additional information requested by me, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would again take this case into my consideration and report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which should be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That upon a very careful consideration of the correspondence in this case, and of the representations of Messrs. Ward and Rivolta as to the proper interpretation to be given to the Concession of $\frac{9\text{th}}{21\text{st}}$ May, 1864, the text of which is now before me, I am unable to arrive at any other conclusion than that, which I have already reported to your Lordship, viz., that the Roumanian Government has the letter of the Concession in its favour. Under Article X of that Concession it appears, that the Roumanian Government has the right to declare the caution money forfeited if the works of the railway are not commenced within five months after the grant of the Concession, but under Article VII there is power given to the Roumanian Administration to extend that period in case of revolution, war or other circumstances of force majeure, subject always to an Arbitration. It appears that circumstances of force majeure did arise and the period for commencing the works was extended under an Arbitration with the consent of all parties. In consequence, however, of a rise in the money market Messrs. Ward and Rivolta claimed to have recourse to a second Arbitration on the subject of the rate of interest to be paid them by the Roumanian Government under Article XXI of the Concession. The Roumanian Government declined to be a party to any such Arbitration, as being beyond the proper scope of Articles XXXIV and XXXV of the concession, which provide for Arbitrations, and I am of opinion that the Roumanian Government was entitled to object to an Arbitration on such a subject. Messrs. Ward and Rivolta, notwithstanding the refusal of the Roumanian Government to have recourse to arbitration, constituted an ex parte Board of Arbitrators under the letter of the Treaty, and it is upon the decision of this second Arbitration that Messrs. Ward and Rivolta have to rely, as suspending the power of the Roumanian Government to declare the caution money forfeited. I am of opinion that Messrs. Ward and Rivolta are not entitled to rely on this second Arbitration for any such purpose, and that they have only an equitable claim against the Roumanian Government in consequence of the unexpected rise of the money market, which disabled them, as they allege, from commencing their works within the further period granted to them under the first Arbitration.

With regard to their equitable claim I am of opinion that Messrs. Ward and Rivolta have a strong and equitable claim, inasmuch as the Roumanian Government has admitted by its subsequent Concession to the Moldavian Railway Company, that $8\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. was a fair rate of interest under the altered conditions of the money market, whereas the Concession of $\frac{9\text{th}}{21\text{st}}$ May, 1864, stipulated only for interest to be paid to Messrs. Ward and Rivolta at the rate of $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., with an addition $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. for a sinking fund.

Messrs. Ward and Rivolta in their last communication to your Lordship seem to be of opinion that "the sole issue before your Lordship consists simply in the redemption of a solemn pledge and engagement of the Roumanian Government for the return of the caution money and interest." I have before me the text of the petition on behalf of Messrs. Ward and Rivolta addressed to the reigning Prince of Roumania, as well as the official answer returned to it, but I fail to find any support in them for the statement of Messrs. Ward and Rivolta, that there was any such solemn pledge and engagement on the part of the Roumanian Government. It may indeed be justly contended by them, that the Roumanian Government engaged itself to bring the question of the repayment of the caution money before the Roumanian Chamber, and also that the reigning Prince may have expressed his own opinion that the caution money ought in fairness to be repaid to Messrs. Ward and Rivolta, inasmuch as the Roumanian State had suffered no damage from their default, but I cannot advise your Lordship that the Roumanian Government has at any time engaged itself to Her Majesty's Government to return the caution money and interest to Messrs. Ward and Rivolta, so as to warrant your Lordship in instructiong Mr. Green to insist officially on the redemption of such engagement. It may also deserve your Lordship's attention that under the Concession of $\frac{9\text{th}}{21\text{st}}$ May, 1864, which Mr. Ward signed on behalf of himself and Messrs. Rivolta and Cox, it is provided by Article VIII that the legal domicile of the company shall be Roumanian, and by Article XXXIII that the grantees shall not be entitled to claim any foreign protection in their disputes with the Roumanian Administration on the subject of the Concession. Your Lordship may be disposed to hold generally that British subjects, who accept grants from a foreign power under such conditions, preclude themselves from appealing to the protection of Her Majesty's Government in any dispute, which they may have with the foreign power on the subject of such grants, whilst the Roumanian Government may in the present case justly contend that any disputes between themselves and Messrs. Ward and Rivolta on the subject of the Concession are by the terms of the Concession expressly precluded from being made a subject of international intervention, and may accordingly decline to entertain any official representation from Mr. Green on such a subject.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received December 12.)

My Lord,

Temple, December 11, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letters from the Danube and Black Sea Railway and Kustendjie Harbour Company, complaining of certain proceedings, the particulars of which are therein stated, on the part of the Turkish Government and local anthorities at Kustendjie, and he was to request that I would report to your Lordship my opinion as to the course which it would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, as regards the port of Kustendjic, it would appear from the Convention of the 10th October, 1870, that the Railway Company has ceded to the Ottoman Government all its rights of property over the quays and jetties subject indeed to a right on the part of the Company to make use of them gratuitously during the period stipulated in the Concession of the Railway. The latter Concession is not before me; but it would appear from the Extract No. 5 in Mr. Price's letter, purporting to be a copy of Article 17 of the Danube and Black Sea Railway Concession, dated 15th July, 1857, that it is a different Concession from that of the Port of Kustendjie, which is annulled by Article I of the Convention of the 10th October, 1870, and which bore date 1st September, 1857. It is possible, therefore, that Article 17 of the Railway Concession may properly apply to some of the questions at issue between the Railway Company and the Ottoman Government as regards the drainage of the land over which the railway passes and the proposed alterations in the line of railway, and that upon these questions Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople may properly use his good offices to procure the reference of the dispute between the Railway Company and the Ottoman Government to a Commission in accordance with Mr. Price's request; but as regards the rights of the Company over the Port of Kustendjie I am not prepared to advise your Lordship, without further information as to the provision of the Railway Concession as well as of the Concession of the Port, that Mr. Price is entitled to demand that the dispute which has arisen between the Railway Company and the Ottoman Government in reference to the use of the quays and jetties by the Agents of that Government shall be referred to a Commission in accordance with Article 17 of the Railway Concession.

Temple, December 30, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying communication which has been received from Mr. Rivolta, in reply to a letter which was addressed to him on the 14th instant, founded on my Report of the 4th instant, on the subject of his claim against the Roumanian Government, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would report to your Lordship my opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Rivolta's letter. The former papers in this case were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That Mr. Rivolta may be informed that his claim against the Roumanian Government is, in your Lordship's opinion, only an equitable claim, to which Her Majesty's Agent has been instructed to give from time to time his unofficial support; that the Roumanian Government has never promised to Her Majesty's Agent, as supposed by Mr. Rivolta, that the caution money should be repaid to Mr. Ward, but has limited its promises to bringing the question before the Legislative Chamber, as announced to Mr. Ward himself by the Decree of the Council of Ministers of the 4th June, 1868, in answer to Mr. Ward's Petition of the 22nd February, 1868; that the Roumanian Government has in respect of such promises fulfilled its engagement, but its proposal has been rejected by the Legislative Chamber, with which body, under the political constitution of the Roumanian State, the ultimate decision of the question rested. That your Lordship cannot accede to Mr. Rivolta's view: that there is any outstanding engagement of a distinct and formal character made to Mr. Rivolta through Her Majesty's Agent, the fulfilment of which may be officially insisted upon by Her Majesty's Government; but that your Lordship will be happy to instruct Her Majesty's Agent to give his unofficial support to any further representation which Mr. Rivolta may be disposed to instruct Mr. Ward to make on his behalf in the sense indicated in your Lordship's last communication to Mr. Rivolta. I may venture to observe that in the draft of your Lordship's last letter to Mr. Rivolta it is stated that Mr. Green cannot interfere further officially in regard to his claim. I had thought that Mr. Green's action in the question had been throughout unofficial. If I am in error on this point, the word "unofficial" should be omitted in the answer to be returned to Mr. Rivolta's last letter.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received February 10.)

Temple, February 9, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating—

1st. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two letters from the Treasury, inclosing Reports from their legal adviser on Slave Trade matters:—1st, Upon the Convention recently concluded with the United States of America for the abolition of the Slave Trade Mixed Commission Courts; 2nd, Upon the draft of a similar Convention which is now under negotiation with the Government of Portugal.

2nd. That with respect to the Convention with the United States, Viscount Enfield was to state that while it appeared to your Lordship that the difficulties pointed out by Mr. Rothery in carrying out the Convention as it at present stands are, primâ facie, of vital importance; on the other hand he thinks it very objectionable and hardly creditable to have to propose to the United States' Government the revision of a Convention within so short a time after its conclusion, if it can be avoided.

3rd. That your Lordship requested to be favoured with our opinion, after reading Mr. Rothery's Report, whether we considered it absolutely necessary that the Convention should be revised, and, if so, your Lordship would be glad if we would indicate the minimum amount of alteration necessary to carry it into effect in accordance with British law.

4th. That as regards the Draft Convention with Portugal, there was not the same strong objection to some revision of a Treaty which was not yet signed, and in case we concurred in Mr. Rothery's views, Viscount Enfield was to inclose for our consideration and opinion a revised Draft of the Convention, in which the alterations that Mr. Rothery considered absolutely necessary were marked in red ink, and that we would also observe that Mr. Rothery objected to the form of the proposed Bill for carrying the United States' Convention into effect, and suggested that it would be more simple if the powers it grants were conveyed by the Bill itself, and not by the subsequent issue of Orders in Council; and your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion upon that point, which was, however, of a secondary consideration to that of remodelling the Convention.

5th. That Viscount Enfield was to annex copies of the two Conventions and of the Draft Bill referred to.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

1st. With respect to the American Treaty:—

That, although we are unable to concur in the estimate which Mr. Rothery has formed of the difficulties of carrying the Convention into effect, we so far agree with him as to think it desirable that the procedure in cases of Slave Trading should be substituted for that in matters of maritime prize, and that a supplemental Convention should be entered into, modifying Article 2 in that sense.

We do not advise the proposed omission of so much of that Article as relates to adjudication and rules of evidence, and we think the proposed alterations in Article 3 and in the instructions unnecessary. If the above modification of the procedure be adopted, that portion of the Bill which authorizes the issuing of Orders in Council may be dispensed with.

2nd. With respect to the Portuguese Treaty:—

That we think a similar alteration as to the mode of procedure desirable, if the Portuguese Admiralty Courts take cognizance of slave captures and there is an established order of procedure in such matters.

We observe that in this Treaty the words "rules of evidence to be applied," which are to be found in Article II of the American Treaty, are omitted. The effect of them is to throw in certain cases the burden of proof on the master or owner of the slaver. We think them important for the protection of the captors, and advise their insertion.

We have further to observe that, with regard to the provision of Article III for the release of any negroes found on board a captured vessel, the principle adopted in the Draft Convention differs from that of the Convention with the United States. Mr. Rothery's suggestion introduces another principle altogether. By the Convention with the United States the negroes in all cases are to be handed over to the nearest British authority. Under the Draft Convention with Portugal, they are to be handed over to the nearest authority of the Government whose cruizer has made the capture. Mr. Rothery proposes that they shall be taken to the port of adjudication and given up to the Government of the country in which they are landed. This is entirely at variance with Article II of Annex C of the Treaty of 1842. It throws the burden of releasing and supporting the negroes on the country of the vessel engaged in the Slave Trade, instead of the country of the captor. The advantage attending the provision as it stands is that it insures to the capturing State the liberation of the negroes, whilst the punishment of the slave dealers will be left to the country to which they belong. Upon Mr. Rothery's suggestion both duties will devolve on the latter State, and if it should be supine, the labour of the captors, as regards the liberation of the negroes, will have been in vain. For these reasons we prefer the Treaty as it stands to the proposed alteration of it.

With regard to the word "Declaration," it is the term used in the instructions annexed to the Convention of 1842, and has probably acquired an interpretation by use, which renders it perfectly intelligible.

We do not concur in the objection that the Bill embodies the principal clauses of the Treaty. This is the form in which many similar acts giving effect to Treaties have been drawn, and we think it the correct one.

Temple, February 24, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 20th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence, regarding the circumstances attendant upon the death of Elizear Goulet, a citizen of the United States, and that he was to request that we would take the papers into consideration at our earliest convenience, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps which should be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, in the present state of the Province of Manitoba, it would probably be difficult to secure the punishment of all the persons who may have been in various degrees guilty of criminal conduct in connection with this case. But, as it appears from Mr. McConville's Report that the Magistrates were, and probably continue, ready to issue a warrant against at least one person who took a prominent part in pursuing Goulet, we should advise proceedings to be taken against that person at all events. It will probably turn out that there is no evidence forthcoming which would justify a conviction of any offence known to the law, but the Government will at least have done all in its power to vindicate the administration of justice. We may observe that, judging from these papers, the observations of Mr. Fish, upon which Sir E. Thornton comments, appear to be entirely unwarranted and uncalled for, particularly if it be true that Goulet was one of the persons mainly engaged in bringing about the state of things from which he suffered and of which Mr. Fish complains. But it is for your Lordship to judge how far this is a matter to be notice in any communication you may see fit to address to Sir E. Thornton.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received March 21.)

Temple, March 21, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 20th instant, stating that with reference to his letter of the 15th instant, and to the consultation which was subsequently held in our presence at the Cabinet on the following day, Mr. Hammond transmitted to us therewith by your Lordship's direction the instruction subsequently sent to Her Majesty's Commissioner by telegraph, and we would notice in those instructions, that, after disposing of the first three points of the American proposal, the telegram proceeded to object to the fourth, and that the further telegram from the Commissioners, which he then inclosed, replied to those objections by furnishing further explanations as to the intention of the American Commissioners in making that proposal, and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would consider the proposal as then explained, and report to your Lordship our opinion at our earliest convenience as to the effect of the proposal so explained, and as to the expediency or otherwise of acceding to it, either in its present shape, or in any other form which we might think advisable and safe to be adopted as a rule for the future.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the further telegram by no means removes the objections which we entertain to Article IV. The effect of the first part of that Article is to impose upon Her Majesty's Government an obligation of a most onerous character, nowhere hinted at by any writer of authority on International Law. It would become a duty on the part of the authorities in every port in the Queen's dominions, say, for example, the Port of Hong Kong, on a ship of war of a belligerent Power entering that port, to ascertain and determine at once, without reference to the Home Government—1st, Whether she had departed from some British port in violation of the Foreign Enlistment Act? and, secondly, Whether, after such departure, she had been "duly and lawfully commissioned?" and on determining the first of these questions in the affirmative, the second in the negative, to detain her, whatever might be her force. Should the local authority wrongly determine either of these questions (for the determination of which it will, in nine cases out of ten, have no materials whatever) Her Majesty's Government will incur liability, whether the vessel be detained or not; her non-detention will be treated as a grievance, resulting in damages by one belligerent, her detention, probably, as a cause of war by the other. The mere statement of this proposition appears to us to push the duties of neutral Powers, so far beyond what either principal or precedent would warrant, that we are unable to advise that the IVth Article, either in its present form, or in any form which it occurs to us to suggest, would be safe to be adopted as a rule for the future.

We should have thought it unnecessary to stipulate that, assuming Her Majesty's Government to be answerable for negligently permitting the departure of a vessel in violation of our neutrality, we could purge ourselves of that liability, or in any way lessen it, merely by receiving such a vessel into one of our ports. If this is all that the United States' Government desire, there could be no difficulty in agreeing to its being expressed in plain terms. We think it, however, improbable that this is all they desire, and it appears to us that, under the latter part of the IVth Article, in its present form, opportunities might arise for raising questions very embarrassing to a neutral Power, for the raising of which it does not appear to us expedient to afford facilities.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received April 1.)

Temple, April 1, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a further telegram from the High Commissioners at Washington, dated March 30th, containing the answer of the United States' Commissioners to the amended propositions respecting the "Alabama" arbitration, which were sent from this country on the 27th of March, and which, together with previous telegraphic correspondence on the same subject, were also inclosed; and he was to request that we would take this last telegram into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with any observations that we might see occasion to make upon it.

1871

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That with respect to the omission of "as above" after "carry on war," we do not think the omission should be insisted on, inasmuch as the words seem almost necessary to explain the sense in which the words "cruize or carry on war" are intended. With respect to the insertion of "as above" after "warlike use," this involves the question whether Her Majesty's Government think fit to insist on limiting the meaning of "special adaptation" to "fitting out, arming, or equipping," or whether they are content to agree that it shall be wider. We have to observe that the form in which it is now suggested, that the commencement of Clause 4 shall stand, imposes the obligation on a neutral of detaining any vessel "specially adapted" to warlike use, with intent, &c., which may have departed, without negligence on the part of the neutral, at any port in the neutral dominions which she may enter, if there be reasonable grounds of believing that she may have "so departed," i.e., without negligence. We certainly prefer the words which we understood to be adopted by the Cabinet, "in violation of the obligations under Articles I, II, and III," or words to that effect. It may indeed be right that, if a ship equipped for war has escaped from our ports by a stratagem which no reasonable diligence could prevent, she should be detained if she subsequently enters our waters; but we fear that such a stipulation might be used in this arbitration to make Her Majesty's Government liable in respect of the "Alabama" for her reception at the Cape if the case against Her Majesty's Government as to her original departure failed. We suggest that the qualification of "having reasonable cause to believe" should extend to the question of the commission of the vessel, as well as of her illegal departure. We should prefer the insertion of the words "as above" after the words "any liability" in the IVth Article; but we do not advise Her Majesty's Government to insist upon their insertion if the words which we understood to be adopted by the Cabinet are introduced in the earlier part of the Article.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received April 5.)

Temple, April 3, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a letter which has been received at the Foreign Office from the Colonial Department, inclosing a Memorandum and Papers prepared in Canada respecting a portion of the boundary between the British and American territories in North America under the VIth Article of the Treaty of Ghent. Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose a Memorandum which has been prepared in the Foreign Office on the subject, and to request that we would take these Papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion whether the objection raised by the Canadian Government to the authority of the maps prepared by the Commissioners under the VIth Article of the Treaty of Ghent is one which could be sustained.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are unable to agree to the proposition that "maps are not receivable in evidence of the exact position of the boundary line determined by the Commissioners," or that (as put by Captain Cameron) "if the description given in the Commissioners' Report be held to support the accuracy of their map, then their decision, being contrary to the intent of the Treaty of 1783, is subject to reconsideration, for the Commissioners were only authorized to act in conformity with the true intent of the said Treaty." The latter proposition amounts to this—that their award is not to be conclusive, but may be questioned by either party at any time. The duty of the Commissioners to "designate the boundary by a Report or Declaration" does not, in our opinion, preclude them from declaring the boundary by means of a map, if they think fit to do so. We, however, so far agree with the Canadian Government, considering the character of the Report and of the reference to the map, as to think that the map can only be referred to as illustrating the Report, and that if the Report and the map should be found in any particular at irreconcilable variance, the Report must prevail. We cannot but observe, however, that it appears improbable that the Commissioners, intending no doubt to illustrate and explain their meaning by a map, should have drawn their map altogether at variance with their Report, and the conclusion that the one contradicts the other should not be arrived at except on the most cogent grounds. We are not altogether satisfied that such a case of contradiction has been established.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 1st instant, stating that with reference to his letter of the 24th ultimo, respecting the boundary between the Dominion of Canada and the United States at the mouth of the River St. Clair, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter on the subject, with its inclosures, which had been received from the Colonial Office;* and he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration in connection with the papers inclosed in his other letter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, by the first Report of Mr. McMicken, dated August 1st, 1870, it would appear from tracings, probably accurate, of the maps referred to in the Report of the Boundary Commissioners, "quite evident that the whole of the Canal now being constructed is within Canadian waters." It appears, however, that on Mr. McMicken subsequently employing Mr. Forster, who is represented as a gentleman of the highest competence, to make an accurate survey, Mr. Forster reports on the 22nd November, 1870, that, according to the map, a small portion only of the Canal is in Canadian waters.

On the principles applicable to the construction of the Report of the Commissioners we have nothing to add to our former remarks, and have only to observe that it still seems to us very difficult to contend that the Report and the map are irreconcilable, and that in our opinion, where the written description of the boundary is vague, as it certainly is in many places, the map referred to by the Commissioners must be looked to for its clear definition.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter, with its inclosure, from the Colonial Office, relating to the case of Richard Baker Caldwell, who was surrendered to the United States' Government under the Extradition Treaty on the charges of forgery and uttering forged paper, and who appeared to have been subjected to legal proceedings in the United States for an offence under the laws of that country for which he was not surrendered, and for which he was not liable to surrender under the Treaty in question; and Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

* From Colonial Office, March 30, 1871, two Inclosures and three Maps.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That this is not a case in which Her Majesty's Government would, in our opinion, be justified in reclaiming the surrender of the petitioner from the United States' Government. The obligation of Great Britain under the Convention of 1842 is qualified by no other condition than that evidence of a definite kind shall be forthcoming of the fugitive having committed one of the crimes enumerated in the Convention. It appears that such evidence was produced to the satisfaction of the Canadian authorities, and the petitioner was thereupon surrendered to the United States' Government. It further appears, from the decision of the Judge of the Circuit Court of the Southern District of New York upon the demurrer of the petitioner, that he has been duly indicted for the offence by reason of which he was surrendered, and, apparently, is to be tried for it. We are of opinion that there is nothing in the Convention which would preclude the United States from indicting the petitioner for an additional offence which is not enumerated in the Convention, so long as such proceedings are not substituted in place of due proceedings against him on the charge by reason of which he was surrendered.

My Lord, Temple, April 28, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the United States' Chargé d'Affaires in London to the United States' Consular Agent at Swansea, in regard to the case of Alfred S. Williams, a British subject, who is stated to be imprisoned for desertion from the United States' army, and suggesting steps to be taken to procure his release. Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would take this matter into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I see no objection to your Lordship instructing Her Majesty's Minister at Washington to bring the case of Alfred S. Williams to the attention of Mr. Fish officiously, and I should advise that a communication should be made to the Rev. My Lord, Temple, May 11, 1871.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 4th instant, stating—

1. That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter, with its inclosures, from the Colonial Office respecting the alleged murder by the master and certain of the crew of the American vessel "Montezuma" of Antoine Anthony, a British subject, at Portsmouth, Dominica, on the 8th of March last, and requesting to be informed what instructions should be given to the authorities in Dominica or other British islands with a view to procure the punishment of the persons implicated.

2. That Mr. Hammond was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course to be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That it does not appear that there is much chance of the "Montezuma" coming within British jurisdiction, so as to allow of the parties, against whom the verdict of the Coroner's inquest stands out, being taken into custody.

We therefore think it desirable that the attention of the American Government should be called to the case, and a request be made to them to cause the accused to be apprehended whenever they come within American jurisdiction, with a view to their extradition.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received May 30.)

My Lord, Temple, May 30, 1871.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th instant, stating that notice has been given of a question to be asked Mr. Gladstone on Thursday next, the 1st June, in the House of Commons, viz.: "Whether the existing law is sufficient to enable the Government to carry out the rules specified in Article VI of the Treaty of Washington of the 8th May, 1871, and if not, whether the Government will introduce a measure this Session to give them the authority necessary for the purpose?" Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose a copy of the Treaty, the ratifications of which, however, have not yet been exchanged, and he was to request that we would take the point proposed to be raised by the question into immediate consideration, and at our earliest convenience report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think it right to point out, that although the Foreign Enlistment Act (by sec. 10) gives the power of punishing any person concerned in increasing the warlike force of any ship coming into our ports, it does not give the power of detaining such a vessel solely on account of such augmentation. This question was considered when the Foreign Enlistment Act of the last Session was being prepared, and great difficulties were felt in the way of detaining ships, which were neither built, nor equipped in, nor dispatched from our ports, but which merely came to a British port to take in (for example) a supply of coals, which might under circumstances be construed as "augmenting their warlike force," especially if such ships were ships-of-war. We have the undoubted power, independently of legislation, to forbid any ships, whether public or private, entering our waters, and to require any ship immediately to depart which is found to be using them for armament or enlistment, or in any other respect as a "base of naval operations;" and we have the express power by statute of punishing any person within our jurisdiction assisting in such operations. We are on the whole inclined to think that the existing law is sufficient to enable us to carry the rules into effect according to their fair and reasonable interpretation, and suggest that the question should be so answered. We have thought it desirable, however, to submit the above observations for the consideration of Her Majesty's Government.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received June 30.)

Temple, June 29, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 26th instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 17th instant he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a draft of a further notification respecting the appointment of an Agent at Washington to receive and classify British claims, together with a draft of the instructions which it had been proposed to address to Mr. Howard appointing him Agent for that purpose, and to attend the Commissioners under the XIIIth Article of the Treaty of Washington.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to inclose copies of the notification issued in pursuance of the Claims' Convention of the 8th February, 1853, together with copies of the Treaty of Washington, and of the first notification approved by us in our above-named Report.*

And that we would observe the present draft notification differed in some degree from the notifications issued in 1853-54, paragraphs having been inserted stating that all the papers relating to the British claims would be forwarded to Washington, and that Her Majesty's Government did not pledge themselves by receiving the claims to support them nor admit their validity.

And Mr. Hammond was further pleased to add that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, whether that notification and the draft instructions were right and proper, as it was desirable that the appointment of the Agent should be carried out with as little delay as possible.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That with regard to the proposed notification, we should advise that in page 1, line 4, of the draft notification, the words "the five next" should be inserted before the words "following Articles," and after the word "Agent," in page 1, line 16, the words "for Her Majesty's Government and is authorized."

We think the meaning of the concluding words of the 4th paragraph open to some doubt. We should be disposed to read them as engaging that Her Majesty's Government would receive all claims and present them to the Commission, without pledging themselves to support any claim which they might think invalid. We collect, however, from the instructions to the Agent, that this is not intended, inasmuch as he is directed not to present any claims unless the Counsel advises their presentation. We suggest that it would be advisable to make it clear (if it be so intended), that Her Majesty's Government, though receiving all claims for the purpose of presentation, do not undertake, as a matter of course, to present them.

We have further to report with regard to the draft instructions proposed to be addressed to Mr. Howard, that we are of opinion that he should be instructed to issue a public notice of the locality of his office, after he has opened it, as the place to which the statements of claims to be submitted by him to the Commissioners should be addressed, as we observe in the notification proposed to be issued by your Lordship that Her Majesty's Legation at Washington is the place specified for the transmission of such claims to Mr. Howard.

We have further to observe that no instructions are conveyed to Mr. Howard as to the circumstances under which Counsel is to be heard before the Commissioners. We incline to the opinion that according to the Treaty the requirement in each case that Counsel should be heard should be made by Her Majesty's Agent. Your Lordship's instructions state that Counsel will be hereafter appointed to draw up the written cases in support of the several claims, and to argue them before Commissioners. We think it would be desirable that some precise instruction should be given to Mr. Howard on this head, either that he should always make such requirement whenever Counsel advised it, which would be in accordance, we think, with the general view which your Lordship has adopted of the Counsel's responsibility, or that he should exercise a discretion in each case, unless the claimants prayed that Counsel should be heard in support of their claim.

We have no additional suggestion to offer to your Lordship, and we think in all other respects the draft instructions are proper and suitable for the object.

We have, &c.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received August 16.)

Temple, August 15, 1871.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying drafts of instructions, which it was proposed to address to

---

* August 20, September 19, 1853; January 20, August 24, 1854.

Mr. Russell Gurney, Her Majesty's Claims' Commissioner, under the XIIth Article of the Treaty of Washington; and to Mr. Carlisle, who had been appointed Counsel for British claimants; and that he was to request us to take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, whether the instructions were right and proper to be sent.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, as regards the instructions proposed to be addressed to Mr. Russell Gurney, we have suggested in the margin one or two slight alterations in the text, and, subject to such alterations, we are of opinion that they are right and proper to be addressed to him.

We have also made two or three slight alterations in the text of the instructions proposed to be addressed to Mr. Carlisle, so as to secure uniformity of expression between them and the instructions to Mr. Russell Gurney, and we have suggested one special alteration, so as to render it clear beyond a doubt that it is the intention of Her Majesty's Government that all the claims received by Her Majesty's Agent for submission to the Commissioners, which are not barred by the XIIth Article of the Treaty, should be presented to the Commissioners; and that the discretion of Mr. Carlisle is to be exercised in determining the degree of support to be given to each claim by further statement or argument on his part. In all other respects, we are of opinion that these instructions are right and proper.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received August 18.)

My Lord, Temple, August 18, 1871.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office relative to the Canadian Fishery question, and he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, on the points raised therein.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, with respect to the question raised in the letter of Sir J. Macdonald to Lord Lisgar, it certainly appears to us that it would be reasonable and proper that such formal and official assurance (as is suggested by Sir John Macdonald) should be given, to the effect that the Imperial Government would give notice to the Government of the United States of the termination of the Fishery arrangements at such time after the period fixed by the Treaty as they should be requested to give the notice by the Government of the Dominion. This, however, is rather a matter of policy than of law, and we offer our opinion only because we are invited to express it by your Lordship.

As to the other question, on which our opinion is desired, we think that as the XXXIIIrd Article of the Treaty seems to contemplate the possible endurance of the Fishery arrangements beyond the ten years and the two years of notice, it would hardly be expedient to suspend the laws of the Dominion for the period of twelve years only. It might seem to indicate an unfriendly feeling towards the United States, and a foregone conclusion, to put an end to the Fishery arrangements at the first moment possible consistently with the Treaty. The payment of the compensation in a lump sum may be, indeed, a very good reason for putting an end, in fact, to the arrangement when the time, for which the compensation may be considered adequate, has run out. But we suggest that it would be better if the Government of the Dominion were content, as before, to suspend the Fishery Laws for the period of the duration of the Treaty. This would not prevent them from giving the notice, through the agency of the Imperial Government, when the ten years have run out, if they thought fit to do so. But it would leave them free to act as they might think best when the time came, and would remove all possible imputation of unfriendliness from the Government of the Dominion.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from the Secretary to the Association for the Protection of Commercial Interests respecting the claims of British subjects on account of the losses inflicted by the "Alabama" and other Confederate cruizers during the late Civil War in America; and that he (Mr. Russell) was to request that we would take that letter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter (dated the 15th September), with its inclosures, from Mr. Samuel Goddard, respecting the claim of his firm for compensation on account of the losses they sustained through the acts of the "Alabama," and he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Goddard.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That your Lordship may, in our opinion, properly reply in this case, that Her Majesty's Government is not prepared to admit claims of this description as being properly made upon it, even supposing that claims of this sort are within the scope of the Treaty of Washington. If they are so, they should be prosecuted before the Tribunal appointed for the consideration of them. But Her Majesty's Government must not be understood to express any opinion that such claims as these are in fact within the scope of the Treaty. We may venture to call your Lordship's attention to the probability that claims by British subjects will be made in considerable number, and to the importance of the Government determining, as a Government, in what way they are to be dealt with.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating:—

1. That with reference to our Report of the 25th ultimo, on Mr. Goddard's claim for losses sustained by the acts of the "Alabama," he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that your Lordship thought it might on the whole be better to adopt a general form of answer to be given to that letter and to other letters of the same description, such, for instance, as that from Messrs. Bircham and Co., therewith inclosed, which might thereafter be received; and Mr. Hammond was accordingly to submit for our consideration the following terms, in which your Lordship considered such answer might be couched.

After acknowledging their letters, respecting claims for losses sustained by them by the proceedings of the "Alabama," go on to say: "I am to state to you, in reply, that the claims for depredations committed by the 'Alabama' are not admitted by Her Majesty's Government; and that Her Majesty's Government cannot therefore entertain, or support, or advise upon any claims of British subjects, arising out of such depredations, or maintain any claims upon the Government of the United States arising out of acts committed against the persons or property of British subjects during the period between the 13th April, 1861, and the 9th April, 1865, inclusive, other than those coming within the XIIth and five next following Articles of the Treaty of Washington of the 8th of May, 1871."

2. That Mr. Hammond inclosed the papers which we had already had before us, with memoranda on the front referred to.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the general form of answer proposed to be given to letters of the description mentioned in Mr. Hammond's letter may in our opinion be properly adopted by your Lordship.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a copy of a telegraphic despatch from Mr. Henry Howard, the Secretary to the British Commission at Washington, requesting to be informed whether he was to present all claims of British subjects which he might receive from the Foreign Office or from Her Majesty's Legation at Washington, without waiting to hear from the claimants themselves.

That he was to transmit to us the three notifications which had been published in the London "Gazette" in regard to the presentation of claims under the Treaty of the 8th May; and he was to request us to favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion as to the course which Mr. Howard should pursue.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That Mr. Howard may, in our opinion, be properly instructed by your Lordship not to present to the Commissioners any documents which may have been transmitted to him from the Foreign Office or the Legation on behalf of any claimant, until such claimant shall have filed in the Office of the Commission the formal statement of his claim, as required by Rule 1 of the Commissioners. We think it right at the same time to call your Lordship's attention to the fact that the introductory part of Rule 1, which requires the additional memorial to be filed in the Office of the Commissioners, does not appear in the text of the rules and regulations of the Commissioners as published in the "Times" newspaper of the 17th October, 1871.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received December 9.)

My Lord, Temple, December 9, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th October last, stating that he was directed to state to me that Rear-Admiral Prevost, who acted as Her Majesty's Commissioner in the year 1857 in an endeavour to determine the water boundary under the Oregan Treaty of 1846, has been engaged for some time in collecting materials for the case to be presented to the Arbiter under the XXXIVth Article of the Treaty of Washington of the 8th May last, and that he had made such progress that the time had now arrived at which the case itself might be drawn. Mr. Hammond was therefore pleased to request that I would place myself in communication with Admiral Prevost, who occupies a room in the Foreign Office, with a view to prepare, in concert with him, the draft of such a case as I might consider best calculated to set forth and support the claim on the part of Her Majesty's Government, and which, with the accompanying evidence, must be laid before the Emperor of Germany, who has accepted the office of Arbitrator within six months from the 17th June, the date of the exchange of the ratifications of the Treaty.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, with the assistance of Admiral Prevost, I have drawn up such a case as I consider best calculated to set forth the claim on the part of Her Majesty's Government, with an Appendix containing such evidence as I thought might fitly accompany it. I have also, with the assistance of Mr. Hamilton, of the Legation at Paris, settled a French translation of the case for the use of the Arbitrator, to assist him in understanding any technical expressions in the case of Her Majesty's Government which should, however, be considered as submitted to him for his arbitration and award in the English language only.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to me a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas, relative to the establishment of a war tax upon houses in that capital, and he was to request that I would take this despatch into my consideration, and, with reference to Señor Guzman's declaration, that "foreigners were, in his opinion, in no way exempt from the payment thereof either by their privileges as such or by any Treaty stipulations whatever," will furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions that should be sent to Mr. Middleton. And Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose for convenience of reference copies of the Treaties referred to in Mr. Middleton's despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the house tax in question is not, in my opinion, within the exemptions secured to British subjects in Venezuela under the Treaties of 1825 and 1834. I think it is immaterial for what necessity of the State this tax may be required, if it is levied equally and generally on all houses inhabited by their owners, and British subjects pay no greater tax than is paid by Venezuelan citizens, your Lordship may, I think, properly instruct Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas not to raise any question of Treaty privilege on behalf of British subjects as regards this particular tax.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas, inclosing a correspondence which has passed between him and the Venezuelan Minister for Foreign Affairs relative to certain British subjects residing in Caracas having been deprived of their certificates of nationality. Mr. Hammond was also pleased to inclose the previous papers referred to by Mr. Middleton, and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which should be addressed to Mr. Middleton upon the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am unable to understand from the papers submitted to my consideration upon what precise principle certificates of British nationality have been granted by Her Majesty's Legation at Caracas. Señor Guzman in his despatch of the 28th April, 1871, addressed to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, states that "the certificate of nationality is a document, which grants certain rights and immunities to an individual within the Venezuelan territory." If this be a correct statement of the object of the certificate, which it would seem to have been the practice of Her Majesty's Legation at Caracas to issue from time to time to persons born within the Venezuelan territory of British parentage, it may deserve your Lordship's consideration whether such practice should be continued under the altered state of the Venezuelan law, or if it should be desirable to continue the practice for reasons known to your Lordship, whether the language of the certificate should not be modified, so as to bring it within the principles laid down in the despatch of Lord Stanley of the 8th July, 1868, under which persons born within Venezuelan territory, although of British parentage, would not be entitled to claim of right British protection against the Venezuelan authorities. With regard to the question immediately at issue between Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires and Señor Guzman, I am of opinion that the mode of proceeding on the part of the Venezuelan authorities in forcibly depriving persons born of British parents within Venezuelan territory of their certificates of British nationality is open to strong remonstrance. The proper course of that Government, it appears to me, would have been either to request Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to call in all such certificates, in cases where parties holding them were no longer entitled under the altered state of the Venezuelan law to the privileges of foreigners within Venezuelan territory, or to issue a Proclamation declaring that in such cases the certificates should no longer entitle the bearers by reason of their foreign origin to any exemption from the obligations imposed by Venezuelan law on all natural-born citizens of the Republic. There is, however, another class of cases, according to Mr. Middleton's despatch of the 22nd April, 1871, in which it would appear that parties have been deprived by the Venezuelan authorities of their certificates of British nationality, who are under no obligation of native allegiance to the Republic of Venezuela. In such cases two courses are open to your Lordship, either to instruct Mr. Middleton to insist upon restitution being made of such certificates, or if that be impracticable from the insurbordination of the military chiefs, then to authorize him in all cases where he has no doubt of the parties who have been deprived of their certificates, having been born of British parents in British possessions to issue to them fresh certificates of British nationality precisely as, I presume, would be the course of proceeding, if the original certificate had been accidentally destroyed or lost.

Temple, June 15, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 14th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 1st instant upon the subject of the proceedings of the Venezuelan authorities in forcibly depriving certain British subjects resident in that country of their certificates of nationality, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying draft of a despatch founded on my Report, which has been prepared for transmission to Mr. Middleton, and also a further despatch upon this subject which has been received from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas; Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this despatch into my consideration, together with the former papers, which were also inclosed, and furnish your Lordship with any observations I might have to make thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the despatch prepared by your Lordship may, in my opinion, be properly transmitted to Mr. Middleton, as it appears from the correspondence received from Her Majesty's Minister at Caracas that the certificate of the British nationality* of Volcan, who is stated to have been born in Jamaica, has not been restored to him.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received June 28.)

Temple, June 28, 1871.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 25th ultimo, upon the subject of the blockade by the present Government of Venezuela of part of the coast of that Republic which remains in the hands of the party opposed to the Government, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing further correspondence relating to this matter, and also to the seizure by a ship of war of the Venezuelan Government of the British vessel "Unison" for alleged infraction of the blockade, and of the British vessels "Helen" and "Sophie" by the Insurgent Government. That the despatch from Mr. Middleton already submitted to me is also inclosed, together with some further correspondence relating to the same subject. Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the course which should be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that a state of war exists between the Republic, of which the President has issued a notification of the blockade of certain Venezuelan ports, and the insurgents, who are in possession of those ports, and that the Government of the Republic has made known the existence of hostilities to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas in a manner sufficient to entitle it to the exercise of belligerent rights against British commerce. Her Majesty's Government will consequently not be justified in objecting to the capture of British vessels on the high seas by the blockading squadron, but it may properly insist upon such vessels being sent forthwith before a Prize Court for the purpose of judicial inquiry, whether they have in any way infringed the belligerent rights of the captors. It follows also that the insurgents will be also entitled to the exercise of belligerent rights against neutral commerce, subject to the responsibility of making compensation, where the capture shall prove to be unjustifiable. I have so little information as to the circumstances under which the "Helen" was captured, that I am unable to form an opinion whether her capture and detention would have proved on inquiry to have been justifiable, as much would depend upon the nature of the cargo on board the "Helen" and her destination, respecting which facts no information is given in the letter of Mr. George Wuppermann, as Mr. W. Ehlers has effected his escape, and the "Helen" has also been carried away by her captain and crew, there is in my opinion nothing for Her Majesty's Government to do in the matter of this vessel. As regards the "Sophie," it is not clear from the same gentleman's letter whether she has been sunk or not by her captors, but the letter states that she was pillaged, which was clearly unjustifiable. Further information may properly be required by your Lordship as to this vessel, but I fear that no claim can be made on the Government of the Republic for compensation. The insurgents are the parties responsible to neutral Powers for any abuse of belligerent right by persons acting under their authority. With regard to the capture of the "Unison," upon the statement submitted to Her Majesty's Government her capture was clearly unjustifiable, and unless clear evidence is forthcoming from the Venezuelan captors to rebut the affidavit made by the master and owner of the vessel at the harbour-master's office at port of Spain, Her Majesty's Government will be justified in my opinion in demanding from the Venezuelan Government the restitution of the vessel, and full compensation for any losses incurred by the owners of the vessel, and of her cargo, and by her master and crew.

* It has been. See postscript in Mr. Middleton's No. 25.

I am of opinion that the view of this case taken by Governor Longden is sound, and that Her Majesty's Government will be justified in insisting upon the restitution of the vessel and her cargo, or a full inquiry before a proper Court as to the question whether or not she was captured within British waters. I venture to suggest to your Lordship that it is desirable that such seizures in British waters should be prevented in future by the presence of a British vessel of war.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 28th ultimo upon the subject of the blockade by the Government of Venezuela of part of the coast of that Republic which remains in the hands of the party opposed to the Government, he was directed to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government should notify the blockade in question in this country. The previous correspondence relating to this matter was also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That I am of opinion that it will be a proper precaution on your Lordship's part, in the interests of British commerce, to direct an announcement to be made in the "London Gazette" that your Lordship has received from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas a copy of a Decree of the Provisional President of the Republic of Venezuela, declaring the coasts of the States of Cumana and Maturin from the Port of Rio Caribe to the mouth of the Puampiche in the Gulf of Paria to be in a state of blockade.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received August 9.)

My Lord, Temple, August 8, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 7th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas, reporting the forcible seizure of a British subject named Peter P. Thorncroft by the Venezuelan authorities, to be recruited as a soldier in the army of that Republic. Mr. Odo Russell was pleased to request that I would take this despatch into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the instructions which it would be proper to send to Mr. Middleton in this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the information as to the status of Peter P. Thorncroft is not sufficient for me to advise your Lordship that Mr. Middleton should be positively instructed to demand his release. Mr. Middleton states that Peter P. Thorncroft is "a British subject, but not a British-born subject." Mr. Thorncroft may, consistently with this statement, be a native of the State which has forcibly recruited him for its military service. The question which would then arise would be a question of Venezuelan law, whether Mr. Thorncroft was liable to be forcibly recruited or not, which Mr. Middleton asserts to be determined in the negative by the 14th Article of the Constitution of Venezuela. If this should be a correct exposition of the law of Venezuela, I am of opinion that Mr. Middleton may, under any circumstances, use his good offices in favour of Mr. Thorncroft, with a view to obtain for him, as a British subject by origin, a just administration of the law to which he is by birth subject. On the other hand, if it should prove that Mr. Thorncroft owes no natural allegiance to the Venezuelan Republic and is by origin a British subject, then I should be of opinion that Mr. Middleton may be properly instructed, if your Lordship thinks fit, to demand his release unconditionally.

That assuming the status of Peter P. The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received August 18.)

My Lord, Temple, August 17, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the inclosed despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas, respecting a Decree issued by the President of the State of Bolivar, compelling all foreigners resident therein to serve in armed patrols, against which resolution the members of the Diplomatic Corps have thought proper to protest, and he was pleased to request that I would have the goodness to state to your Lordship, whether I consider that it would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to take any further steps beyond those already adopted by Mr. Middleton in this matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the propriety of any further steps on the part of Her Majesty's Government in this case will in my opinion depend upon the manner in which the authorities of the State of Bolivar proceed to put the President's Decree into execution. It does not appear upon the face of the Decree, that the members of the patrol are to be armed, and the duties of the patrol may in fact not differ very much from those which special constables are called upon to discharge in this country, and by our statute law (1 and 2 Wm. IV, cap. 41) the Secretary of State is empowered to order that persons generally exempt by law from serving as special constables (amongst whom foreigners would rank) shall under particular circumstances, notwithstanding such exemption, serve as special constables. On the other hand, if there should be any attempt on the part of the State of Bolivar to give to the proposed patrol a military character, it would be in my opinion a breach of the Treaty engagements of the Republic of Venezuela to permit the State of Bolivar to enforce the Decree against British subjects. I think it would be sufficient for the present if your Lordship were to direct Mr. Middleton to keep Her Majesty's Government informed as to the manner in which the President's Decree is carried into effect, and to report at once any apparent breach of good faith on the part of the State authorities.

My Lord, Temple, August 17, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Odo Russell's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me, for any observations I might have to offer thereupon, the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas, respecting the arrest and subsequent release of a British subject named Luciano Agostini, by order of the Venezuelan authorities.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the requisition made upon Mr. Agostini, although made by a civil authority, was in substance a military requisition, if I rightly understand it to be an order made upon him by the chief civil authorities at Caracas to furnish a baggage horse for army purposes. Mr. Agostini being a natural-born British subject would be entitled, under the Treaty of 18th April, 1825, to be exempted from any such requisition; and any interference with his liberty, or compulsion put upon him, in pursuance of such a requisition, may be rightly held by your Lordship to be a breach of the spirit of the Treaty.

Your Lordship will therefore be justified, in my opinion, in directing Mr. Middleton to remonstrate strongly against the original order of the civil authorities at Caracas, and to protest against British subjects being held guilty of disrespect to the Venezuelan authorities if they disregard such orders.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received October 10.)

My Lord, Temple, October 9, 1871.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that with reference to my Report of the 1st June last respecting the course to be pursued by Her Majesty's Government in regard to British subjects in Venezuela deprived of certificates of nationality, he was directed to transmit to me, together with the former papers bearing on this subject, a further despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas for any observations I might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it would appear that the practice of granting certificates of British nationality by Her Majesty's Legation at Caracas to persons born of British parents within the Venezuelan territory originated at a time when there could be no conflict of allegiance, inasmuch as such persons under the then existing system of Venezuelan law were regarded as foreigners. Under the altered system of law which prevails at present, it seems that all persons born within the Venezuelan territory, of whatever origin, are entitled to the status of natural-born Venezuelan citizens. Under such circumstances, I am of opinion that persons born of British parents within Venezuelan territory are not entitled to repudiate the obligations which, by Venezuelan law, devolve upon natural-born Venezuelan citizens whilst they remain in the country, and that the practice heretofore adopted of issuing certificates of British nationality to such persons, as such certificates have been held to protect the bearer from any claim upon his allegiance on the part of the Venezuelan Government, should be either abandoned or so modified as to prevent any conflict between the Venezuelan Government and Her Majesty's Legation on the subject of such allegiance.

With regard to the evidence upon which such certificates have been granted and may now be sought to be cancelled, I am of opinion that where they have been granted upon the oath of credible parties they ought not to be cancelled except upon the production of baptismal certificates, as suggested by Mr. Middleton, or some documentary evidence which cannot well have been fabricated ad hoc. But a further question remains for your Lordship's consideration, whether it would not be equitable that parties born of British parents within the Venezuelan territory before the passing of the present law of citizenship should have the option of remaining foreigners, if they prefer it, and make a declaration to that effect before a given day. This, however, would be matter of arrangement, and it would be not unreasonable for your Lordship to instruct Mr. Middleton to press this point upon the attention of the Venezuelan Government, in consideration, if your Lordship approves, of the practice hitherto adopted by Her Majesty's Legation being abandoned for the future as regards parties owing natural allegiance to the Venezuelan Republic.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the inclosed despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas,* reporting the particulars of two outrages committed at the instigation of General Pulgar, the President of the State of Zulia, and his brother, Don Rafael Pulgar, on Mr. Harris and Mr. O'Connor, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take Mr. Middleton's despatch into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to steps which it would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the case of Mr. Harris is, in my opinion, distinguishable in its features from the case of Mr. O'Connor, as the outrage against Mr. O'Connor was the act of a person not in authority, and Mr. O'Connor should endeavour to obtain redress through the Courts of the country. But as regards the outrage against Mr. Harris, it appears to me to have been an act not merely of a more serious character as regards the treatment to which Mr. Harris was exposed, but it was inflicted upon him by the President of the State himself, who, it may be presumed, is above the law. Under such circumstances, Mr. Harris is justified, in my opinion, in applying to your Lordship for protection, and I am of opinion that your Lordship may properly instruct Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Caracas to bring the case formally before the Government of the Republic. Whether your Lordship should demand the dismissal of President Pulgar or that some pecuniary redress should be made to Mr. Harris, coupled with the assurance that the violence of President Pulgar shall not be repeated, is a question for your Lordship's discretion.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That M. Pierre Soria, notwithstanding he may be a British subject by birth, has acquired a Venezuelan domicile, which exposes him to all the inconveniences of Venezuelan nationality, as regards the belligerent rights of third parties engaged in war with Venezuela. As against the exercise of such rights by such parties he must look for protection to the Venezuelan Government, and he cannot claim from that Government any more protection than they are able to afford to their natural-born subjects. Notification.

Foreign Office, December 12, 1871.

IT is hereby notified that Her Majesty's Government has received from the Governor of Trinidad a copy of a Decree given at Caracas on 2nd October, 1871, by the President of the United States of Venezuela, declaring a blockade of the line of coast embracing the entrances of the River Orinoco, in consequence of the occupation of Cuidad Bolivar by the rebels. The text of the Decree is as follows:—

(Translation.)

"José Ignacio Pulido, Chief of the Presidency of the United States of Venezuela.

"In pursuance of the right vested in me by the Congress of Plenipotentiaries,

"It is decreed,

"1. That the navigation of the waters of the Orinoco are hereby prohibited, and the line of coast embracing its entrances is blockaded, in consequence of the occupation of Cuidad Bolivar by the rebels.

"2. That the naval force required to carry this blockade into effect has been equipped.

1871

"3. That the Commanders of the blockading vessels will act in accordance with the Cruizing Orders of 30th March, 1822, and the following instructions:—

"(1.) Two months from date of this Decree will be allowed to all vessels from Europe; to vessels from the United States of North America one month from such date; and all the vessels from the Antilles (excepting Curazao, Trinidad, and Demerara) are to observe this Decree, from the date of the ratification of this blockade to their respective authorities.

"When, on entering the waters of the blockaded coasts, they will be notified by the Commanders of the blockading vessels of war that the line of blockade cannot be crossed.

"In cases only where parties insist on acting against these rules they will be considered as violating the blockade.

"(2.) The foregoing instructions refer to the vessels above mentioned, to which will be extended the privilege (contained in Article XXI of Law 3 codicil of the Exchequer) to enter and discharge in any other ports of the Republic not occupied by the rebels, should it be considered convenient.

"(3.) After the expiration of the time allowed in Section (1), all vessels entering the waters of the blockaded coasts will be considered as having been notified, and will be sent under custody to the Naval Court at the station of Porto Cabello.

"(4.) This Decree will be communicated to all whom it may concern; and the Minister of Military and Naval Affairs is charged with the publication and execution thereof.

"Given at Caracas, on the 2nd October, 1871, 8th of the Law and 13th of the Federation.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 27th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying letter from the Admiralty and its inclosures, which contain an account of the seizure and ill-treatment of the crews of certain fishing boats belonging to and manned by persons residing in Trinidad by an armed Venezuelan Felucha, and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take the case into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the indulgence granted to fishing boats in time of war is of ancient date, and was a matter of comity, which has fallen into disuse (The Young Jacob and Johanna, Robinson's Reports, p. 20). I am of opinion that the Venezuelan cruizer was entitled to make capture of the fishing boats in question, and that ordinary fishing licences, such as they seem to have had, would not warrant the crews in pursuing their avocation within three miles of a coast under blockade.

| 21 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 9, 1872 | Her Majesty's Government will be justified in demanding compensation from the Honduras Government for the arrest of Mr. Frank Turner, employed by the Honduras Oceanic Railway Company, and also for the stoppage of their works, owing to his imprisonment | 13 |
| 22 | Law Officers | July 26, | The Additional Article to the Treaty of 1856 between Great Britain and Honduras, containing stipulations with regard to the railway to be constructed from the Atlantic to the Pacific through Honduras defines the time of the British guarantee coming into force, but that guarantee does not take effect until the railroad is completed from sea to sea | 13 |
| 23 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 16, | Further respecting the claim of Mr. Thomas Williams for compensation from the Nicaraguan Government for ill-treatment he received from the Commander of the Fort San Carlos, in 1864. Proper amount to be demanded would be 5,000 dollars | 14 |
| 24 | Law Officers | July 19, | Further respecting claim of Mr. Thomas Williams. Amount of 1,000 dollars and gift of land offered as compensation by the Nicaraguan Government ought not to be accepted, unless the land is to the value of 4,000 dollars | 14 |
| 25 | Law Officers | Aug. 29, | Claims of Mr. S. Harris, brought forward by Mr. Y. W. Sykes, against the Guatemalan Government, for 6,000*l.* worth of piers' and roads' bonds, should not be supported, and Mr. Sykes should be so informed | 15 |
| 26 | Law Officers | Oct. 4, | Further respecting the claim of Mr. H. Goussen to British nationality and to British protection. If he obtained the certificate of British nationality from the British Vice-Consul and was recognized as a British subject by the Nicaraguan Minister, he is entitled to British protection | 15 |
| 27 | Law Officers | Nov. 29, | Nothing in the Chatfield-Cruz Convention of 1852 to prevent the appointment of an Accountant under the Treasury to distribute the sums paid to Her Majesty's Representative on account of the British claims ou Honduras, owing to the death of Mr. Chatfield | 16 |

CHILE.

| 33 | Law Officers | July 1, | In the draft Ordinance enabling the Government of Hong Kong to deal with foreign prisoners in transitu, provision should be made for the absence of the Governor from the Colony, and an interpretation clause would be sufficient for this | 19 |
| 34 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | Aug. 8, | As to the mode of dealing with Mr. Caine, Her Majesty's Consul at Swatow, when in charge of Hankow, who has confessed to applying the sum of 1,941*l.* 14*s.* 3*d.* out of the public funds in his hands to his own use. As the money could not be recovered, the question would be whether dismissal from his appointment would be sufficient punishment without proceeding criminally | 19 |
| 35 | Law Officers | Dec. 2, | Proposed alterations by the Colonial Office in the Order in Council of 1865, relating to the deportation to the Colony of Hong Kong of British subjects belonging to other Colonies. Under the warrant of the Supreme Court for China and Japan, may properly be made | 20 |
| 36 | Law Officers | Dec. 5, | As to defalcations of Mr. Caine, Her Majesty's Consul at Swatow, when at Hankow. Agree with Sir E. Hornby that there might be difficulty in securing a conviction if criminally prosecuted. More expedient not to run the risk of prosecution | 20 |
| 37 | Law Officers | Dec. 6, | No legal objection under the Jerusalem Bishopric Act, 5 Vict., cap. 6, in complying with the application of the Archbishop of Canterbury for licence from the Queen to consecrate the Rev. Mr. Russell as Bishop in North China | 21 |
| 38 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 7, | Approve draft licence to enable the Archbishop of Canterbury to consecrate the Rev. Mr. Russell as Bishop of the Church of England in North China | 21 |

| 42 | Law Officers | Feb. 23, 1872 | Approves draft despatch to Colonel Stanton relating to charges of the Egyptian Government against Mr. Petherick of slave dealing | 24 |
| 43 | Law Officers | May 29, | As to the seizure by the Egyptian Government of a steam corn-mill erected by Mr. Thomson, a British subject, near Alexandria. Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in interfering | 24 |
| 44 | Law Officers | June 5, | Instructions may be sent to Colonel Stanton that the trial of certain Maltese before the British Consular Court for an assault on servants of the Sheikh-ul-Islam and insults to him, may proceed without the evidence of the Sheikh being required to prove the case | 24 |
| 45 | Law Officers | 7, | Instructions may be sent to Colonel Stanton to inform Nubar Pasha that coals imported to Port Saïd, and there put on board vessels going through the Suez Canal, are not to be considered as goods in transit, and are not exempt from duty | 25 |
| 46 | Law Officers | July 23, | As to the alteration in the rate of tonnage dues charged by the Suez Canal Company. They have properly adopted the English mode of measurement. Question of disputes with the Suez Canal Company must be submitted to the Tribunal having jurisdiction over the defendant | 25 |
| 47 | Law Officers | Aug. 28, | Judicial Reforms in Egypt. Course that should be pursued by Her Majesty's Government on the schemes put forward by Ottoman, Egyptian, and French Governments. Approves the Ottoman scheme as the best | 26 |
| 48 | Law Officers | 29, | Further as to the Judicial Reforms in Egypt. Confirmed in opinion that the Ottoman scheme is the best | 28 |
| 49 | Law Officers | Oct. 4, | As to the claim of Messrs. Willis, Manché, and Co. against Her Majesty's Government, on subject of a deposit made by them with Dr. Zarb, then British Consular Agent at Port Saïd, but who became a bankrupt. Her Majesty's Government cannot be held responsible, as Dr. Zarb had no official authority or duty to receive the deposit | 29 |
| 50 | Law Officers | 14, | Not advisable to apply to the Egyptian Government for loan of a letter addressed to the Viceroy in 1870, which Messrs. Kimber and Ellis were desirous of producing as evidence in the case of Virnard v. Reuter | 29 |
| 51 | Law Officers | 31, | Inquiry of Messrs. Clarkson, Son, and Greenwell, whether the Egyptian steamer "Charkieh" was liable to arrest under a warrant of the High Court of Admiralty on account of the collision with the "Batavia," which was sunk. If the former was a public vessel, and carrying the flag of the Viceroy of Egypt, she would not be liable to arrest | 29 |
| 52 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 2, | Further relating to the collision between the "Charkieh" and the "Batavier." Messrs. Clarkson should be told that the "Charkieh" belonged to the Imperial Ottoman marine, and the vessel must be released, and the Turkish Ambassador might be so informed, but to request the case might be tried | 30 |
| 53 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 16, | Further respecting the collision between the "Charkieh" and the "Batavier." As to statement of Messrs. Clarkson that the former was not a ship of war, but a passenger steamer. M. Musurus to be told that as the papers prove her not to have been a ship of war she cannot be longer protected against detention | 30 |
| 54 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | Further respecting the collision between the "Charkieh" and the "Batavier." The former being engaged in trade, although the property of a Government, cannot be considered a public ship and exempt from arrest. Offer of M. Musurus to submit the case to arbitration may be agreed to, if owners of the "Batavier" consent | 31 |

| 58 | Law Officers .. | 19, | On the alleged intention of the French Government to sell the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon on the coast of Newfoundland to the United States. The sale would be a breach of engagement entered into with England in 1783 .. | 33 |
| 59 | Queen's Advocate | 19, | Claim of Mr. Stuart McKenzie against the French Government for damages sustained by him. Her Majesty's Government cannot assist him, as he did not send in his claim in due time after due notice was given by Decree of the 21st June, 1871 .. .. .. .. .. | 34 |
| 60 | Law Officers .. | 19, | As to the course to be taken by Her Majesty's Government on complaint of the French Chargé d'Affaires that Vice-Chancellor Malins refused to remove the attachment laid on certain funds emanating from the French Treasury which had been placed in the hands of Messrs. Morgan and Co... | 34 |
| 61 | Law Officers .. | 20, | As to the debate in French Chambers on the imposition of duties on raw material, and right claimed by M. Thiers, on the part of the French Government, to impose this tax, under the IXth Article of the Treaty of Commerce of 1860 and the IIIrd Article of the Second Supplementary Convention. The proposal is incompatible with the existing Treaties .. .. .. .. .. .. | 35 |
| 62 | Law Officers .. | Feb. 12, | As to Bill before the French Assembly for imposing differential duties on foreign shipping. Duties proposed to be levied are not intended to be levied on the ships, but on the goods; so that, having regard to the Treaties with Austria and Sweden, no such duties can be levied on goods imported in British ships while those Treaties remain in force .. | 36 |
| 63 | Queen's Advocate | 13, | Instructions that should be sent to Lord Lyons on the complaint of Mr. Caudwell against the administration of justice by the Tribunals of Boulogne .. .. .. | 37 |
| 64 | Law Officers .. | 17, | As to the duties imposed on shipping by the Marine Marchande Law passed by the French Assembly, and remarks of Mr. Farrer on Report of the 12th instant. The duties are to be levied on the merchandize, and not on the ships, and as such are not navigation dues, but customs duties .. .. .. .. .. .. | 37 |
| 65 | Law Officers .. | 24, | Further relating to the duties imposed under the recent French Marine Marchande Law. Remarks on the views taken by the Board of Trade on the question of taxes on shipping and that of merchandize. Do not recommend their view of the matter .. .. .. .. .. | 38 |
| 66 | Queen's Advocate | Mar 15, | Further respecting complaint of Mr. Caudwell against the legal Tribunal at Boulogne. Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in interfering diplomatically in his behalf .. .. .. .. .. . | 38 |
| 67 | Queen's Advocate | 15, | As to complaint of Mr. Insley, a British resident at St. Malo, on treatment of his claim against the French Government for provisions supplied by him during the late war for revictualling Paris. The claim cannot be supported officially by Her Majesty's Government .. .. .. | 39 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 68 | Law Officers .. | Mar. 18, 1872 | As to the right of British subjects to hold real property in France, and to dispose of the same by will according to the provisions of English law, and as to the negotiation for the conclusion of a Consular Convention with France, Instructions to Lord Lyons and Her Majesty's Consul at Calais should be, that real property must be disposed of according to the law of France .. .. .. .. | 39 |
| 69 | Law Officers .. | 19, | Statement of Mr. E. M. Underdown as to the case brought before the Tribunal Correctionel at Lille. Charge of fraud by a French army contractor, in which British and French subjects are implicated. Instructions to Lord Lyons to state that criminal proceedings in France against British subjects resident in England for alleged crimes here, would be contrary to law of nations and would not be permitted by English law as regards French subjects; and to request whether these acts are not also contrary to French law .. | 39 |
| 70 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 27, | Claim of M. Benecke. As to the instructions to be sent to Lord Lyons on the question of the liability to the payment of "surtaxes de pavillon" in the case of vessels which have sailed before enactment of the French laws on the subject. Exposition of M. Treitt of the French law is correct, and English law is similar on the subject with regard to duties .. .. .. .. .. .. | 40 |
| 71 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 28, | Further as to duties levied by French Government on mineral oils of British origin, and the instructions to be sent to Lord Lyons on the three points, viz., the maximum duties to be levied, the differential treatment of American oils, and of British contracts anterior to French law .. .. | 41 |
| 72 | Law Officers .. | Apr. 4, | M. de Rémusat should be informed that any administrative intervention of whatever kind, on the part of the French Government, having for its object the deportation of French criminals to England, would be a serious breach of international comity, and would not be tolerated .. .. | 41 |
| 73 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 6, | Further relating to increased duties levied by French Government on mineral oils. The French Tribunals are correct in their Judgment as to the liability of the contractors to pay the additional duties raised up to the time of delivery of the goods .. .. .. .. .. | 41 |
| 74 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 8, | Her Majesty's Government should rest satisfied with the result of the investigation made by the British and French Commission on the charges against Mr. D'Arcy, British Vice-Consul at St. Valery, for uttering cries of "Vive la Prusse, à bas la France!" as there is nothing to rebut the positive assertions of the French witnesses, and no reason to doubt the correctness of the decision .. .. .. | 42 |
| 75 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 9, | As to instructions to Lord Lyons relating to the question of duties levied in France on mineral oils of British origin. British firms cannot claim for damages a larger sum than the amount they have had to pay for the increased duties, which has already been asked for by Her Majesty's Government. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 43 |
| 76 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 11, | Further respecting the case of Mr. Caudwell, a British resident at Boulogne, who complained of injustice shown to him by the legal Tribunals with respect to the contract he had entered into for the purchase of a house .. .. | 44 |
| 77 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 16, | As to the alleged criminal proceedings instituted at Lille against the firm of Messrs. Moses and Son, as represented by Mr. E. M. Underdown. Must await reply from Lord Lyons, whether he has obtained possession of the judicial document .. .. .. .. | 45 |
| 78 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 16, | As to the further letter from Mr. E. M. Underdown, representing the firm of Messrs. Moses and Son, against whom criminal proceedings had been taken for alleged frauds by a French army contractor at Lille for acts done and sales made in England .. .. .. .. .. | 45 |

1872

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 79 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | Apr. 17, 1872 | Further respecting the claims of Messrs. Glehn on the French Government, on account of the destruction of a quantity of coffee by fire at Vilette, bonded in the Magasins Généraux. Her Majesty's Government should decline to interfere diplomatically to find out who is responsible for the losses | 46 |
| 80 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 20, | Further as to the duties to be charged on British mineral oils sent to France before the changes had been made in the scale of charges. No reason to alter former opinion on the subject | 46 |
| 81 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 21, | As to claim of Mr. Insley against the French Government on account of provisions supplied by him during the late war. Mr. Insley must have recourse to the French Tribunals, and Her Majesty's Government should not interfere diplomatically | 47 |
| 82 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 23, | As to claim of the Irish College at Paris against the French Government for compensation for damage alleged to have been sustained by a country house at Arcueil attached to the college, on account of the occupation by Government troops during the late war. Her Majesty's Government should not interfere to prevent the case being brought before the French Tribunals | 47 |
| 83 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 24, | Further respecting the claim of the Irish College at Paris for injuries to their house at Arcueil. No reason to alter opinion already given | 48 |
| 84 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 25, | Further respecting the criminal proceedings instituted at Lille against the firm of Messrs. Moses and Son, in the City of London, as represented by Mr. E. M. Underdown. Reply of M. de Rémusat to Lord Lyons' remonstrance is not a satisfactory reply. Mr. Underdown may be told further representations have been made | 48 |
| 85 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 25, | As to complaints and suggestions made by Mr. Sichel, a British merchant at Paris, respecting the present eystem of valuation of goods by experts. As the system is according to the Treaty of Commerce of 12th October, 1860, there is no legal ground of complaint, but the French Government might be requested to secure the appointment of capable and unprejudiced experts | 49 |
| 86 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 27, | The memorandum, with further papers from Mr. E. M. Underdown, relating to the criminal proceedings instituted at Lille against Messrs. Moses and Son, do not alter opinions already given | 50 |
| 87 | Law Officers | 29, | As to the treatment of prisoners by the French Government, and comparison with treatment of the Fenian convicts by Her Majesty's Government | 50 |
| 88 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | May 7, | French Mercantile Marine Law. As to the construction to be put on the Decree of the 28th July, 1867, exempting British shipping from the "surtaxe de pavillon." Ships of Great Britain are entitled to same privileges as granted to ships of Portugal | 50 |
| 89 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 20, | With respect to representations of Her Majesty's Government on the recent French Mercantile Marine Law and duties levied as surtaxes de pavillon." The arguments adduced by M. Gavard do not affect the question previously considered | 51 |
| 90 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 21, | Further with respect to the French Mercantile Marine law and the applications of the "surtaxes de pavillon" to British shipping, and with reference to the Treaty of Commerce between France and Portugal. Her Majesty's Government would be justified in representing that England was entitled to the benefit granted to Portugal by the issue of the Decree of the 28th July, 1867 | 51 |
| 91 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 25, | Complaint of Messrs. Hatton and Cookson against the duties levied by authorities at Gaboon on palm-oil transshipped from one vessel to another. Her Majesty's Government might remonstrate with the French Government, after full inquiries have been made | 52 |
| 92 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 19, 1872 | Further on subject of the criminal proceedings instituted at Lille against Englishmen domiciled in England (Messrs. Moses and others), for an alleged offence committed in this country. Her Majesty's Government should not accede to Mr. Underdown's application, as the French Minister of Justice will demand the acquittal of Messrs. Moses, but they should question the right of serving criminal process in England | 53 |
| 93 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 11, | As to the question of examination by experts in France, and dispute relative to the description and value of goods, between the French custom-house officers and the British importers. Course proposed by Lord Lyons on the 3rd May satisfactory. French Government not likely to alter their system, which is strictly within Treaty rights | 53 |
| 94 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 11, | Complaint of Messrs. Atkins against the custom-house authorities at Boulogne on subject of the survey of a case of felt shipped by them. French authorities acted under Articles VI and VII of the Supplementary Treaty, 1860, and Messrs. Atkins have no ground of complaint | 54 |
| 95 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 15, | Further relating to the duties in France on British mineral oils, and claim of the Coatbridge Oil Company at Dunkirk against Her Majesty's Government for losses on changes in the duty levied in 1871. Mr. Wilson, agent for the Company, should be told Her Majesty's Government cannot entertain their claim, but that they are in communication with the French Government on the subject | 54 |
| 96 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 19, | As to the 9th Article of the new French Army Bill. Her Majesty's Government need not at present move in the matter, as Lord Lyons has made proper representations respecting the liability of foreigners to military service in France | 55 |
| 97 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | As to the interpretation put on the IXth Article of the Treaty of 1860 by M. Thiers, with respect to the taxation on raw materials, and that the French Government have a right to put an additional duty on English manufactured cottons | 55 |
| 98 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 2, | Claim of Messrs. Kell and Co., of Huddersfield, against the French Government, on account of four cases of goods, destined for Zurich, being requisitioned by Communist troops, after being bonded at the Compagnie de l'Est at Paris. As the French Tribunals are unable to give any redress, Her Majesty's Government may press for compensation from the French Government | 56 |
| 99 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 16, | As to the claim of Miss Galloway against the French Government for losses during the late Communist insurrection, and those of Messrs. Carver, Darbishire, and Co., Mr. Hewett, Mr. Metcalfe, and Mr. Myers, and comparing the Reports on these claims with that of Messrs. Kell and Co., in which Her Majesty's Government are advised to press the claims on French Government. Adhere to the opinion given on the former claims. The latter had their property detained in France against their will, and are entitled to the good offices of Her Majesty's Government | 56 |
| 100 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Sept. 23, | As to proposals of French Government for the termination of the Treaty of Commerce of 1860, and present proposals for its renewal under conditions of increased customs duties on certain British goods before the 15th March, 1873. Her Majesty's Government would not be liable to claims for losses of British subjects by contracts entered into with British merchants owing to the Treaty engagements, but fair notice should be given to the parties on the alteration of the duties, and protection should be given to parties entering into the contracts when notice had been given. A stipulation might be inserted in the Treaty, and French Government should indemnify the parties | 57 |

| 122A | Attorney and Solicitor-General | April 10, 1872 | As to course Her Majesty's Government should pursue with regard to dealing with the estates of British subjects dying intestate, more especially British seamen in Russia. Her Majesty's Consuls should represent the heirs in Russian Courts of Law. State of things at Taganrog, as represented by Consul Carruthers, should be altered by new Treaty stipulations. (See Appendix) .. .. .. | 205 |
| 122B | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 11, | No reason to alter Report on the administration of estates of intestate British subjects in Russia. Russian Government might be called on to grant immunities from the oppressive laws on the subject, and English Consuls should have the power of administering to intestate British subjects. (See Appendix) .. .. .. .. .. | 206 |
| 122C | Law Officers | July 22, | As to the independence of a State, in its relations with other Powers, whose neutrality has been guaranteed by other Powers who are, or are not, parties to it. The guaranteed State may enter into any Treaty engagement, but the guaranteeing Powers are at liberty to release themselves if they have the will. (See Appendix) .. .. .. | 206 |
| 123 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 14, | As to the attempt of Lieutenant Yeatman, of Her Majesty's ship "Minstrel," to capture two deserters from Her Majesty's ship "Sirius" who were believed to be on board the Brazilian ship "Texeira Ruij" at Barbadoes; and as to the powers of naval officers, under the Naval Discipline Act, to search merchant ships in cases of desertion .. | 81 |
| 124 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 22, | As to a Circular sent to Her Majesty's Consuls on the question of marriages abroad, and the difficulties that they have experienced in carrying out those instructions. Suggestions as to the wording of the draft Circular, and recommend a change in the law relating to mixed marriages before Consuls and Consular authorities .. .. .. .. | 82 |
| 125 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. , | Further respecting the case of Lieutenant Yeatman, of Her Majesty's ship "Minstrel," attempting to capture two deserters from Her Majesty's ship "Sirius" said to be on board the "Texeira Ruij" at Barbadoes. The Naval Discipline Act deals solely with naval deserters, and the Merchant Shipping Act of 1854 with merchant seamen. No constable can search a merchant ship in any British port for naval or merchant seamen deserters without a warrant .. | 84 |

| 181 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 14, 1872 | Instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Consul at Fiji that British subjects cannot withdraw themselves from British jurisdiction by assuming the nationality of an uncivilized State, nor can they divest vessels owned by them of their British nationality by placing them under the nationality they claim, and such British subjects are still amenable to British laws. British subjects and their interests may be protected, but no violent measures should be adopted | 118 |
| 182 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 1, | As to British protection to be granted to half-castes residing at Fiji. As they were born there, they are not entitled to British protection | 119 |
| 183 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 18, | As to the recognition of the de facto Government of the Fiji Islands, and whether British subjects could be considered as citizens beyond the limits of the new State, and if exempt from British jurisdiction | 119 |
| 184 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 9, | Her Majesty's Government may interfere with acts and engagements of British subjects, and declare acts and engagements legal or illegal relating to them, within Fiji | 119 |
| 185 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 13, | As to the status of British subjects who claim to divest themselves and their vessels from assuming British character and assume Fijian nationality. Draft notice to British subjects | 120 |
| 186 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | As to kidnapping of South Sea Islanders by persons on board the "Nukulan" and "Carl," and the steps to be taken for their punishment. They cannot be punished under Act of Parliament 35 and 36 Vic., cap. 19, and occurrences of this kind are likely to recur under the present arrangement with the Fiji Islands | 120 |
| 187 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 23, | As to the course Her Majesty's Consul in the Fiji Islands should pursue on a writ being served on him by that Government. Must comply with the legal summons of the de facto Government | 121 |
| 188 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 9, | Whether the Act passed by the de facto Government of Fiji, relating to the British Consul there, and claims on Her Majesty's Government on account of his proceedings, should be recognized? Her Majesty's Government should not recognize the Act of the Fiji Legislature | 121 |

PARAGUAY.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 189 | Law Officers .. | Jan. 3, 1872 | Claims of Msssrs. Percy Burrell and Valpy against the Paraguayan Government. Her Majesty's Government should decline to enter into discussion with Messrs. Valpy and Chaplin on principles of international law. Should adhere to opinion on the subject given in Report of the 30th November, 1871 | 122 |
| 190 | Law Officers .. | Mar. 13, | Further respecting claims of Messrs. Burrell and Valpy against the Government of Paraguay. Must show that they have been treated differently from other subjects to prove a right to compensation | 122 |
| 191 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 28, | As to the claim of Mr. Robert Sales against the Paraguayan Government for 20,000 dollars for murder of his son during a riot at Ascension in 1870. As he probably was the cause of his own death, cannot, without further information, advise that Her Majesty's Government should support the claim | 123 |

PERSIA.

| 192 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 11, 1872 | As to the levy of 559 kraus on sugar belonging to Messrs. Malcolm, Persian subject under British protection at Bushire. Her Majesty's Government should support them to resist the tax, as the Persian authorities have treated them as British subjects, and as they received British protection before the Treaty of Paris | 124 |
| 193 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 13, | No objection to Her Majesty's Government pressing upon Persian Government the insertion of a clause in the new Telegraphic Convention providing for the protection of British officers while on duty in Persia, owing to the murder of Mr. Collins, the Inspector-General of the Persian Telegraphic Staff | 124 |
| 194 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Sept. 20, | As to claim of Hafee Moosa Meymenee, a British subject, for being compelled to supply grain to the people of Bushire during the riots there in 1870. Her Majesty's Government should press for settlement of the claim for compensation, and threaten forcible measures if not paid | 125 |
| 195 | Dr. Deane .. | Oct. 26, | As Vice-Consul Ongley did not intend to defraud, nor did he defraud, the Persian subject (Minister of Finance) who had intrusted him with certain moneys for investment in English consols, Mr. Thomson nor the Persian Government have any right to detain him in Persia | 125 |
| 196 | Solicitor-General. | Oct. , | Further respecting the conduct of Vice-Consul Ongley with respect to money intrusted to him by the Persian Minister of Finance. The Persian Government have no right to detain him, and his release should be demanded if he is so detained | 126 |
| 197 | Lord Chancellor . | Nov 1, | Agrees with Dr. Deane and the Solicitor-General as to conduct of Vice-Consul Ongley. The informality of the power of attorney for the transfer of stock was unfortunate, but was no proof of his dishonesty, and it was reasonable to place the sums in his own name as trustee when purchased. Suggests general instructions to Her Majesty's Diplomatic Agents abroad on the subject as to private trusts | 126 |
| 198 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 11, | Further respecting the case of Vice-Consul Ongley. Suggestions of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Tehrau that communications be made to the Bank of England on the departure of Mr. Ongley from that city. Proper course to pursue for the protection of the stock | 127 |
| 199 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 12, | Further respecting the case of Vice-Consul Ongley. Cannot advise Her Majesty's Government to make the communication to the Bank of England (as suggested by Mr. Freshfield to Messrs. Drummond) as to the transfer of the stock in the name of Vice-Consul Ongley into that of Dost Ali Khan Nizam el-Dowlah. A distringas should be put on the stock | 127 |
| 200 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 18, | Further respecting the case of Vice-Consul Ongley. Instructions proposed to be sent to Mr. Thomson, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Tehran, correct. Cannot alter or modify opinion already given on the subject, though Messrs. Drummond, no doubt, desire the guarantee of Her Majesty's Government | 128 |
| 201 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 20, | Further respecting the case of Vice-Consul Ongley. Steps taken by the Persian Minister of Finance for placing a distringas on the stock belonging to him at the Bank of England are proper | 128 |

| 202 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 6, 1872 | Case of Swann v. Vines. From the Report of Consul Nugent on the subject of Mr. Vines' conduct, and the refusal of the latter to answer the depositions made, his Consular Commission should be cancelled .. .. .. | 129 |

PORTUGAL.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 203 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 5, 1872 | As to the intention of the Indian Government to withdraw certain privileges enjoyed by the Portuguese factory at Surat. Doubt as to the privileges being granted to the factory or to the Portuguese Government, but however that may be, the existing system is an abuse of the original privilege, and should be discontinued .. .. .. .. | 129 |
| 204 | Queen's Advocate | July 19, | Proposed letter to the Portuguese Minister in London on subject of the Quarantine Regulations in force. Case of the "Jessie." Her Majesty's Government justified in making representations against the Regulations, demanding compensation for her detention at Berlin .. .. | 130 |
| 205 | Queen's Advocate | Aug. 23, | As to instructions to be sent to Sir Charles Murray, on account of the duties levied on the sale of the goods saved out of the wreck of the British vessel "Spindrift" on Island of St. George, Azores. Compensation should be demanded for the owners .. .. .. .. .. | 131 |
| 206 | Queen's Advocate | Sept. 28, | Further respecting the case of the wreck "Spindrift." Duties were levied on a valuation improperly fixed by Portuguese law. An additional reason for compensating the owners of the cargo .. .. .. .. .. | 132 |
| 207 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 29, | As to instructions to be sent to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lisbon, relative to the claim against the Portuguese Government by Messrs. Hickie, Son, and Dugge and Graham and Co., for condemnation of a cargo of butter. Redress should be demanded, owing to conduct of the Customs authorities .. .. .. .. | 132 |

PRUSSIA.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 208 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | Apr. 13, 1872 | As to the proposed new Copyright Convention with Germany. Approves, with certain modifications. Suggests the exclusion of photographs, rather than include them. Remarks on Articles VI and VII .. .. .. .. | 133 |

RUSSIA.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 209 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 8, 1872 | Her Majesty's Consul-General at Odessa may administer to the estate of John Oliver, who died intestate at Kherson, although the widow is a German by birth .. .. | 134 |
| 210 | Queen's Advocate | May 4, | Her Majesty's Government cannot take diplomatic action against authorities at Nicolaieff, for having vaccinated Consul Stevens with impure lymph .. .. .. | 134 |
| 211 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 26, | As to the course Her Majesty's Government should take with respect to request of Messrs. Elkan and Co. for their intervention to obtain reimbursement of money paid by them on freight of machinery shipped to Kertch. The parties must seek redress in a Russian Court .. .. .. | 135 |
| 212 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 21, | Further respecting Messrs. Elkan and Co.'s claim. No reason to alter former opinion .. .. .. .. | 135 |

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 213 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 20, 1872 | As to the validity of marriage in the British Chapel at Riga. The Consular Marriage Act refers only to marriages in British Consulates. Marriages by a priest in holy orders in the British Chapel at Riga, being valid by the lex loci, are valid everywhere .. .. .. .. | 135 |

SIAM.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 214 | Queen's Advocate | Jan. 29, 1872 | As to course Her Majesty's Government should pursue on the master of the British vessel "Burlington," being a German, having shot two of his crew and ill-treated four others, and the claim set up by the German Consul at Bangkok to jurisdiction in the matter. According to international law, the master and crews of vessels in waters of a foreign country, are only amenable to the Courts of the country to which they belong .. .. .. | 136 |

SPAIN.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 215 | Law Officers .. | Jan. 3, 1872 | Trial of Captain Richards for the alleged murder of a Krooman by a Court of Inquiry at Brass, Fernando Po, and who was acquitted. Should be sent for trial before the Court in the River Bonny, under the Order in Council for trial of criminal offences .. .. .. .. | 137 |
| 216 | Queen's Advocate | 6, | As to levy of a fine on the captain of the British vessel "Grange" for not having exhibited his manifest at Marin, although he was told it was not necessary by the Civil Government at Pontevidia. The British Vice-Consul at Marin should appeal, as the Spanish laws prescribe, and if he should not receive proper treatment remonstrance may be made .. .. .. .. .. .. | 137 |
| 217 | Law Officers .. | Jan. 9, | As to the detention of two vessels at Liverpool under suspicion of contravening the Foreign Enlistment Act. Not sufficient grounds for detention, but they should be carefully watched, as they are alleged to be destined for Cuba .. .. | 138 |
| 218 | Law Officers .. | 13, | Case of the suspected vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland." Nothing further to alter the opinion already given. The vessels should still be watched as to the nature of their repairs .. .. .. .. .. .. | 138 |
| 219 | Law Officers .. | 17, | Not sufficient grounds to warrant Her Majesty's Government detaining the steam-vessel "Scud," suspected of being intended for service contrary to the Foreign Enlistment Act .. | 139 |
| 220 | Law Officers .. | 20, | Further relating to the case of the "Great Northern" and "Midland," suspected of contravening the Foreign Enlistment Act. Offer of Mr. Ross to show reasonable evidence of their proposed employment may be accepted, but the trip taken must be while they are in custody of Her Majesty's Government either by the marines or the coast-guard .. | 139 |
| 221 | Law Officers .. | 22, | Further relating to the vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland" at Liverpool. Mr. Hale may inform Messrs. Duncan, Hill, and Parkinson there are no objections to Mr. Ross dealing with the two vessels, and when he has become the registered owner, Mr. Hale should be informed of their use and destination .. .. .. .. .. | 140 |
| 222 | Law Officers .. | 24, | Further relating to the vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland" at Liverpool. Mr. Hale may be authorized to inform Messrs. Duncan, Hill, and Parkinson, on satisfactory evidence being produced on the part of the registered owner of the two vessels of their destination they may be released from control of the customs authorities .. .. .. | 140 |
| 223 | Law Officers .. | 25, | Further relating to the vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland." Mr. Ross may be informed that on production of satisfactory evidence that the vessels are intended for lawful traffic they will be released .. .. .. .. | 141 |

1872

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 224 | Law Officers | Jan. 26, 1872 | Further relating to the vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland." As soon as Mr. Ross, as registered owner of the vessels, produces satisfactory evidence of their destination, they may be released. Messrs. Gregory, Rowcliffe, and Co. may be informed on his behalf that no warrant has as yet been issued for their detention | 141 |
| 225 | Law Officers | 27, | Further relative to the vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland." As to the intention of Messrs. Gregory, Rowcliffe, and Co., on behalf of Mr. Ross, to apply to the Court of Queen's Bench for a mandamus to compel the release of those vessels. They should be informed that Her Majesty's Government will not at present issue a warrant for their detention | 142 |
| 226 | Law Officers | 27, | The offer of Messrs. Gregory, Rowcliffe, and Co., for Mr. Ross, to give necessary explanations with respect to the vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland" should be accepted. The Spanish Minister should be informed, as he may wish some one to be present at the interview | 142 |
| 227 | Queen's Advocate | 27, | As to the detention of the British vessel "Anne Lucy" at the Philippine Islands, and the imprisonment of the carpenter and fine inflicted, and as to the claim of Messrs. Loney and Co. on Spanish Government in consequence. The ancient Treaties with Spain are not applicable to the Spanish Colonies, as interpreted by Lord Aberdeen in 1845, and no difference should be made between persons and produce; but by the comity of nations, British subjects trading with Spanish Colonies are entitled to all the privileges as obtained by the Treaty with Spain. This claim should be brought to the attention of the Spanish Government, as well as that of the case of the "Banda" | 143 |
| 228 | Law Officers | 29, | Further relative to the case of the "Great Northern" and "Midland." As to the reply to be returned to Messrs. Gregory and Rowcliffe, who propose to attend with Mr. Ross to explain. Explanations should be in writing. The Board of Customs should indemnify the Mersey Dock and Harbour Board | 144 |
| 229 | Law Officers | 31, | Further relative to the case of the "Great Northern" and "Midland." The custom-house authorities at Liverpool may be instructed not to place any further impediment in the removal of the vessels if Mr. Ross has complied with all the requirements of the law | 144 |
| 230 | Law Officers | Feb. 3, | As to the suspected vessel "Princess Royal." Customs authorities should not detain her without previous communication with Her Majesty's Treasury; but she should be watched, as also another vessel, the "Titania," suspected for the republicans in Cuba | 145 |
| 231 | Law Officers | 4, | Further relative to the vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland." The vessels may now be allowed to go into any dock of Liverpool Mr. Ross may desire, but they should be watched, and any change of ownership be properly reported | 145 |
| 232 | Law Officers | 6, | Further relative to the vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland, and demand of Messrs. Gregory and Rowcliffe, on behalf of Mr. Ross, for the unconditional release of the vessels. Directions may now be sent for their release | 146 |
| 233 | Law Officers | 9, | Further relative to the vessels "Great Northern" and "Midland. Notice of Mr. Ross sent by Messrs. Gregory and Rowcliffe of his intention to demand damages and costs of the proceedings of Liverpool Customs authorities for the detention of the vessels. The Queen's Proctor should be instructed to oppose the application, and the opinion of the highest Tribunal should be obtained on the question | 146 |
| 234 | Queen's Advocate | 16, | Señor Rances, the Spanish Minister in London, should be informed that the official character of the Spanish Consul at Liverpool will not protect him against an action for libel published in a newspaper | 147 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 235 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 16, 1872 | Case of the "Tyne Queen." Her Majesty's Government would be justified in making a representation to the Spanish Government in favour of the owners, in consequence of the vessel being ordered away from Huelva by the Spanish health authorities | 147 |
| 236 | Queen's Proctor | 29, | Draft of an affidavit to be made by one of the Under Secretaries of State for Foreign Affairs on indemnity being demanded for detention of the "Great Northern" and "Midland" on suspicion of a breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act. Local authorities have a right to detain vessels on suspicion. Question might now be raised | 148 |
| 237 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 2, | As to further steps to be taken by Her Majesty's Government to obtain the apprehension and punishment of the murderers of Mr. J. Robert, a British subject, at San Juan del Puerto, near Huelva, in Spain, in employ of the railway Company there | 148 |
| 238 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | 26, | As to the arrest and imprisonment of a number of British subjects. natives of the Virgin Islands, by Spanish authorities at Crab Islands and Porto Rico, on a charge of murder, of which they were innocent. Steps to be taken by Her Majesty's Government to obtain redress and compensation. Inquiries should be instituted as to the letters said to have been addressed by these men to the Consul at St. John's, and also into the conduct of Acting Consul Cowper | 149 |
| 239 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | Apr. 30, | Complaint of Mr. A. Holt, on account of the loss of 167*l*. 10*s*. 1*d*. on the differential duties imposed at Manila on a cargo of goods shipped by Messrs. Ker, Bolton, and Co. to Hong Kong, and then transshipped in British and Prussian vessels to Manila. This is a case of hardship, and may be represented as equitably deserving of redress, but claim cannot be demanded as by strict right | 149 |
| 240 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | May 15, | The will of Miss Perry is valid according to Spanish law, and neither Mr. Layard nor the English Consul had any right to take possession of the property. If she had died intestate then they might have done so | 150 |
| 241 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 24, | As to a dispute between the Supreme Court at Hong Kong and the Spanish Consul as to the right of administering to the estate of a Chinaman who died on board the Spanish vessel "Attagracia" on the high seas, on a voyage to the Havana. Opinion of Sir J. D. Harding on Consular rights and privileges correct, and despatch of Duke of Newcastle on the subject right and proper | 150 |
| 242 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 27, | Further respecting the case of the "Titania," alleged to have been purchased for the Cuban insurgents. Should not detain her, but the vessel should be watched | 151 |
| 243 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | As to the detention of the British vessel "Lark," of Jamaica, at Cuba, and imprisonment of persons on board of her. Claim for 16,000*l*. is excessive, and inquiries should be made before such a claim is demanded | 151 |
| 244 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 6, | No objection to the communication to Spanish Government of the depositions of three British naval officers of an affair which took place at Vigo during a visit of the flying squadron to that port | 152 |
| 245 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 14, | As to the detention of the American vessel "Edgar Stewart" at Jamaica, and subsequent release, suspected of being intended for the Cuban insurgents | 152 |
| 246 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 20, | As to debt alleged to be due to Mr. Wm. Underhill by a Spanish railway Company under a contract. Her Majesty's Government ought not to interfere diplomatically until justice has been denied to him by the Spanish Tribunals | 153 |
| 247 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | On subject of the alleged misconduct of certain seamen belonging to Her Majesty's ship "Royal Alfred," in the caves of Bellarmar, near Matanzas, in Cuba. Inquiry by Admiral Inglefield is satisfactory, that the men were not to blame | 153 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 248 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 29, 1872 | As to the will of the late Miss Perry. Adhere to former opinion that no Diplomatic or Consular Agent can take possession of property left by will according to the law of Spain | 154 |
| 249 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 1, | As to instructions to be given to Her Majesty's Consul-General at Havana in case any Cuban insurgent should arrive on board an English mail-steamer and an application be made for his arrest | 154 |
| 250 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 9, | Further respecting the detention at Jamaica of the American vessel "Edgar Stewart," suspected of aiding the Cuban insurgents. No justification for her detention, and the conduct of the Governor of Jamaica in releasing her should be approved. Her subsequent capture and escape of some of her crew does not alter their opinion already expressed | 154 |
| 251 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 9, | Further relative to the case of the "Edgar Stewart." Points raised by Sir Peter Grant, Governor of Jamaica, as to the interpretation of certain provisions in the Foreign Enlistment Act | 155 |
| 252 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 23, | As to the complaint of Messrs. Loney, owners of the "Anne Lucy," against the Spanish Customs authorities at Iloilo, and question of British rights under the Treaties as applying to the Spanish Colonies. Her Majesty's Government would be justified in making a strong remonstrance to Spanish Government on the act of its officers, and should claim compensation. Conduct of Mr. Higgin should be explained | 156 |
| 253 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | Aug. 26, | As to the steps to be taken on the case of the "Steady," alleged to have been purchased at Liverpool for the Cuban insurgents. No sufficient reason for seizing or detaining her. Not expedient to try the question before the Court as to "reasonable cause of detention" of a vessel | 156 |
| 254 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Sept. 28, | As to an outrage committed on Mr. Townsend by a party of natives at Fernando Po, which arose out of a debt due to him, and his having taken two slaves of the debtor's as security. His conduct entirely illegal if the statement of Mr. Thormählen can be credited | 157 |
| 255 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 4, | As to the right of Her Majesty's Government to prevent Spanish revenue vessels from coming within territorial waters of Gibraltar, and in taking measures to prevent the capture of vessels by Spanish revenue vessels within the territorial limits; and their right to seize and detain Spanish guarda-costas and imprison the crews in the event of violation of British territory | 157 |
| 256 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 31, | Instructions to be given to Sir A. Kennedy, Governor of Hong Kong, relative to a duel fought there, between Don Leon Checa the Spanish Consul, and Señor F. Torre Bueno, late Peruvian Consul at Macao, while M. Chas. de la Forest, Acting French Consul at Hong Kong, was present | 158 |
| 257 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 2, | As to claim on Spanish Government of M. Manuel Francisco Carriso for compensation on seizure and detention of his vessel "Algerie" by a Spanish revenue cruizer. Cannot advise the claim to be supported. He should apply to his own Government to assist him | 158 |
| 258 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 9, | Further relative to the British vessel "Anne Lucy" and the imprisonment of the crew in the Philippine Islands. They are entitled to compensation on account of their imprisonment | 159 |
| 259 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 19, | As to the desire of Miss Jane Beecroft for the re-grant of certain property belonging to her late father, but which was forfeited on account of non-fulfilment of the conditions. She should state what steps she has taken in the matter with the Spanish Government | 159 |

| 260 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 29, 1872 | Request of Mr. A. F. Forrest for intervention of Her Majesty's Government on the robbery committed on himself and two sons by a supposed Carlist band between Gerona and Perpignan, to be submitted to the favourable consideration of the Spanish Government | 160 |
| 261 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 12 | Her Majesty's Government may properly support the claim of Mr. M. Carrera for detention of his vessel the "Algerie" against the Spanish Government, as he is a British subject. | 160 |
| 262 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 13, | Further relative to the claim of Miss Jane Beecroft on the Spanish Government as to her property in Fernando Po. Her Majesty's Government should not support this claim | 160 |
| 263 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | As to the fine inflicted by Spanish authorities at Corunna on the British vessel "Erl King." Her Majesty's Government cannot urge anything further against the decision of the Spanish Government | 161 |
| 264 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | Further relative to the claim ot Mr. A. F. Forrest for losses by robbery by Carlists. The Spanish Government cannot be internationally responsible for the robbery committed on Mr. Forrest while travelling in Spain | 161 |

| 265 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | May 17, 1872 | As to the position of the English Church at Geneva, which was built for British subjects with British funds, while the Council of State there had admitted the right of non-British residents. Her Majesty's Government should not interfere in the dispute | 162 |
| 266 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 25, | The marriage of Mr. Ellenberger at Her Majesty's Mission at Berne is valid within Her Majesty's dominions, notwithstanding his false statement as to his age. Circular to Her Majesty's Representatives abroad sufficient; but suggests the law might be altered with respect to cases where both parties are British subjects, and leaving the case of mixed marriages to the lex loci | 163 |

TUNIS.

| 267 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | May 24, 1872 | On draft of the proposed new Treaty with the Bey of Tunis | 163 |
| 268 | Law Officers | Feb. 27, | As to the trial of Vincenzo Chircop, at Malta, for the murder of a Tunisian subject, and the suggestion of Consul-General Wood for alteration of the law. Difficulties in carrying out such a proposal. Suggests that the jurisdiction of the Maltese Courts with respect to Tunis might be removed to the Supreme Court at Gibraltar | 164 |
| 269 | Law Officers | Mar. 6, | What steps should be taken by Her Majesty's Government on the proposal of the Bey of Tunis for the establishment of Mixed Tribunals for deciding civil and commercial suits between natives and foreigners, the French Government having agreed to it. Her Majesty's Government might approve the principle | 164 |
| 270 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | May 7, | Further as to the transfer of the jurisdiction of the Maltese Courts to Gibraltar in criminal cases arising within the Regency of Tunis. Remarks on opinion of Sir P. Francis and views of Mr. Wood | 165 |
| 271 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 27, | As to the draft reply to Consul-General Wood on the question of the jurisdiction to be exercised over foreigners in Tunis relative to concessions granted to them by the Bey | 166 |
| 272 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 16, | Further relative to the case of the murder of a Tunisian by a Maltese named Vincenzo Chircop, and the expediency of having him tried at Gibraltar, instead of Malta. Discussion as to the jurisdiction of the Bey over British subjects in criminal matters | 166 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 273 | Queen's Advocate | Jan. 25, 1872 | Claim of Messrs. Ward and Rivolta on the Roumanian Government. As the caution-money was promised to be returned by Prince Couza, and which promise was renewed by the Ministers of the Prince, authority might be given to Mr. Green to support this claim and induce the Roumanian Government to fulfil the promise in favour of Mr. Rivolta | 167 |
| 274 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 24, | As to the complaints against certain Regulations of the Turkish Government relative to the export of silk cocoons. New Regulations would interfere with those intended to be guarded against by abolishing permits under Article II of Treaty of the 29th April, 1861 | 168 |
| 275 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 11, | Reply that should be given to the Council of Bondholders on the subject of the régie established by the Ottoman Government on the tobacco tax, the proceeds of which had been previously assigned by the Ottoman Government to the Loan of 1862 | 168 |
| 276 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | Apr. 8, | There does not appear to be any objection to the new Civil, Correctional, and Criminal Tribunals to be established at Constantinople. Foreigners not placed in a worse position than they were before | 168 |
| 277 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | 17, | As to the proposed alterations to be made in regard to certain fees levied at Her Majesty's Consulate-General at Constantinople. Firman fees, and Harbour-masters' fees, not received on account of Her Majesty's Government, should be stated in the Order in Council | 169 |
| 278 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 7, | Order in Council of the 22nd April last on fees to be charged for ships' Firmans | 169 |
| 279 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 4, | On complaint of certain barristers and attorneys practising at Constantinople against permission given to unprofessional advocates to conduct cases in the Supreme Court, and request for the Rules to be altered. If they were correct, Sir P. Francis should be informed of the complaint | 170 |
| 280 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 25, | As to the reply that should be returned to Mr. McCoan, editor of the "Levant Herald," on the suppression of that paper by the Porte | 170 |
| 281 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. 2, | Further as to the law for the establishment of the new Turkish Tribunals. No observations necessary on the Appendix to the law received by Her Majesty's Government from Server Pasha | 171 |
| 282 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 9, | Further relative to the suppression of the "Levant Herald" by the Porte. Mr. McCoan's application should not be reconsidered | 171 |
| 283 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Sept. 20, | The Lemberg-Jassy Railway Company in Roumania. Intervention of Her Majesty's Government cannot be exercised in favour of British subjects who have contracted with the Austrian Company, and who may have, by the finding of a jury, to pay large sums as compensation for the purchase of lands, but instructions may be sent to Mr. St. John to continue the line of conduct pursued by him | 171 |
| 284 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 15, | Claim of Mr. Zalzal, agent of a firm trading in England, against a Turkish subject named Wehbé Turk, and suggestion for the withdrawal of British protection to Mr. Zalzal when the case is settled. Agents to British firms are entitled to British protection. Agree with views of Sir P. Francis on this subject | 172 |
| 285 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 29, | As to the course to be pursued by Her Majesty's Government with regard to the arrest of Feroz Shah, son of the King of Delhi, who was engaged in the Indian mutiny, and who is at Constantinople | 173 |
| 286 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 4, 1872 | Marriages abroad. As to the application of the Consular Marriage Act to Maltese, and Colonial British subjects generally. Valid marriages may be obtained independently of the Act, either by the lex loci, or other laws affecting the parties | 173 |
| 287 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 30, | On application from the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India for instructions to be sent to Her Majesty's Consul at Damascus, to stop Joseph Joshua from leaving that city or selling his property there, pending legal proceedings in the Consular Court. Her Majesty's Government cannot give them the assistance asked for | 174 |
| 288 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 6, | As to the dispute between the North of England Steam-ship Owners Association, and the Turkish Government, relative to the payment of a share of the expenses on account of the grounding of the "Otterburn." Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere until Mr. Welford, on the part of the Company, proceeds against the charterers | 174 |
| 289 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 14, | As to the right of British subjects to take part in the coasting trade of Turkey. Her Majesty's Government may insist on the right of British ships to the coasting trade within the Ottoman dominions as regards both goods and passengers, but the Bosphorus is part of the port of Constantinople, and the navigation within its limits may be restricted according to the wishes of the Turkish Government | 174 |
| 290 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 16, | Slave Traffic between the North Coast of Africa and Constantinople through Malta. The views of Sir P. Francis and Sir C. Straubenzee are both correct | 175 |
| 291 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 23, | Further relative to the desire of the North of England Steam-ship Owners Association for intervention of Her Majesty's Government in their dispute with the Turkish Government relative to the "Otterburn." Her Majesty's Government should not interfere | 176 |

UNITED STATES.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 292 | Law Officers | Jan. 3, 1872 | Reply to be sent to Mr. Russell Gurney on memorial presented to the Claims Commission on the case of Mr. Barclay and on the demurrer filed on the part of the United States' Government. Having acquired an American domicile, his claim may be affected by it, but he is not debarred from a locus standi before the Commission | 176 |
| 293 | Law Officers | 9, | The claim of Messrs. Leech, Harrison, and Forwoode should not be presented to the Commissioners at Washington | 177 |
| 294 | Law Officers | 20, | Claims of Messrs. Smyth and Barry and of Messrs. Irvine and Co. against the United States' Government. Reply proposed to be sent to them as to the decision of the Commissioner is proper | 177 |
| 295 | Law Officers | 25, | Further relative to the claim of Messrs. Leech, Harrison, and Forwoode against the United States' Government on account of goods destroyed by the Federal troops. They should furnish more particulars of the destruction of their cotton goods, before their claims can be recommended to the United States' Government | 177 |
| 296 | Law Officers | Feb. 17, | As to Bills to be presented to Parliament giving effect to Treaties with United States and Portugal for the abolition of the Slave Trade Mixed Commission Courts, and observations of Mr. Jenkyns on the incorrect use of the term "maritime prize." The Bill with regard to Portugal may be presented, but have made alterations in draft of Bill to Parliament, relative to the United States | 178 |

1872

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 297 | Law Officers | Feb. 17, 1872 | Claim of Mr. Hansard against the United States' Government on account of the destruction of his cotton by the Federal forces in 1865, which he had purchased in partnership with Mr. Hughes, of Georgia, and for the seizure of forty-six bales of his own by a special Agent of the United States' Treasury. Must not present the first claim, as Mr. Hughes had a joint interest; and with regard to the later claim, further details must be given | 179 |
| 298 | Law Officers | 23, | Claim of Mrs. Cassin on the United States' Government. Note of Mr. Seward, forwarded by Sir E. Thornton, on the subject, may be communicated to Messrs. Ellman, Raper, and Ellman | 179 |
| 299 | Law Officers | Mar. 4, | Claims Commission. On the Report of the Commissioners of Claims under the Act of Congress of the 3rd March, 1871, as regards the presentation of claims of foreigners domiciled in the United States during civil war, on account of supplies taken for United States' army. Such parties have an equitable claim, as granted to loyal citizens of the country | 180 |
| 300 | Law Officers | 11, | Further respecting the claims of Messrs. Leech, Harrison, and Forwoode against United States' Government for destruction of their cotton goods by Agents of the Government. Cannot recommend the claim for support of Her Majesty's Government | 180 |
| 301 | Law Officers | 18, | As to the claim of Mr. Trenchard on account of the seizure of his vessel, the "Nutfield," at Charleston, by Federal forces. Her Majesty's Consul at Charleston should institute inquiry | 181 |
| 302 | Law Officers | 19, | Claims Commission. Instructions should be sent to Mr. Howard not to present the claim of Messrs. Hayman, of Liverpool | 181 |
| 303 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | 20, | Claims Commission. As to the interpretation to be put on the XIVth Article of the Treaty of Washington, with respect to extension of time for presentation of claims. The practice of the Commission of 1853 to form the precedent | 182 |
| 304 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | Apr. 4, 1872 | As to the claim of Mr. Stewart against the United States' Government. No reason to alter opinion already given on his case | 183 |
| 305 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | 19, | Further relative to claim of Mr. Stewart against the United States' Government. May inform him that Her Majesty's Government decline to interfere with arguments in support of the claim, or in the course he may pursue in the Courts of Law | 183 |
| 306 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | 19, | As to the claim of Mr. J. M. Vernon against the United States. Would not advise Her Majesty's Government further to press that Government to release Mr. Vernon formally from the pledges he has given | 184 |
| 307 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | 27, | Further respecting Mr. Hansard's second claim against the United States' Government. Her Majesty's Government might instruct Sir E. Thornton to support this claim, so as to induce the United States' Government to provide for payment of it | 184 |
| 308 | Attorney-and Solicitor-General | 27, | As to the instructions that should be sent to Sir E. Thornton relative to the claim of Mr. McLeod on account of the detention of the "Mary Agnes." The vessel was seized for breach of the revenue laws | 185 |
| 309 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | 27, | No reason to alter views on subject of the claim of Mr. Vernon already given. He cannot reasonably expect to be released from pledges which he has given the United States' Government not to return to the United States | 185 |
| 310 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | 27, | As to the claim of the owners of the British vessel "Sarah M. Newhall" against the United States' Government. They have no right to expect Her Majesty's Government to obtain for them what they could have obtained by their own endeavours in the ordinary course of law | 185 |
| 311 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | Apr. 30, 1872 | Further relative to the claim of Mr. Vernon. No reason to modify their opinion already given on his case | 186 |
| 312 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | May 10, | On the request of Messrs. Bateson, Robinson, and Co. for interference of Her Majesty's Government in the claim of Messrs. Shand, Higson, and Co. against the United States' Government. May present the claim to the favourable consideration of the United States' Government; but Her Majesty's Government are not called on to interfere in favour of the assignees when injured parties have long remained quiescent | 186 |
| 313 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | 23, | Further respecting the claim of Mr. Stewart against the United States' Government. Should inform him that the proposed terms for compromising his claim cannot be acceded to, but if he wishes to withdraw his claim, his request would be complied with | 187 |
| 314 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 27, | Further respecting the claim of Mr. Trenchard against the United States' Government for seizure of his vessel, the "Nutfield." In consequence of misstatements, Her Majesty's Government should decline to press the claim | 187 |
| 315 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 28, | Claims Commission. By the XIIth Article of the Treaty of Washington, the Commissioners are required to meet at Washington as soon as they were named, and they cannot meet at any other place or give any decision without it being open to discussion | 187 |
| 316 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 3, | Claims Commission. As to the instructions to be sent to Mr. Howard on the Report of Mr. Carlisle relative to the adjournment of the Claims Commission to Newport. He should protest against any award being made by the Commissioners in any other place but Washington | 188 |
| 317 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 5, | Further respecting the claim of Messrs. Shand, Higson, and Co., and the denial of Messrs. Bateson and Co. that the claimants had remained quiescent. They should produce evidence of the truth of their statement | 188 |
| 318 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 10, | Claims Commission. On question raised whether the owners of the "Napier," which had been condemned by an American Prize Court, could bring their claim before the Commission. To wait for the decision of the Commissioner on the memorial of Mr. Ryerson | 189 |
| 319 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 10, | Claims Commission. On letter of Messrs. Kelly, Keene, and Roper, with memorial of Mr. Edward Thompson, in support of the claim of Mr. Southall against the United States' Government refused to be presented by Mr. Howard. They should be informed that Mr. Howard followed the decision given in a similar case | 189 |
| 320 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 11, | Claims Commission. As to eighteen claims filed against Her Majesty's Government, and forwarded by Mr. Howard. No observation to make on the subject | 190 |
| 321 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 20, | Claims Commission. As to claim of Mr. William W. Hubbell against Great Britain. Objections taken in Mr. Carlisle's demurrer are rightly made. No further observations thereon | 190 |
| 322 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 1, | Claims Commission. On complaint of Mr. Isaac Parr against Mr. Howard's refusal to present his memorial and that of William Parr and Elizabeth Luck. He should be informed that Mr. Howard was right. Before interference can be granted further evidence must be given of their losses | 190 |
| 323 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 4, | Further relative to the claim of Mr. Stewart, who complains of certain portions of his claim being omitted from his memorial. Should refer him to letter to him of the 30th January, 1872 | 191 |

1872

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 324 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | July 6, 1872 | Claims Commission. On letter from Mr. Russell Gurney wishing to know if there was any objection to the proposed adjournment of the Commission to Newport, provided the awards were made at Washington. Informal meetings may take place there, but all formal meetings should take place at Washington | 191 |
| 325 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 10, | Further relative to the claim of Messrs. Shand and Higson against the United States' Government. The evidence now produced by Messrs. Robinson and Co. would warrant the interference of Her Majesty's Government in their behalf | 192 |
| 326 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 22, | Further relative to the claim of Mr. Stewart. No compensation should be granted to him by Her Majesty's Government, on the withdrawal of his claim against the United States' Government | 192 |
| 327 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 30, | On request of Mr. John Chapple for the assistance of Her Majesty's Government to obtain the distribution of the property left by the late George Thomas Chapple in the State of Virginia, to his next of kin. He should seek redress in the proper Courts in America | 192 |
| 328 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Aug. , | Claims Commission. As to the meeting of the Commission at Newport. No objection to their meeting there for the purpose of adjourning and fixing the next meeting. Mr. Howard should not protest or take action until they have met | 193 |
| 329 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 26, | Claim of Mrs. Mary Cassin. As to the reply to be given to Messrs. Ellman, Raper, and Co. Must see the evidence on the subject before application can be made in her favour | 193 |
| 330 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Sept. 2, | On the subject of placards being posted up near the London and St. Katherine's Docks, encouraging British subjects to serve on board the United States' vessel "Wabash." The attention of the American Minister in this country might be called to the notice | 194 |
| 331 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 19, | Approves instructions to Sir E. Thornton relative to the abduction of Dr. R. Bratton from Canadian territory | 194 |
| 332 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 23, | As to the treatment of the British vessel "Grace" by the local authorities of Darien, United States. Compensation should be made by United States to the parties, on account of the irregular proceedings of the Court which tried the case | 194 |
| 333 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 30, | Claims Commission. Further as to the meeting of the Commissioners, and the validity of the awards under the Treaty of Washington. Exchange of notes between the two Governments as to place of meeting may be agreed to | 195 |
| 334 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Oct. 14, | As to claim of Mr. Goddard for flour burnt on board the "Brilliant" by the "Alabama." This claim cannot be admitted | 195 |
| 335 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 14, | As to the claim of the Hawaiian Government on account of the seizure and destruction of their vessel the "Harvest" by the "Shenandoah," and reply to be sent to Mr. Manley Hopkins. No neutral has any right to complain of another neutral for furnishing munitions of war to a belligerent | 196 |
| 336 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 28, | On letter from Mr. W. Carsons, claiming, on behalf of Messrs. Shaw and Finlay, compensation for the destruction of some Indian corn and lard on board the "La Fayette" by the "Alabama." This claim cannot be enforced | 196 |
| 337 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 2, | On claim of Messrs. Hamilton, Megan, and Thompson for the destruction of grain on board the "La Fayette" by the "Alabama." Her Majesty's Government should not entertain the claim | 197 |
| 338 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 20, | As to the reply to be given to Mr. McFeely on his complaint that the Washington Commission have rejected his claim and request for aid to have his case reopened. It should be refused | 197 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 339 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Dec. 6, 1872 | As to the liability of Her Majesty's Government to compensate British subjects and others for destruction of their property by the "Alabama" and similar vessels. The liability rests with the country under whose flag the "Alabama" was sailing | 197 |
| 340 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 12, | Further relative to the claim of Messrs. Shand, Higson, and Co. against the United States' Government, and reply of that Government to the representation of Sir E. Thornton. If Messrs. Johnson had no interest in the cotton destroyed, Messrs. Shand, their assignees, cannot be supported. Must have the papers before further reply is sent | 198 |
| 341 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 16, | Claims Commission. On subject of the correspondence relative to the testimony of Sir George Cartier to rebut statements made in two memorials from citizens of the United States presented to the Commission. Approve Mr. Howard's suggestion that the evidence of Sir George Cartier should be taken before the American Consul-General in London, and that Dr. Deane would be the proper person to take charge of the case | 198 |
| 342 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | 17, | As to the claim of Dr. Tumblety against the United States' Government for his arrest and imprisonment on two occasions in 1865. He may be informed that his case will be brought to the consideration of the United States' Government, but that he had better wait for the result of the inquiry by the Commission on his first arrest, before he brings forward that of the second | 199 |

VENEZUELA.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 343 | Queen's Advocate | Feb. 10, 1872 | As to the outrages on British subjects by General Pulgar, President of the State of Zulia, and steps to be taken on refusal of the Government of Venezuela to dismiss him from his Governorship | 200 |
| 344 | Queen's Advocate | Mar. 4, | Claim of Mr. Pierre Sora against the Government of Venezuela for losses by proceedings of the party in arms against the present Government. He is not entitled, as a British subject, to any other protection for his landed property than is granted by the Venezuelan Government to native subjects | 200 |
| 345 | Queen's Advocate | 9, | Her Majesty's Government are not called upon to interfere further in the proceedings of the Venezuelan authorities towards Evaniste E. Abbott, a British subject, seized for a soldier while working on an estate near Petaré | 201 |
| 346 | Queen's Advocate | 11, | American claims on the Venezuelan Government, and draft reply from Sir E. Thornton, Her Majesty's Minister at Washington, on the steps taken by the United States' Government to obtain a settlement of them, as well as letter from Mr. Eastwick, the representative of British bondholders, show these claims to be international. The case of the seizure of the American steamers, as set forth in the "Daily Patriot," cannot be considered as an international claim | 201 |
| 347 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | June 3, | As to the seizure by the Colonial authorities at Trinidad of the vessel "Violet," on suspicion of conveying arms to Venezuela. Approves instructions of Lord Kimberley to Governors of British Guiana and Grenada relative to the export of arms. If the conduct of the Venezuelan Consul-General on trial proves to be illegal, his removal from office should be demanded | 201 |
| 348 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Sept. 6, | Further relative to the outrages committed against British subjects (Mr. Jos. Harris, and Mr. O'Connor), by General Pulgar, President of Zulia, and his brother, Rafael Pulgar. The demand for the dismissal of General Pulgar should not be further pressed, as Mr. Harris was illegitimate and not a British subject. Children born out of wedlock take their nationality from their mother, even though subsequently recognized by the father | 202 |

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 349 | Law Officers and Dr. Deane | Nov. 12, 1872 | As to the arrest and imprisonment of Mr. Luciano Agostini, a British subject at Caracas, for refusal to supply a baggage-horse for the public service. As Mr. Agostini denies having received due notice, and having committed disrespectful conduct to the authorities, instructions should be sent to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to demand apology and compensation, but 3,000*l*. asked for by the claimant, is unreasonable | 203 |

ZANZIBAR.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 350 | Attorney- and Solicitor-General | Apr. 18, 1872 | As to conduct of the Commander of Her Majesty's ship "Columbine" on capture of a slave dhow on the African Coast. Her Majesty's cruizers are entitled to compel the liberation of slaves and surrender of resisting crews on the African Coast, where the Sultan's authority is only nominal. | 204 |

No. 1.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received January 16.)

Temple, January 15, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the draft of an Order in Council which has been prepared at the Foreign Office providing for the regulation of Consular jurisdiction in certain territories on the West Coast of Africa. That the necessity for conferring magisterial powers upon Her Majesty's Consul has arisen in consequence of a decision of the Chief Justice of Cape Coast Castle, which was confirmed by our Report of the 12th July, 1870, that the constitution of the Local Courts of Equity, which had hitherto exercised jurisdiction to a limited extent over British subjects within those territories, could not be considered as legal. That an explanatory memorandum accompanies the draft Order indicating the points upon which differences of opinion exist, together with letters from the Consul, the Colonial Office, and the Board of Trade, conveying their views upon the proposed Order, and suggesting amendments, some of which have been embodied in the paper now sent to us.

Lord Enfield was pleased to request that we would take the draft Order in Council into our consideration, together with the papers that accompany it, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion whether it can be passed in its present shape, or, if not, that we would make such alterations or modifications as after careful consideration may appear to us advisable.

A draft of the proposed Rules and Regulations providing for the due execution of the Order in the Consular Court, as prepared by the Consul, was also inclosed for sanction or alteration if necessary.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have made one or two alterations in the text of the Order which we have initialed.

With regard to the Order generally we beg to offer, for your Lordship's consideration, the following observations. The Order does not contain any provision for the procedure of the Courts of Equity, and we suggest that additional power should be given to the Consul in the 24th section to enable him to settle such procedure. The powers granted to the Consul in section 9 by the words, "or such other punishment as he may deem advisable," appear to us to be too large.

The words suggested to be added in section 19, "by Her Majesty's Consul," seem to us to be open to question; we should have thought that the words "by the said Chief or Chiefs" would be more appropriate.

In section 21 it is provided that a minute of the proceedings in every case before a Court of Equity shall be signed by the Consul. If this is for the purpose of authenticating the proceedings, the provision will be inappropriate, as the Consul, as far as we understand the Order, will not be necessarily present at the sittings of those Courts.

We think that section 26 may be useful, and should be retained.

We have, &c.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received February 12.)

Temple, February 12, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 6th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 15th ultimo, therewith returned to us, stating our opinion upon the proposed Order in Council for the regulation of Consular jurisdiction in certain territories on the West Coast of Africa, he was directed by your Lordship to inform us that the following alterations had been made in the Order in accordance with our suggestions:—

1. Section 9. That the words, "or such other punishment as he may deem advisable," were struck out.

2. Section 19. That our suggestion that the penalty attaching to the importation of prohibited goods should apply to goods prohibited "by the said Chief or Chiefs," and not "by Her Majesty's Consul," would not quite meet the nature of the abuse that that Article was intended to prevent.

That it might often happen, in the case of native wars, that to prevent as far as possible the war from spreading it might be necessary for Her Majesty's Consul to prohibit the importation of arms or of warlike stores into a certain district, although the native Chiefs might be anxious to obtain them. The section had, therefore, been amended by the substitution of the words, "by the said Chief or Chiefs, or by Her Majesty's Consul," for "by Her Majesty's Consul" alone.

That our observations upon the wording of section 21 were met by the addition that we would now find in that Article. Although it was not necessary that the Consul should be present at all the sittings of the Courts of Equity, a record of the proceedings must in all cases be sent to him for sanction and signature before they could be valid.

That the further provision that we suggested for the procedure of the Courts of Equity had been added to section 24, and section 26 had been retained in accordance with our advice.

That he was to request our final opinion upon the draft Order as thus amended. That he was at the same time to call our attention to the inclosed despatch from the Governor of Sierra Leone, representing the danger to Europeans of imprisonment for any term beyond a few days in any jail on the West African Coast, and the propriety of giving the Consul further powers to deal with ships infected with contagious disease, and that he was to inquire whether, in our opinion, the draft Order would require any further alterations in those respects, and, if so, that we would indicate them.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we approve of the Order in Council as now settled, except that we think, having regard to the letter of Sir A. Kennedy, the term of imprisonment should in all cases be reduced to a period not exceeding twenty-one days. With respect to the suggestion of Consul Livingstone as to vessels infected with contagious diseases, however desirable it may be to confer such powers on the Consul as he suggests, we fear that in the present state of the law this cannot be done without the authority of Parliament.

We have, &c.

Temple, August 21, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, with its inclosures, from Messrs. Cummins and Marten, complaining of the proceedings of the Liberian Government in forcibly seizing a boat and cargo belonging to them, and requesting the intervention of Her Majesty's Government in obtaining the restitution of their property; and that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request that we would take this matter into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the Liberian authorities were not justified in seizing and detaining a boat the property of Messrs. Cummins and Marten for an offence alleged to have been committed by the master of one of their ships, but beyond the scope of his authority as their agent, and we are of opinion that the case is one in which Her Majesty's Government may properly intervene in obtaining for Messrs. Cummins and Marten the restitution of their property.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 13th instant, stating, with reference to our Report of the 12th February, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us despatches from Her Majesty's Consul at Old Calabar (Nos. 8 and 9 of the 29th April and 1st May), inclosing the proposed Rules and Regulations under the Order in Council of the 21st February, relating to Consular jurisdiction and Courts of Equity on the West Coast of Africa; and he (Lord Enfield) was to request us to take the two sets of Rules into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether they were right and proper, and that we would suggest any amendments which we might think desirable.

Lord Enfield was pleased to inclose copies of the Order in Council and of the Rules of the Zanzibar Consular Court referred to by Mr. Livingstone.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the two sets of Rules may be properly allowed by your Lordship with the alterations which we have made.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received January 24.)

Temple, January 22, 1872.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 11th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 9th October last on the claim of the River Plate Telegraph Company upon the Uruguayan Government, he was directed to transmit to me, together with the former papers, a further despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres, forwarding the additional information with regard to this case which, at my suggestion, he had been instructed to supply; and Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would again take the matter into my consideration, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the nature of the communication which should now be made to the Telegraph Company.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That this case is very anomalous; and I am imperfectly informed as to the state of affairs at Monte Video—whether the city was under military law or not, the administration of the police of the city being evidently in the hands of the Military Commander, and whether there was a state of civil war or not, the city of Monte Video being apparently besieged by the insurrectionary forces, and in danger of capture. The complaint of the River Plate Telegraph Company resolves itself under two heads—(1) damage done to its property; (2) interference with the personal liberty of its agent, Mr. Oldham. The latter gentleman seems to consider himself entitled to take his stand against the Monte Videan Government upon the terms of the concession to the Company, notwithstanding the disturbance of political order in the Republic, whether by an insurrection or a civil war. I am not prepared to advise your Lordship that the state of affairs at Monte Video may not have been such that the Company would not be entitled to continue the working of its wires except under conditions which the Monte Videan Government might deem essential to the safety of the State, viz., amongst others, that there should be no secrecy as against the Agents of the Government who might desire to inspect any telegraphic message; but it would have been proper, in my opinion, under such circumstances, that the Government should have notified to the Company the suspension of the normal working of the telegraph before they claimed to inspect any particular message. So far, I think the conduct of the Monte Videan Government towards Mr. Oldham was abrupt and arbitrary; but as he was forthwith released from imprisonment, on the representation of Her Majesty's Consul-General, there is no ground, in my opinion, for further remonstrance on that head.

With regard to the injury done to the property of the Company, it resolves itself under three heads:—

(1.) Damage done to the wires by the rebels.
(2.) Damage done by the Government troops.
(3.) Requisitions of horses, &c., from the agent of the Company.

1. With regard to the first head, I am of opinion that the Government of Monte Video cannot be answerable for injuries caused by the acts of insurgents, which they were powerless to control.

2. With regard to the second head, the Company cannot claim to be in a better position than the loyal citizens of Monte Video, and they must represent their losses to the Government through the same legal channel as native citizens would be required to use.

3. With regard to the third head, unless there is some Treaty engagement under which British subjects are expressly exempt from military requisitions, I am of opinion that the agent of the Company should claim compensation through the same channel as native citizens would be required to have recourse to. But before Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires is instructed to raise any question of breach of Treaty engagements, it would be advisable that the Company's agent should give in an accurate statement of the circumstances under which the Government took possession of the horses of its agent —whether they were claimed for military purposes or for the general uses of the Government.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received February 29.)

My Lord, Temple, February 29, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 26th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying correspondence upon the subject of a massacre which has lately been committed by Gauchos at Tandil, in the Province of Buenos Ayres, and in which three British subjects, Mr. and Mrs. Gibson Smith and their assistant, William Stirling, lost their lives; and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to whether the Argentine Government is justly liable for damage done on the occasion in question to the property of British subjects.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That the question submitted to me appears to resolve itself under two heads, and upon the present information before me, I am of opinion that a distinction must be made between injuries inflicted upon British subjects by tumultuous Gauchos, whom I take to be subjects of the Argentine State, and injuries inflicted upon British subjects by Indians crossing the frontier, and making hostile incursions into the Argentine territory. In the former case, where there has been default on the part of the local authorities in affording to British subjects due protection, I am of opinion that your Lordship would be justified in claiming for such British subjects compensation for their losses, but in the latter case I think no such claim for compensation can rightfully be made against the Argentine Government.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received March 15.)

My Lord, Temple, March 13, 1872.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 5th instant, stating that, with reference to my Report of the 29th ultimo upon the question of the liability of the Argentine Government for damage done to the property of British subjects in that Republic, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying further despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres, inclosing copies of a correspondence with the Argentine Minister for Foreign Affairs upon the subject; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that I would take this despatch into my consideration, and inform your Lordship whether there is anything in Señor Tejada's note of the 22nd January which would induce me to alter the opinion expressed in my above-mentioned Report. The previous papers were also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That if this question involved only the destruction of property and the owners of it were still living, there would be much force in the reasoning of Señor Tejada, that the sufferers ought to have addressed themselves directly to the authorities of the country, and invoked the legal remedies open to them equally as to citizens of the country. But where the parties are dead no such proceedings are available. I have, in my previous Report, qualified the claim for compensation which your Lordship would be justified in addressing to the Argentine Government to the case in which there has been default on the part of the local authorities in affording due protection to British subjects. If there has been no such default no claim could justly be made, however terrible the calamitous result may have been of the rising of the Gauchos.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received July 27.)

My Lord, Temple, July 27, 1872.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 19th instant, stating that, upon receipt of our Report dated the 9th October last (inclosed), your Lordship addressed to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres a despatch (draft inclosed), instructing him to make a representation to the Argentine Government relative to the claim of Mr. Williams.*

That he (Mr. Hammond) was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches from Mr. Macdonell and a letter from Mr. Williams, from which we would learn what had passed upon the subject since the date of the above-mentioned Report;† and he was to request us to take the papers into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps which should be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the note of Dr. Tejedor to Mr. Macdonell states that he has personally examined the whole process in the suit of Mr. Williams.

That the result of that examination satisfies Dr. Tejedor that, on the facts and on the plea of prescription, the judgments of the Argentine Tribunals are right.

Dr. Tejedor further says that Mr. Williams had remedies by appeal open to him, of which he was not chosen to avail himself.

* To Mr. Macdonell, No. 54, October 16, 1871.
† Mr. Macdonell, Nos. 30 and 39; Mr. Williams, May 31.

1872

And Dr. Tejedor refers to the general principle that if the forms of trial established by the law of the country be observed and the Tribunal be competent, no foreign Power can rightfully or with effect complain of the result of the trial affirming that such was the case in Mr. Williams' suit.

We are of opinion that this note of Dr. Tejedor cannot be replied to, unless your Lordship sees, which we do not, reason to doubt the truth of the statements therein made and the soundness of the inferences drawn from those statements.

Should your Lordship adopt our opinion, Mr. Macdonell might be directed to inform Dr. Tejedor that Her Majesty's Government accepts his explanation of the facts.

And Mr. Williams may be told that, on inquiring fully into the facts, the explanation of the Argentine Government is such that your Lordship cannot urge the matter farther.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received December 13.)

Temple, December 12, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. Mackenzie, inclosing a statement of the losses sustained by the San Guillermo Company at Entre Rios, River Plate, during the civil war.

That the claims arose out of military requisitions for horses, cattle, &c., both made by the Government and rebel troops; the Company referred to the Treaty of the 2nd February, 1825, by which British subjects were exempted from all military exactions and requisitions, and they pointed out that the proofs required by the Argentine Government were precisely those which the conduct of their officers rendered it impossible to produce.

And that he (Mr. Hammond) was to request us to take the papers into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres with respect to the claims.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that the claims of the Company for compensation arising out of military requisitions come within and are well founded upon the IXth Article of the Treaty of 1825.

That Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres may properly be instructed to urge these claims upon the Argentine Government, and that since it is not possible from the circumstances of the case to give the evidence which the Argentine Government requires, that Government should accept the best (provided it be reliable and trsutworthy) evidence by which each claim may supported.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 17th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would inform your Lordship whether our Report of the 12th instant, upon the claims of the San Guillermo Company against the Argentine Confederation was intended to lay down that that Government was responsible for the military requisitions made by the rebel troops as well as for those made by the Government troops.

That, should that be the meaning of our Report, your Lordship would be obliged by our furnishing you with the arguments on which the demand for compensation should be founded.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, the claims of the Company being based upon the Treaty, the Argentine Government is responsible only in respect of military requisitions made by Government troops.

The Queen's Advocate to Earl Granville.—(Received January 16.)

Temple, January 15, 1872.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letters of the 10th and 13th instant, stating that he was directed to request my attention to the inclosed letter from Mr. Payne, a solicitor, inclosing papers respecting a collision which took place on the 24th August last, in Dover Bay, between the Belgian mail-steamer "Belgique" and a British schooner called the "William and Jane," which resulted in the loss of the latter vessel with all hands. That the representatives of the owner and master, who was drowned, and of the crew, have attempted to take proceedings against the "Belgique" in the High Court of Admiralty, and indeed procured a warrant for her arrest, but that this warrant was cancelled, and the proceedings stopped in consequence of its being shown that the vessel, as a mail-steamer in the service of the Belgian Government, could not legally be detained.

That it is now suggested that the representations should be made officially to the Belgian Government, either directly demanding from them compensation, or requesting their consent to allowing the matter to be adjudicated upon by the British High Court of Admiralty; and Lord Enfield was pleased to request that I would furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to what course it would be proper to adopt with regard to this suggestion.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That as the collision in this case took place within British waters, and the Belgian vessel has since the collision come voluntarily within British jurisdiction, the exercise of which on the part of the Crown has been waived in accordance with the usual comity, I am of opinion that your Lordship may properly communicate the complaint of the owners of the "William and Jane" directly to the Belgian Minister in London, and propose to him, that in accordance with the modern practice now of some standing, a statement on both sides shall be submitted to the Judge of the High Court of Admiralty for his friendly arbitration.

I would observe that, from the examination taken before the Receiver of Wreck, it is by no means so clear as the solicitor of the owner supposes in his memorial to Mr. Hammond, that the blame of the collision rests wholly with the "Belgique," as the Judge may be of opinion that the "William and Jane" had not a proper light up, the law requiring a vessel at anchor to exhibit a white light at a certain height above the hull and of certain dimensions.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Viscount Enfield's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch, with its inclosures, from the British Vice-Consul at Iquique reporting the circumstances attending the seizure of the British vessel "Morro" by Bolivian rebels; and that he (Viscount Enfield) was to request us to take these papers into consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps which should be taken by Her Majesty's Government in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into consideration and have the honour to report—

That the owner of the "Morro" is, in our opinion, entitled to compensation.

It appears that Her Majesty's Government has no diplomatic relations with the Government of Bolivia, but we see no objection to your Lordship instructing Mr. Vice-Consul Nairn to press the settlement of the case upon the Bolivian authorities, and on the failure of Mr. Nairn to obtain redress, your Lordship may direct a man-of-war to be sent to enforce compensation.

The Law Officers of the Crown to Earl Granville.—(Received January 4.)

Temple, January 3, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Hammond's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence reporting the circumstances attending the drowning in the harbour of Rio de Janeiro of two negroes, who were employed, at the time of the calamity, in conveying seven marines belonging to Her Majesty's ship "Reindeer" to their vessel. That the depositions of the marines and an account of the subsequent steps taken with regard to this matter would be found in the correspondence. Two communications which, under instructions from his Government, the Brazilian Chargé d'Affaires at this Court has addressed to your Lordship on this subject, and a letter from the Admiralty containing suggestions as to the reply which the Board consider should be returned to the Brazilian Government, were also inclosed; and Mr. Hammond was pleased to request that we would take the case into our consideration and furnish your Lordship with our opinion thereupon, and as to the answer which should be addressed to Senhor de Andrada.

Mr. Hammond was pleased to add that Mr. Cobbold's despatches Nos. 72 and 74 of the 23rd October, which are referred to in the letter to the Admiralty of the 22nd November and in the private letter to Mr. Cobbold of the 8th ultimo, have been temporarily mislaid, but that, as the subject of these despatches is stated in the abovementioned letters, it is assumed that their absence need not interfere with the consideration of the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there seem to be two questions: (1) Did British authorities improperly help the men to escape? (2) Ought the men to be sent back to be tried?

As to the first, assuming Consul Hind did communicate with the captain of the port, this question must be answered in the negative.

2nd. If the first is answered in the negative, then the second question is simply whether some British marines are to be given up to the Brazilians, because they are accused of manslaughter or murder when in Brazil. Now if there were a Treaty of Extradition they could only be delivered up on sufficient evidence of committing the crime, and we see none; and as there is (we assume) no such Treaty, then, if civilians, they could not have been sent back at all, and we think that although, being under military discipline, they could be sent back, they ought not to be so sent without evidence substantially equivalent to what would be required if there were a Treaty.

We think, therefore, a request should be made for copies of the depositions under which the committal for trial ("mise en accusation") was made, so that we may judge of the evidence before deciding about sending them back.

My Lord,

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Enfield's letter of the 15th instant, stating that, with reference to my Reports of the 25th October and 2nd November last, he was directed to transmit to me the accompanying further correspondence upon the subject of an action brought at Rio de Janeiro against the Queen Insurance Company, and the order issued by the Brazilian Court for the imprisonment of that Company's agent; and to request that I would take these papers into my consideration, together with the former ones, which were also inclosed, and furnish your Lordship with my opinion as to the steps which should be taken in the matter to which they refer.

I am also honoured with Lord Enfield's letter of the 16th instant, transmitting a further paper which has been received relative to this case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That it appears from Mr. Cobbold's account of his interview with the Brazilian Minister of Foreign Affairs, as detailed in his despatch of the 22nd December, 1871, addressed to your Lordship, that the Brazilian law allows of an appeal to a higher Tribunal against the order of imprisonment made on the 20th December, 1871, against Mr. Taylor, and that the Brazilian Minister justified his refusal to interfere with the regular action of the Brazilian Tribunals on two grounds, that the Tribunals are constitutionally independent of the Executive Government, and that a foreigner cannot expect, as regards judicial proceedings before the Brazilian Tribunals, to be placed on a different footing from a native. Reasons of this kind, on the assumption that they are urged bonâ fide, cannot well be contravened, and if an appeal is really open to Mr. Taylor, I am of opinion that he ought to exhaust all the legal means of redress at his disposal before your Lordship can properly interfere diplomatically in his behalf, on the grounds of a denial of justice to him.

Temple, February 29, 1872.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 24th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a draft of Articles which he intended to instruct Her Majesty's Minister at Rio Janeiro to propose to the Brazilian Government; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take the same into consideration and report to your Lordship our opinion thereon.

That the Article of chief practical importance was that numbered IV, relating to the administration of intestate estates, a subject which had for a long course of years given rise to heavy complaints on the part of the British community in Brazil. Before leaving Rio in 1870 Mr. Mathew had come to some understanding with the late Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs as to the terms of an Article on this subject (copy inclosed) founded on the Act 24 and 25 Vict., cap. 121, sec. 4; and that your Lordship would be glad if you could safely adopt it without alteration.

That your Lordship feared, however, that the first three lines of the proposed Article did not follow the words of the Act with sufficient accuracy, and had therefore reluctantly altered them. That your Lordship would, however, wish to have our opinion on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it would be advisable, in our opinion, that the Treaty should follow the words of the Statute.

We have suggested in the margin a few verbal alterations in it, which we submit to your Lordship's consideration.
